5    Ibid s 24(1) (s 24(1)-(4), (6), (7) amended by the Housing Act 1996 s 86(2)). As to joint applications see PARA 399 ante. The Land Charges Act 1972 (see LAND CHARGES) and the Land Registration Act 2002 (see LAND REGISTRATION) apply in relation to an order made under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as amended) as they apply in relation to an order appointing a receiver or sequestrator of land: s 24(8) (amended by the Land Registration Act 2002 s 133, Sch 11 para 20).

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the power in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as amended) to make an order appointing a manager to carry out functions includes a power (in the circumstances specified in heads (1)-(6) in the text) to make an order that the right to manage the premises is to cease to be exercisable by the RTM company; and such an order may include provision with respect to incidental and ancillary matters (including, in particular, provision about contracts to which the RTM company is a party and the prosecution of claims in respect of causes of action, whether tortious or contractual, accruing before or after the right to manage ceases to be exercisable): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 8(1), (7), (8).

6    For these purposes, 'relevant person' means a person (1) on whom a notice has been served under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 22 (as amended) (see PARA 400 ante); or (2) in the case of whom the requirement to serve such a notice has been dispensed with by an order under s 22(3) (as amended): s 24(2ZA) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 160(1), (4)(b)).

7    For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 399 note 1 ante.

8 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24(2)(a)(i) (as amended) (see note 5 supra); further amended by the Housing Act 1996 ss 85(2), (3), 227, Sch 19 Pt III; the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 160(1), (4)(a)). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the references in head (1) in the text to any obligation owed by the RTM company to the tenant under his tenancy include any obligations of the RTM company under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002: Sch 7 para 8(1), (5).

9 For the purposes of head (2) in the text, a service charge is to be taken to be unreasonable (1) if the amount is unreasonable having regard to the items for which it is payable; (2) if the items for which it is payable are of an unnecessarily high standard; or (3) if the items for which it is payable are of an insufficient standard with the result that additional service charges are or may be incurred; and 'service charge' means a service charge within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 ante), other than one excluded from s 18 (as amended) by s 27 (as amended) (rent of dwelling registered and not entered as variable: see PARA 325 ante): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24(2A) (added by the Housing Act 1996 s 85(4)).

11 For the purposes of head (3) in the text, 'variable administration charge' has the meaning given by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11 para 1 (see PARA 355 ante): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24(2B) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11 Pt 2 paras 7, 8(1), (3)).

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the circumstances in which a leasehold valuation tribunal may make an order under head (6) in the text include any in which the RTM company no longer wishes the right to manage the premises to be exercisable by it: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 8(1), (6).

25 Ibid s 24(6) (as amended: see note 5 supra).

The purpose of Pt II (as amended) is to provide a scheme for the appointment of a manager who will carry out the functions required by the court in relation to a tenanted property; he is not appointed as the manager of the landlord, or even of the landlord's obligations under the lease. Thus where such a manager claims payment of service charges from a tenant and the tenant claims damages for breach of covenant from the landlord, the doctrine of equitable set-off does not apply and there can be no set-off as there is no mutuality between the two claims: see Taylor v Blaquiere [2002] EWCA Civ 1633, [2003] 1 WLR 379, [2002] All ER (D) 190 (Nov).

402 Appointment of manager by leasehold valuation tribunal

NOTE 3--A leasehold valuation tribunal's power to appoint a manager extends to the grant of management functions over amenity land or other land outside the leased buildings and their curtilages: Cawsand Fort Management Co Ltd v Stafford [2007] EWCA Civ 1187, [2008] 3 All ER 353.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(ii) Appointment of Manager/403. Variation or discharge of order appointing a manager.

403. Variation or discharge of order appointing a manager.

On the application of any person interested<sup>1</sup>, a leasehold valuation tribunal may vary or discharge, whether conditionally or unconditionally, an order<sup>2</sup> for the appointment of a manager<sup>3</sup>. The tribunal may not, however, so vary or discharge an order on the application of any relevant person<sup>4</sup> unless it is satisfied:

- 906 (1)   that the variation or discharge of the order will not result in a recurrence of the circumstances which led to the order being made; and
- 907 (2)   that it is just and convenient in all the circumstances of the case to vary or discharge the order<sup>5</sup>.

An order for the appointment of a manager<sup>6</sup> may not be discharged by a leasehold valuation tribunal by reason only that the premises in respect of which the order was made have ceased<sup>7</sup> to be premises in respect of which a manager may be appointed<sup>8</sup>.

1   The application must be accompanied by a copy of the management order: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(6), Sch 1 para 5, Sch 2 para 5(2); the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(6), Sch 1 para 5, Sch 2 para 5(2). As to the other particulars to be included, and the procedure on such an application, see PARA 59 et seq ante. A fee is payable for the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 3(3)(c), (4), (5); the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 3(3)(c), (4), (5). A fee is also payable for the hearing of the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5; the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5. As to the payment of such fees see further PARA 69 ante.

3 Ibid s 24(9) (amended by the Housing Act 1996 s 86(2)). If the order has been protected by an entry registered under the Land Charges Act 1972 or the Land Registration Act 2002, the tribunal may by order direct that the entry shall be cancelled: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24(9) (as so amended; further amended by the Land Registration Act 2002 s 133, Sch 11 para 20).

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24(9) (as so amended) does not embody the various criteria set out in s 24(2) (as amended) (see PARA 402 ante) and does not require the s 24(2) tests to be met all over again on an application to extend the term of an appointment: see Orchard Court Residents' Association v St Anthony's Homes Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1049, [2003] 2 EGLR 28, [2003] 33 EG 64.

(iii) Management Audits

404. Right to management audit.

The following provisions<sup>1</sup> have effect:

- 908 (1) to confer on two or more qualifying tenants<sup>2</sup> of dwellings<sup>3</sup> held on leases<sup>4</sup> from the same landlord<sup>5</sup> the right<sup>6</sup> to have an audit carried out on their behalf which relates to the management of the relevant premises<sup>7</sup> and any appurtenant property<sup>8</sup> by or on behalf of the landlord<sup>9</sup>;
- 909 (2) to confer on a single qualifying tenant of a dwelling the right<sup>10</sup> to have an audit carried out on his behalf which relates to the management of the relevant premises<sup>11</sup> and any appurtenant property<sup>12</sup> by or on behalf of the landlord<sup>13</sup>.

That right is exercisable:

- 910 (a) where the relevant premises consist of or include:
  - 83 100. (i) two dwellings ('the constituent dwellings') let to qualifying tenants of the same landlord, by either or both of those tenants; and
  - 101. (ii) three or more dwellings ('the constituent dwellings') let to qualifying tenants of the same landlord, by not less than two-thirds of those tenants<sup>14</sup>; and
  - 84 911 (b) by a single qualifying tenant of a dwelling where the relevant premises contain no other dwelling let to a qualifying tenant apart from that let to him<sup>15</sup>.

1 Ie the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 Pt I Ch V (ss 76-84) (as amended): see the text and notes 2-15 infra; and PARA 405 et seq post.

2 For the meaning of 'qualifying tenant' see PARA 405 post.

3 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 50 note 3 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 50 note 2 ante.

5 For these purposes, 'landlord' means immediate landlord: Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 84. Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), then except for the reference in the text to the 'same landlord', references to the landlord for these purposes are to the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 14(1), (2).

6 le exercisable subject to and in accordance with the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 Pt I Ch V (as amended).

7 In relation to an audit on behalf of two or more qualifying tenants, 'the relevant premises' means so much of the building or buildings containing the dwellings let to those tenants and any other building or buildings as constitutes premises in relation to which management functions are discharged in respect of the costs of which common service charge contributions are payable under the leases of those qualifying tenants: ibid s 76(3)(a). Common service charge contributions are payable by two or more persons under their leases if they may be required under the terms of those leases to contribute to the same costs by the payment of service charges: s 76(8). 'Management functions' includes functions with respect to the provision of services or the repair, maintenance, improvement or insurance of property (s 84 (definition amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 150, Sch 9 para 10)); and 'service charge' has the meaning given by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 ante) (Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 84).

8 In relation to an audit on behalf of two or more qualifying tenants, 'appurtenant property' means so much of any property not contained in the relevant premises as constitutes property in relation to which any management functions are discharged in respect of the costs of which common service charge contributions are payable under the leases of those qualifying tenants: ibid s 76(3)(b).

10 See note 6 supra.

11 In relation to an audit on behalf of a single qualifying tenant, 'the relevant premises' means so much of the building containing the dwelling let to him, and any other building or buildings, as constitutes premises in relation to which management functions are discharged in respect of the costs of which a service charge is payable under his lease, whether as a common service charge contribution or otherwise: Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 76(6)(a).

12 In relation to an audit on behalf of a single qualifying tenant, 'appurtenant property' means so much of any property not contained in the relevant premises as constitutes property in relation to which any management functions are discharged in respect of the costs of which a service charge is payable under his lease, whether as a common service charge contribution or otherwise: ibid s 76(6)(b).

13 Ibid s 76(4). The provisions of ss 78-83 (as amended) (see PARA 406 et seq post) have effect, with any necessary modifications, in relation to an audit on behalf of a single qualifying tenant as they have effect in relation to an audit on behalf of two or more qualifying tenants: s 76(7).

15 Ibid s 76(5).

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(iii) Management Audits/405. Meaning of 'qualifying tenant'.

405. Meaning of 'qualifying tenant'.

A tenant is a qualifying tenant<sup>1</sup> of a dwelling<sup>2</sup> if:

- 912 (1) he is a tenant of the dwelling under a long lease<sup>3</sup> other than a business lease<sup>4</sup>; and 913 (2) any service charge<sup>5</sup> is payable under the lease<sup>6</sup>.

No dwelling may have more than one qualifying tenant at any one time<sup>7</sup>. Accordingly:

- 914 (a) where a dwelling is for the time being let under two or more leases falling within heads (1) and (2) above<sup>8</sup>, any tenant under any of those leases which is superior to that held by any other such tenant is not a qualifying tenant of the dwelling for the statutory purposes; and 915 (b) where a dwelling is for the time being let to joint tenants under such a lease, the joint tenants are regarded<sup>9</sup>, subject to head (a) above, as jointly constituting the qualifying tenant of the dwelling<sup>10</sup>.

A person can, however, be or be among those constituting the qualifying tenant of each of two or more dwellings at the same time, whether he is tenant of those dwellings under one lease or under two or more separate leases<sup>11</sup>.

1 He for the purposes of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 Pt I Ch V (ss 76-84) (as amended): see PARA 404 ante; the text and notes 2-11 infra; and PARA 406 et seq post. For the meaning of 'tenant' generally see PARA 50 note 2 ante. Where, however, the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), then for the purposes of Pt I Ch V (as amended) references to a tenant include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises and has to make payments under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 103 (see PARA 395 ante): s 102(1), Sch 7 para 14(1), (3).

2 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 50 note 3 ante.

3 For these purposes, a lease is a long lease if (1) it is a lease falling within the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 7(1)(a), (b) or (c) (as amended) (see PARA 1558 post at heads (1)-(3) in the text); or (2) it is a shared ownership lease, within the meaning of s 7 (as amended) (see PARA 1558 note 8 post), whether granted in pursuance of the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (ss 118-188) (as amended) (see PARA 1795 et seq post) or otherwise and whatever the share of the tenant under it: Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 77(2). For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 50 note 2 ante. As to the abolition of the statutory right to a shared ownership lease under the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (as amended) see PARA 1795 post.

4 For these purposes, 'business lease' means a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 101(1).

5 For the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 404 note 7 ante.

8 He lease falling within ibid s 77(1): see the text and notes 1-6 supra.

9 See note 1 supra.

10 Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 77(4). Where two or more persons constitute the qualifying tenant of a dwelling in accordance with s 77(4)(b) (see head (b) in the text), any one or more of those persons may sign a notice under s 80 (as amended) (see PARA 408 post) on behalf of both or all of them: s 77(6).

11 Ibid s 77(5).

PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(iii) Management Audits/406. Meaning of 'management audit'.

406. Meaning of 'management audit'.

A 'management audit'<sup>1</sup> is an audit carried out for the purposes of ascertaining:

- 916 (1) the extent to which the obligations of the landlord<sup>2</sup> which:
85
- 102. (a) are owed to the qualifying tenants<sup>3</sup> of the constituent dwellings<sup>4</sup>; and
- 103. (b) involve the discharge of management functions<sup>5</sup> in relation to the relevant premises<sup>6</sup> or any appurtenant property<sup>7</sup>, 86
- 917 are being discharged in an efficient and effective manner; and
- 918 (2) the extent to which sums payable by those tenants by way of service charges<sup>8</sup> are being applied in an efficient and effective manner<sup>9</sup>.

In determining whether any such obligations as are mentioned in head (1) above are being discharged in an efficient and effective manner, regard must be had to any applicable provisions of any code of practice for the time being approved<sup>10</sup> by the Secretary of State<sup>11</sup> or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>12</sup>.

A management audit must be carried out by a person ('the auditor') who is qualified for appointment<sup>13</sup> and is appointed<sup>14</sup> by either or both of the qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings or is appointed<sup>15</sup> by not less than two-thirds of the qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings<sup>16</sup>; and the auditor may appoint such persons to assist him in carrying out the audit as he thinks fit<sup>17</sup>.

For the purposes of head (1) supra, a person is a qualified surveyor if he is a fellow or professional associate of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors or of the Incorporated Society of Valuers and Auctioneers or satisfies such other requirement or requirements as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, by the Assembly or minister: s 78(5). As to the making of regulations generally see PARA 1537 post. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(iii) Management Audits/407. Rights exercisable in connection with management audits.

407. Rights exercisable in connection with management audits.

Where the qualifying tenants<sup>1</sup> of any dwellings<sup>2</sup> exercise<sup>3</sup> their right to have a management audit<sup>4</sup> carried out on their behalf, the following rights conferred on the auditor<sup>5</sup> are exercisable by him in connection with the audit<sup>6</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>7</sup>, those rights are:

919 (1)     a right to require the landlord<sup>8</sup>:
87

104.     (a)     to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting accounts, receipts or other documents relevant to the matters which must be shown in any statement of account required to be supplied<sup>9</sup> to the qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings<sup>10</sup> and for taking copies of or extracts from them; or

105.     (b)     to take copies of or extracts from any such accounts, receipts or other documents and either send them to him or afford him reasonable facilities for collecting them, as he specifies<sup>11</sup>;

920 (2)     a right to require the landlord or any relevant person<sup>12</sup>:
89

106.     (a)     to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting any other documents sight of which is reasonably required by him for the purpose of carrying out the audit and for taking copies of or extracts from them; or

107.     (b)     to take copies of or extracts from any such documents and either send them to him or afford him reasonable facilities for collecting them, as the auditor specifies<sup>13</sup>.

To the extent that a requirement imposed under heads (1) and (2) above on the landlord or any relevant person requires him to afford facilities for inspecting documents, he must do so free of charge; but the landlord may treat as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in doing so<sup>14</sup>. The landlord or a relevant person may make a reasonable charge for doing anything else in compliance with such a requirement<sup>15</sup>.

Until the provisions set out in heads (1) and (2) above are brought into force, the rights conferred on the auditor are:

- 921 (i) a right to require the landlord to supply him with a summary of relevant costs<sup>16</sup> in connection with any service charges<sup>17</sup> payable by the qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings, and to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting, or taking copies of or extracts from, the accounts, receipts and other documents supporting any such summary;
- 922 (ii) a right to require the landlord or any relevant person to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting any other documents sight of which is reasonably required by him for the purposes of carrying out the audit; and
- 923 (iii) a right to require the landlord or any relevant person to afford him reasonable facilities for taking copies of or extracts from any documents falling within head (ii) above<sup>18</sup>.

The landlord or, as the case may be, any relevant person, must, where facilities for the inspection of any documents are so required<sup>19</sup>, make those facilities available free of charge and is entitled, where any documents are so required to be supplied<sup>20</sup> or facilities for the taking of copies or extracts are so required<sup>21</sup>, to supply those documents or, as the case may be, make those facilities available on payment of such reasonable charge as he may determine<sup>22</sup>.

The rights conferred on the auditor by heads (1) and (2) above are to be exercisable by him, and until those heads apply the rights conferred on him by heads (i) to (iii) above are exercisable by him:

- 924 (A) in relation to the landlord, by means of a notice given<sup>23</sup> by him; and
- 925 (B) in relation to any relevant person, by means of a notice given to that person at, so far as is reasonably practicable, the same time as a notice is given<sup>24</sup> by the auditor to the landlord; and, where a notice is given to any relevant person in accordance with head (B) above, a copy of that notice must be given to the landlord by the auditor<sup>25</sup>.

The auditor is also entitled, on giving notice<sup>26</sup>, to carry out an inspection of any common parts<sup>27</sup> comprised in the relevant premises<sup>28</sup> or any appurtenant property<sup>29</sup>.

Where a notice has been given to a relevant person under these provisions and, at a time when any obligations arising out of the notice remain to be discharged by him, he ceases to be a relevant person but he is, despite ceasing to be a relevant person, still in a position to discharge those obligations to any extent, he nevertheless remains responsible for discharging those obligations to that extent<sup>30</sup>. Where a notice has been so given to a relevant person, then, during the period of 12 months beginning with the date of that notice, no subsequent such notice may be given to that person on behalf of any persons who, in relation to the earlier notice, were qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings<sup>31</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(iii) Management Audits/408. Exercise of right to have a management audit.

408. Exercise of right to have a management audit.

The right of any qualifying tenants<sup>1</sup> to have a management audit<sup>2</sup> carried out on their behalf is exercisable by the giving of a notice under these provisions<sup>3</sup>. A notice so given:

- 926 (1) must be given to the landlord<sup>4</sup> by the auditor<sup>5</sup>; and
- 927 (2) must be signed by each of the tenants on whose behalf it is given<sup>6</sup>.

Any such notice must:

- 928 (a) state the full name of each of those tenants and the address of the dwelling<sup>7</sup> of which he is a qualifying tenant;
  - 929 (b) state the name and address of the auditor;
  - 930 (c) specify:
- 91
- 108. (i) as from a day to be appointed<sup>8</sup>, any documents or description of documents in respect of which a requirement is imposed<sup>9</sup> on him; or
  - 109. (ii) until that day, any documents or description of documents which the landlord is required<sup>10</sup> to supply to the auditor or in respect of which he is required<sup>11</sup> to afford the auditor facilities for inspection or for taking copies or extracts; and
- 92
- 931 (d) if the auditor proposes to carry out an inspection<sup>12</sup>, state the date<sup>13</sup> on which he proposes to carry out the inspection<sup>14</sup>.

A notice is duly given under the above provisions to the landlord of any qualifying tenants if it is given to a person who receives on behalf of the landlord the rent payable by any such tenants; and a person to whom such a notice is so given must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord<sup>15</sup>.

Where a notice has been so given to a landlord and at a time when any obligations arising out of the notice remain to be discharged by him:

- 932 (A) he disposes<sup>16</sup> of the whole or part of his interest as landlord of the qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings<sup>17</sup>; and
- 933 (B) the person acquiring any such interest of the landlord is in a position to discharge any of those obligations to any extent, that person is responsible for discharging those obligations to that extent, as if he had been given the notice under the above provisions<sup>18</sup>.

Where a notice has been so given to a landlord, then, during the period of 12 months beginning with the date of that notice, no subsequent such notice may be given to the landlord on behalf of any persons who, in relation to the earlier notice, were qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings<sup>19</sup>.

12 Ie under ibid s 79(4): see PARA 407 ante.

13 The date so specified must be a date falling not less than one month nor more than two months after the date of the giving of the notice: ibid s 80(4).

14 Ibid s 80(3) (prospectively amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 157, Sch 10 para 17, as from a day to be appointed (see note 8 supra)).

15 Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 80(5). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), s 80(5) applies as if the reference to a person who receives rent were to a person who receives service charges: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 14(1), (4).

16 For these purposes, 'disposal' means a disposal whether by the creation or the transfer of an interest, and includes the surrender of a lease and the grant of an option or right of pre-emption; and 'acquisition' is to be construed accordingly, as are expressions related to either of these expressions (Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 101(1)); and 'interest' includes estate (s 101(1)). For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 50 note 2 ante.

17 For the meaning of 'the constituent dwellings' see PARA 404 ante.

18 Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 83(1). If the landlord is, despite any such disposal, still in a position to discharge those obligations to the extent referred to in s 83(1), he remains responsible for so discharging them; but otherwise the person referred to in s 83(1) is responsible for so discharging them to the exclusion of the landlord: s 83(2). Where a person is so responsible for discharging any such obligations, whether with the landlord or otherwise (1) references to the landlord in s 81 (as amended) (see PARA 409 post) are to be read as including, or as, references to that person to such extent as is appropriate to reflect his responsibility for discharging those obligations; but (2) in connection with the discharge of any such obligations by that person s 81 (as amended) applies as if any reference to the date of the giving of the notice under s 80 (as amended) were a reference to the date of the disposal referred to in s 83(1): s 83(3).

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(iii) Management Audits/409. Procedure following giving of notice.

409. Procedure following giving of notice.

Where the landlord<sup>1</sup> is given a notice requiring the carrying out of a management audit<sup>2</sup>, then, within the period of one month beginning with the date of the giving of the notice, he must, if a date is specified in the notice<sup>3</sup>, either approve that date or propose another date<sup>4</sup> for the carrying out<sup>5</sup> of an inspection<sup>6</sup>. He must also:

934 (1) as from a day to be appointed<sup>7</sup>:

110. (a) comply with it so far as it relates to documents relevant to the matters which must be shown in any statement of account required to be supplied to the qualifying tenants of the constituent dwellings<sup>8</sup>;

111. (b) either comply with it, or give the auditor<sup>9</sup> a notice stating that he objects to doing so for such reasons as are specified in the notice, so far as it relates to other<sup>10</sup> documents<sup>11</sup>;

935 (2) until that appointed day:

95

112. (a) supply the auditor with any document he is required to supply<sup>12</sup> and afford him in respect of any specified document<sup>13</sup> any facilities for inspection or for taking copies or extracts<sup>14</sup>;

96

Where a relevant person<sup>17</sup> is given:

936 (i) as from a day to be appointed<sup>18</sup>, a notice by the auditor<sup>19</sup>, then within the period of one month beginning with the date of the giving of the notice, he must either comply with it, or give the auditor a notice stating that he objects to doing so for such reasons as are specified in the notice, in the case of every document or description of document specified in the notice<sup>20</sup>;

937 (ii) until that day, a notice requiring him to afford the auditor facilities for inspection or taking copies or extracts in respect of any documents or description of documents specified in the notice, then within the period of one month beginning with the date of the giving of the notice, he must, in the case of every such document or description of document, either afford the auditor the facilities required by him or give the auditor a notice stating that he objects to doing so for such reasons as are specified in the notice<sup>21</sup>.

If, by the end of the period of two months beginning with the date of the giving of the notice requiring a management audit<sup>22</sup> or the date of the giving of a notice to a relevant person<sup>23</sup>, the landlord or, as the case may be, a relevant person has failed to comply with any requirement of the notice, the court<sup>24</sup> may, on the application of the auditor, make an order requiring the landlord or, as the case may be, the relevant person to comply with that requirement within such period as is specified in the order<sup>25</sup>.

If, by the end of the specified period<sup>26</sup> of two months, no inspection<sup>27</sup> has been carried out by the auditor, the court may, on the application of the auditor, make an order providing for such an inspection to be carried out on such date as is specified in the order<sup>28</sup>.

410. Requirement relating to information etc held by superior landlord.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the following provisions have effect. Where the landlord<sup>2</sup> is given a notice<sup>3</sup> imposing on him a requirement relating to any documents which are held by a superior landlord, he must inform the auditor<sup>4</sup> as soon as may be of that fact and of the name and address of the superior landlord<sup>5</sup>. The auditor may then give the superior landlord a notice requiring him to comply with the requirement<sup>6</sup>.

Until the appointed day, the following provisions have effect instead of those set out above. Where the landlord is required by a notice<sup>7</sup> to supply a summary of relevant costs<sup>8</sup> and any information necessary for complying with the notice so far as relating to any such summary is in the possession of a superior landlord:

938 (1) the landlord must make a written request for the relevant information to the person who is his landlord, and so on, if that person is himself not the superior landlord;

939 (2) the superior landlord must comply with that request within the period of one month beginning with the date of the making of the request; and

940 (3) the landlord who received the notice must then comply with it so far as relating to any such summary within the specified time<sup>9</sup> or such further time, if any, as is reasonable<sup>10</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(3) CODES OF PRACTICE AND LOCAL AUTHORITY MANAGEMENT ORDERS/411. Approval of codes of practice for management of residential property.

(3) CODES OF PRACTICE AND LOCAL AUTHORITY MANAGEMENT ORDERS

411. Approval of codes of practice for management of residential property.

The Secretary of State<sup>1</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>2</sup> may, if he or it considers it appropriate to do so, by order:

- 943 (1) approve any code of practice:
97
  - 114. (a) which appears to him or to the Assembly or minister to be designed to promote desirable practices in relation to any matter or matters directly or indirectly concerned with the management of residential property<sup>3</sup> by relevant persons<sup>4</sup>; and
  - 115. (b) which has been submitted to him or to it for his approval;
- 944 (2) approve any modifications of any such code which have been so submitted;
or
- 945 (3) withdraw his or its approval for any such code or modifications<sup>5</sup>.

The Secretary of State or the Assembly or the relevant Welsh minister may not, however, approve any such code or any modifications of any such code unless satisfied that arrangements have been made for the text of the code or the modifications to be published in such manner as he or it considers appropriate for bringing the provisions of the code or the modifications to the notice of those likely to be affected by them, which, in the case of modifications of a code, may include publication of a text of the code incorporating the modifications<sup>6</sup>.

The power of the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister so to approve a code of practice which has been submitted to him or to it for approval includes power to approve a part of any such code<sup>7</sup>.

At any one time there may be two or more codes of practice for the time being so approved<sup>8</sup>; and a code of practice so approved may make different provision with respect to different cases or descriptions of cases, including different provision for different areas<sup>9</sup>.

Without prejudice to the generality of the above provisions:

- 946 (i) a code of practice so approved may, in relation to any such matter as is referred to in heads (1) to (3) above, make provision in respect of relevant persons who are under an obligation to discharge any function in connection with that matter as well as in respect of relevant persons who are not under such an obligation; and
- 947 (ii) any such code may make provision with respect to the resolution of disputes with respect to residential property between relevant persons and the tenants of such property, competitive tendering for works in connection with such property and the administration of trusts in respect of amounts paid by tenants by way of service charges<sup>10</sup>.

A failure on the part of any person to comply with any provision of a code of practice for the time being so approved does not of itself render him liable to any proceedings; but in any proceedings before a court or tribunal:

- 948 (A) any code of practice so approved is admissible in evidence; and
- 949 (B) any provision of any such code which appears to the court or tribunal to be relevant to any question arising in the proceedings must be taken into account in determining that question<sup>11</sup>.

Codes of management practice for residential property generally<sup>12</sup> and for private retirement housing<sup>13</sup> have been approved under these provisions.

The appropriate national authority<sup>14</sup> also has power by order to approve a code of practice (whether prepared by that authority or another person) laying down standards of conduct and practice to be followed with regard to the management of houses in multiple occupation<sup>15</sup> or of excepted accommodation<sup>16</sup>, to approve a modification of such a code or to withdraw the authority's approval of such a code or modification<sup>17</sup>. These powers are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>18</sup>.

412. Management orders under the Housing Act 2004.

Chapter 1 of Part 4 the Housing Act 2004<sup>1</sup> introduces provisions which enable a local housing authority<sup>2</sup> to make an interim management order<sup>3</sup>, or a final management order<sup>4</sup>, in respect of a house in multiple occupation (an 'HMO'<sup>5</sup>) or a Part 3 house<sup>6</sup>.

An interim management order is an order (expiring not more than 12 months after it is made) which is made for the purpose of securing that the following steps are taken in relation to the house<sup>7</sup>:

- 950 (1) any immediate steps which the authority considers necessary to protect the health, safety or welfare of persons occupying the house, or persons occupying or having an estate or interest in any premises in the vicinity<sup>8</sup>; and
- 951 (b) any other steps which the authority thinks appropriate with a view to the proper management of the house pending the grant of a licence under Part 2 or Part 3 of the Housing Act 2004<sup>9</sup> in respect of the house or the making of a final management order in respect of it (or, if appropriate, the revocation of the interim management order)<sup>10</sup>.

A final management order is an order (expiring not more than five years after it is made) which is made for the purpose of securing the proper management of the house on a long-term basis in accordance with a management scheme contained in the order<sup>11</sup>.

Interim and final management orders under these provisions are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>12</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(i) Liability to Repair/A. IN GENERAL/413. Landlord's liability to repair.

10. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION

(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT

(i) Liability to Repair

A. IN GENERAL

413. Landlord's liability to repair.

In the absence of express stipulation<sup>1</sup>, or of an obligation imposed by statute<sup>2</sup>, the landlord is generally under no liability towards the tenant<sup>3</sup> to put the demised premises into repair at the commencement of the tenancy, or to do repairs during the continuance of the tenancy<sup>4</sup>. This rule applies equally whether the letting is from year to year<sup>5</sup> or for a term of years<sup>6</sup>. The fact that the tenant has covenanted to repair, 'fair wear and tear excepted'<sup>7</sup>, or 'damage by fire and tempest excepted'<sup>8</sup>, does not imply a covenant by the landlord to make such fair wear and tear or damage good. The fact that the landlord has carried out repairs when the responsibility for repair lay upon the tenant does not prove that there has been any transfer of burden<sup>9</sup> and provisions in the lease indicating the parties' contemplation that in practice the landlord will do repairs and conferring on him express rights of entry for this purpose do not cause any obligation to do the repairs to be implied<sup>10</sup>.

The general rule is, however, subject to the following exceptions:

- 952 (1) where the landlord retains in his possession some part of the building the maintenance of which in proper repair is necessary for the protection of the demised premises or the safe enjoyment of them by the tenant, he is under an obligation to take reasonable care that the premises retained are not in such a condition as to cause damage to the tenant or to the demised premises<sup>11</sup>; and this obligation is properly to be regarded as an implied term rather than an independent tortious duty<sup>12</sup>, and so does not arise where the lease contains a comprehensive code for dealing with repairs<sup>13</sup>;
- 953 (2) where the landlord agrees to let or lets premises which are to be constructed or are in the course of construction, an obligation on his part is implied that the work will be completed in a good and workmanlike manner using good and proper materials and so as to be reasonably fit for human habitation<sup>14</sup>;
- 954 (3) where the landlord has designed or built the demised premises, he owes a duty to take reasonable care to ensure that the building is free from any defect likely to cause injury to any person whom he ought reasonably to have in contemplation as likely to be affected by such defect, including the tenant<sup>15</sup>; but this liability is restricted to damage to the claimant's property or person and does not extend to the cost of rectifying defects in the building discovered before causing any damage nor to purely economic loss<sup>16</sup>;
- 955 (4) a landlord developer of a dwelling owes a statutory duty to every person who acquires an interest therein to see that any work done for or in connection with the provision of the dwelling is done in a workmanlike or professional manner with proper materials and so that, as regards that work, the dwelling will be fit for habitation when completed<sup>17</sup>;
- 956 (5) where the implication of a term that the landlord will undertake certain repairs is necessary to give business efficacy to the transaction or to complete the terms of the tenancy such a term may be implied<sup>18</sup>, but a term will not be so implied where there is a comprehensive code dealing with repairs<sup>19</sup> and will be more readily implied where the tenancy is of an informal kind and it can be inferred that some or all of the terms intended have not been recorded<sup>20</sup>; a term may also be implied on this ground on the basis that it is necessarily correlative to some express obligation on the part of the tenant<sup>21</sup>.

Nevertheless, subject to the above exceptions and to those created by statute, a 'bare' landlord<sup>22</sup> is not liable for letting a house in a defective or dangerous condition<sup>23</sup>.

1 The fact that the landlord has raised the rent by the amount permitted by the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 891 et seq post) in cases where the landlord undertakes repairs does not import an agreement to repair that was not in the original letting: Morgan v Liverpool Corp [1927] 2 KB 131 at 138, CA; Wilchick v Marks and Silverstone [1934] 2 KB 56 at 63.

2 As to the covenants to repair implied by statute see the Defective Premises Act 1972; and PARA 475 post; the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 8; and PARAS 424-425 post; s 11 (as amended) and PARAS 416-417 post; and the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 7; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 332. As to the landlord's duty to ensure that gas fittings are maintained in a safe condition see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 943.

3 There may be liability towards the occupants of neighbouring property, or passers-by, if injury or damage is sustained in consequence of the defective state of the premises and, even if he is not under an express stipulation or a statutory duty to repair, the landlord has an implied right to enter to do repairs, and such a right will be implied readily in regard to weekly tenancies: see Mint v Good [1951] 1 KB 517, [1950] 2 All ER 1159, CA. land see BOUNDARIES vol 4(1) (2002 Reissue) PARA 948. In so far as damage to the structure results from an insured risk, there is no ground for importing any implied obligation to do more than lay out any insurance moneys coming into the hands of the lessor in making good that damage; the lessor is not required to carry out works of repair from causes which are not covered by an insurance policy effected pursuant to the terms of the lease, in particular damage which may result from the gradual deterioration of the structure during the term of the lease: see Adami v Lincoln Grange Management Ltd (1997) 30 HLR 982, [1998] 1 EGLR 58, CA. A landlord is not, however, liable to keep adjoining premises in repair as such, as opposed to taking care to keep them in a condition which will not cause damage (Colebeck v Girdlers Co (1876) 1 QBD 234) or for damage not caused by negligence (Carstairs v Taylor (1871) LR 6 Exch 217) or for damage caused by the dilapidated condition of premises belonging to him but not in his possession (Scales v Vandeleur (1913) 48 ILT 36; affd (1914) 48 ILT 38, CA).

It was pointed out in Duke of Westminster v Guild [1985] QB 688 at 698, [1984] 3 All ER 144 at 150, CA, that the term implied in Liverpool City Council v Irwin supra was regarded by the House of Lords on the facts of that case as a legal incident of the relationship of landlord and tenant rather than justified by the business efficacy test. Liverpool City Council v Irwin supra was followed in King v South Northamptonshire District Council (1991) 64 P & CR 35, [1992] 1 EGLR 53, CA (implied obligation on landlord of terraced council house to maintain rear footpath necessary for rubbish removal and coal deliveries) but was distinguished in Duke of Westminster v Guild supra where the letting was of commercial premises, there was a lease containing a comprehensive set of terms as to repair and the general principle that the servient owner is not under any liability to keep the servient tenement in repair for the benefit of the owner of an easement was affirmed. The operation of the business efficacy test may also give rise indirectly to an implied obligation to maintain if it results in an implied reservation of a right of entry so as to bring into operation the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4 (see PARA 475 post): McAuley v Bristol City Council [1992] QB 134, [1992] 1 All ER 749, CA.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(i) Liability to Repair/A. IN GENERAL/414. Landlord's liability in the event of fire.

414. Landlord's liability in the event of fire.

Except to the extent that the landlord has assumed an obligation to rebuild, as, for example, by covenanting to repair, he need not rebuild the premises if they are destroyed by fire during the term<sup>1</sup>, and a covenant on his part for quiet enjoyment does not require him to reinstate the premises<sup>2</sup>. The fact that the tenant has covenanted to repair with an exception for damage by fire does not of itself imply an obligation on the landlord's part to rebuild<sup>3</sup>. Moreover, the fact that the landlord has insured and has received the insurance money does not impose an obligation on him to rebuild<sup>4</sup> unless the insurance was effected at the expense of the tenant<sup>5</sup>; but the tenant may take advantage of the Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act 1774<sup>6</sup>, which requires the governors of an insurance office upon the request of any person interested to cause insurance money to be laid out towards rebuilding<sup>7</sup>.

A covenant by the landlord that, in case of fire, he will reinstate the premises in the same condition as before the fire does not, subject to the wording of the particular covenant, bind him to restore additions made by the tenant<sup>8</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(i) Liability to Repair/A. IN GENERAL/415. Right of entry.

415. Right of entry.

By the granting of a lease, the landlord deprives himself of the right to possession of the premises during its currency; and, if he enters without the tenant's permission, or without reserving to himself the right to do so, he is liable to be treated as a trespasser. Hence, in the absence of a special stipulation<sup>1</sup> or a right given by statute<sup>2</sup>, he may not enter to do repairs<sup>3</sup>. In the case of weekly tenancies, where neither the landlord nor the tenant is expressly bound, a reservation by the landlord of a right to enter to carry out repairs is a term which the court will readily imply<sup>4</sup>. It makes no difference that he is himself a tenant, and is liable to forfeiture for breach of the covenant to repair in the head lease, or that he has the consent of the subtenant's tenants<sup>5</sup>.

Where the landlord has covenanted with the tenant to repair, a licence by the tenant is implied for him to enter at a reasonable time to do the repairs<sup>6</sup>. Generally, however, a right to enter and view the state of repair is expressly reserved by the lease, and the landlord is entitled to have this inserted when the lease is granted in pursuance of an agreement to grant a lease with the 'usual provisions'<sup>7</sup>.

The fact that the landlord has a right of entry to view the premises does not free the tenant from the obligation to give notice to the landlord of want of repair before he can hold the landlord liable for breach of covenant to repair; but the landlord may be liable for breach of the covenant if it is proved that he or his agents had actual knowledge of the want of repair<sup>8</sup>.

Where a tenant is granted an easement over land retained by the landlord, he is entitled to enter on the landlord's land in order to carry out repairs necessary to the enjoyment of the easement<sup>9</sup>.

B. COVENANTS IMPLIED BY STATUTE

416. Lessor's statutory obligation to repair; whole buildings.

In a lease of a dwelling house<sup>1</sup> granted on or after 24 October 1961 for a term of less than seven years<sup>2</sup>, there is implied a covenant<sup>3</sup> by the lessor<sup>4</sup>:

- 957 (1) to keep in repair the structure and exterior<sup>5</sup> of the dwelling house including drains, gutters and external pipes<sup>6</sup>;
- 958 (2) to keep in repair and proper working order the installations in the dwelling house for the supply of water, gas and electricity and for sanitation (including basins, sinks, baths and sanitary conveniences, but not other fixtures, fittings and appliances for making use of the supply of water, gas or electricity)<sup>7</sup>; and
- 959 (3) to keep in repair and proper working order the installations in the dwelling house for space heating and heating water<sup>8</sup>.

A covenant by the lessee<sup>9</sup> for the repair of the premises<sup>10</sup> is of no effect<sup>11</sup> so far as it relates to the matters mentioned in heads (1) to (3) above<sup>12</sup>.

The covenant so implied ('the lessor's repairing covenant') is not, however, to be construed as requiring the lessor:

- 960 (a) to carry out works or repairs for which the lessee is liable by virtue of his duty to use the premises in a tenantlike manner, or would be so liable but for an express covenant on his part;
- 961 (b) to rebuild or reinstate the premises in the case of destruction or damage by fire, or by tempest, flood or other inevitable accident; or
- 962 (c) to keep in repair or maintain anything which the lessee is entitled to remove from the dwelling house<sup>13</sup>.

In determining the standard of repair required by the lessor's repairing covenant, regard must be had to the age, character and prospective life of the dwelling house and the locality in which it is situated<sup>14</sup>. In a lease in which the lessor's repairing covenant is implied, there is also implied a covenant by the lessee that the lessor, or any person authorised by him in writing, may at reasonable times of the day and on giving 24 hours' notice in writing to the occupier enter the premises comprised in the lease for the purpose of viewing their condition and state of repair<sup>15</sup>.

The implied obligation to repair extends only to cases where the lessor has knowledge of the defect; but it is sufficient if he has information about the existence of a defect which would put a reasonable person on inquiry as to whether repairs were needed<sup>16</sup>.

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company<sup>17</sup>:

- 963 (i) the obligations imposed on a lessor by virtue of the above provisions, so far as relating to any lease of any flat<sup>18</sup> or other unit<sup>19</sup> contained in the premises, are instead obligations of the RTM company<sup>20</sup>;
- 964 (ii) the obligations imposed on the RTM company by virtue of head (i) above in relation to any lease are owed to the lessor, as well as to the lessee<sup>21</sup>; and
- 965 (iii) the RTM company owes to any person who is in occupation of a flat or other unit contained in the premises otherwise than under a lease the same obligations as would be imposed on it by virtue of the above provisions if that person were a lessee under a lease of the flat or other unit<sup>22</sup>; but head (i) above does not apply to an obligation to the extent that it relates to a matter concerning only the flat or other unit concerned<sup>23</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease of a dwelling house' means a lease by which a building or part of a building is let wholly or mainly as a private residence and 'dwelling house' means that building or part of a building (Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 16(a)); but 'lease' does not include a mortgage term (s 16(b)). For the meaning of 'lease' generally see PARA 52 note 1 ante. As to the leases to which s 11 (as amended) applies see PARA 418 post; as to the leases to which s 11 (as amended) does not apply see PARA 419 post; and as to leases of parts of buildings see PARA 417 post. The statutory obligation does not extend to parts of the building in which the landlord has no interest: Niazi Services Ltd v Van der Loo [2004] EWCA Civ 53, [2004] 1 WLR 1254, [2004] All ER (D) 139 (Feb). An express covenant can extend the obligation: Welsh v Greenwich London Borough Council (2000) 81 P & CR 144, [2000] 3 EGLR 41, CA (covenant 'to maintain in good condition and repair' extending to cover severe condensation which was caused by lack of insulation, not by disrepair).

2 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 13. As to leases which are treated for this purpose as being for a term of less than seven years see PARA 418 post. Since 'lease' includes an agreement for a lease (see PARA 52 note 1 ante), the question whether there is a lease for a term of less than seven years falls to be determined as at the date when a binding agreement for a lease comes into existence: Brikom Investments Ltd v Seaford [1981] 2 All ER 783, [1981] 1 WLR 863, CA.

3 For the meaning of references to covenants see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'lessor' means the person for the time being entitled to the reversion expectant on the lease: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 16(c). See also note 15 infra.

5 The meaning of 'structure and exterior' is a question of fact and degree: Hopwood v Cannock Chase District Council [1975] 1 All ER 796, [1975] 1 WLR 373, CA (landlord not obliged to repair slabs in back yard); cf Brown v Liverpool Corp [1969] 3 All ER 1345, CA (landlord obliged to repair steps leading to the dwelling house). The exterior of a flat in a block includes the outside walls of the flat, even though these walls are not included in the demised premises (Campden Hill Towers Ltd v Gardner [1977] QB 823, [1977] 1 All ER 739, CA) and in the case of a top-floor flat may include the roof, unless it is separated from the flat by a void or loft (Douglas-Scott v Scorgie [1984] 1 All ER 1086, [1984] 1 WLR 716, CA).

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(1)(a). The duty under s 11 (as amended) extends to the reinstatement of decorations damaged by the work of repair (McGreal v Wake (1983) 13 HLR 107, [1984] 1 EGLR 42, CA; Bradley v Chorley Borough Council [1985] 2 EGLR 49, CA) but not to damage to decorations and furnishings caused by condensation which was not due to structural damage (Quick v Taff-Ely Borough Council [1986] QB 809, [1985] 2 EGLR 50, CA). Saturation of the plaster is damage to the structure: Staves v Leeds City Council (1990) 23 HLR 107, [1992] 2 EGLR 37, CA. 'The structure of the dwelling house' has been said to 'consist of those elements which give it its essential appearance, stability and shape' but not to extend to 'the many and various ways in which the dwelling house will be fitted out, equipped, decorated and generally made to be habitable'; it is not limited to loadbearing elements; it does not include a separate garage, gates, internal plaster and door furniture but does include windows, including their sashes, cords, frames and essential furniture: Irvine v Moran (1990) 24 HLR 1, [1991] 1 EGLR 261; applied in Marlborough Park Services Ltd v Rowe [2006] EWCA Civ 436, [2006] 23 EG 166, [2006] All ER (D) 91 (Mar), CA (floor joists included in the lease of the flat were part of the 'main structure' of the building and so within the landlord's repairing obligations).

The manner in which the courts have consistently interpreted the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(1)(a) is not incompatible with the Human Rights Act 1998 and the Convention rights to respect for private and family life: Lee v Leeds City Council, Ratcliffe v Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council [2002] EWCA Civ 06, [2002] 1 WLR 1488, [2002] LGR 305. As to Convention rights see PARA 46 ante.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(1)(b). The installations must be kept in repair and be capable, so far as their own structural and mechanical condition is concerned, of working properly: Campden Hill Towers Ltd v Gardner [1977] QB 823 at 835, [1977] 1 All ER 739 at 746, CA, per Megaw LJ. Thus, the landlord is not obliged to lag an unlagged water pipe or to replace a blown fuse but the position would be different if a pipe rusted through or the insulation on the wiring deteriorated: Wycombe Health Authority v Barnett (1982) 5 HLR 84, 47 P & CR 394, CA.

An installation cannot be said to be in proper working order if, by reason of a defect in construction or design, it is incapable of working properly; and in so far as installations for the supply of gas, water and electricity are concerned, an installation is in proper working order if it is able to function under those conditions of supply that it is reasonable to anticipate will prevail: O'Connor v Old Etonian Housing Association Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 150, [2002] Ch 295, [2002] 2 All ER 1015.

8 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(1)(c). In the case of leases entered into before 15 January 1989 the obligation to repair installations in the dwelling house is limited to installations within the physical confines of the dwelling house and does not extend to installations outside the flat, eg a central heating boiler, the functioning of which may be necessary to enable the installations within the dwelling house to function properly: Campden Hill Towers Ltd v Gardner [1977] QB 823, [1977] 1 All ER 739, CA. In the case of leases entered into after that date, the obligation extends to certain installations outside the dwelling house: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(1A)(b) (as added); and PARA 417 post. See also Passley v Wandsworth London Borough Council (1996) 30 HLR 165, CA (where disrepair is caused to installations outside the dwelling house, the liability for disrepair arises immediately and not only after notice is given), applying British Telecommunications plc v Sun Life Assurance Society plc [1996] Ch 69, [1995] 4 All ER 44, CA.

9 For these purposes, 'lessee' means the person for the time being entitled to the term of the lease: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 16(c).

10 For these purposes, the reference to a covenant by the lessee for the repair of the premises includes a covenant (1) to put in repair or deliver up in repair; (2) to paint, point or render; (3) to pay money in lieu of repairs by the lessee; or (4) to pay money on account of repairs by the lessor: ibid s 11(5). See also note 23 infra.

11 Ie except so far as it imposes on the lessee any of the requirements mentioned in ibid s 11(2)(a) or (c): see heads (a), (c) in the text.

12 Ibid s 11(4). See also note 23 infra.

13 Ibid s 11(2). Nor is the lessor's repairing covenant to be construed so as to imply a duty to give the tenant advice on preventing damp and condensation, eg by not using a cupboard containing hot pipes for drying clothes: see Southwark London Borough Council v McIntosh [2002] 1 EGLR 25, [2001] All ER (D) 133 (Nov).

14 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(3). Accordingly, a landlord may not be obliged to carry out repairs which are wasteful or useless (Newham London Borough v Patel [1979] JPL 303, CA) but, if the house has a limited life left, the landlord may be in breach of his obligation if there is disrepair of the relevant kind (McClean v Liverpool City Council (1987) 20 HLR 25, CA). The standard of repair required is the same for local authority and private sector lettings: Wainwright v Leeds City Council (1984) 13 HLR 117, 270 Estates Gazette 1289, CA. Replacement is not required if a piecemeal repair is a practical proposition: Murray v Birmingham City Council (1987) 20 HLR 39, [1987] 2 EGLR 53, CA. Radical remedial measures which (1) affect substantially the whole structure; (2) produce a building of a different character; and (3) prolong the life of the house and substantially increase its value may fall outside the meaning of 'repair', though in these circumstances the landlord would be liable to carry out repeated temporary repairs: McDougall v Easington District Council (1989) 58 P & CR 201, [1989] 1 EGLR 93, CA.

15 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(6). The right of entry is limited to that which is strictly necessary to do the work of repair; it does not oblige the tenant to give the landlord exclusive occupation or access to all parts of the house at the same time unless this is essential for the execution of the repairs: McGreal v Wake (1983) 13 HLR 107, [1984] 1 EGLR 42, CA.

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the references in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(6) to the lessor include the RTM company; and a person who is in occupation of a flat or other unit contained in the premises otherwise than under a lease has, in relation to the flat or other unit, the same obligation as that imposed on a lessee by virtue of s 11(6): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 3(6). See further the text and notes 17-23 infra.

16 O'Brien v Robinson [1973] AC 912, [1973] 1 All ER 583, HL. See also Sheldon v West Bromwich Corp (1973) 25 P & CR 360, CA. The fact that defects were observed by an official of the landlord council's environmental health department inspecting for another purpose and that further defects were reported to the council by the district valuer is sufficient notice to make the council liable for those defects; it is not necessary for the landlord to be told the exact position or extent of the defects; it is enough that he is put on inquiry as to whether repairs are needed: Dinefwr Borough Council v Jones (1987) 19 HLR 445, [1987] 2 EGLR 58, CA. Sending to the landlords a valuation report obtained for a different purpose, namely in connection with a proposed purchase of the reversion, is sufficient notice (Hall v Howard (1988) 57 P & CR 226, [1988] 2 EGLR 75, CA); but a letter telling the landlord that the tenant will have the repairs done and deduct the cost from the rent is not a good notice (Al Hassani v Merrigan (1987) 20 HLR 238, [1988] 1 EGLR 93, CA). The necessary repairs should be carried out properly within a reasonable time of the landlord's receiving notice of the defect: Morris v Liverpool City Council (1987) 20 HLR 498, [1988] 1 EGLR 47, CA; McGreal v Wake (1983) 13 HLR 107, [1984] 1 EGLR 42, CA.

417. Lessor's statutory obligation to repair; parts of buildings.

If a lease granted on or after 15 January 1989, other than a lease entered into pursuant to a contract made before that date<sup>1</sup>, for a term of less than seven years<sup>2</sup> is a lease of a dwelling house<sup>3</sup> which forms part only of a building, the implied covenant to repair<sup>4</sup> has effect as if:

966 (1) the reference<sup>5</sup> to the dwelling house included a reference to any part of the building in which the lessor<sup>6</sup> has an estate or interest; and

967 (2) any reference<sup>7</sup> to an installation in the dwelling house included a reference to an installation which, directly or indirectly, serves the dwelling house and which either forms part of any part of a building in which the lessor has an estate or interest or is owned by the lessor or under his control<sup>8</sup>.

Nothing in the above provisions is, however, to be construed as requiring the lessor to carry out any works or repairs unless the disrepair, or failure to maintain in working order, is such as to affect the lessee's<sup>9</sup> enjoyment of the dwelling house or of any common parts<sup>10</sup>, which the lessee, as such, is entitled to use<sup>11</sup>.

In any case where:

- 968 (a) the lessor's repairing covenant so has effect<sup>12</sup>; and
- 969 (b) in order to comply with the covenant the lessor needs to carry out works or repairs otherwise than in, or to an installation in, the dwelling house; and
- 970 (c) the lessor does not have a sufficient right in the part of the building or the installation concerned to enable him to carry out the required works or repairs, then, in any proceedings relating to a failure to comply with the landlord's repairing covenant, so far as it requires the lessor to carry out the works or repairs in question, it is a defence for the lessor to prove that he used all reasonable endeavours to obtain, but was unable to obtain, such rights as would be adequate to enable him to carry out the works or repairs<sup>13</sup>.

On the proper construction of s 11(1A)(b)(i) (as so added), a landlord's liability for maintenance and repair extends only to an installation, or the defective portion of an installation, in that part of the building in which the landlord has an estate or interest, and the implied covenant to repair does not extend to installations located in parts of a building in which he does not have an estate or interest, even if he has an estate or interest in other parts of the same building: Niazi Services Ltd v Van der Loo [2004] EWCA Civ 53, [2004] 1 WLR 1254, [2004] All ER (D) 139 (Feb).

418. Leases to which the statutory obligation applies.

The statutory provisions implying a covenant by the lessor to repair<sup>1</sup> apply only to leases of a dwelling house<sup>2</sup> granted on or after 24 October 1961 for a term of less than seven years<sup>3</sup>. In determining whether a lease is one to which the statutory provisions apply:

- 971 (1) any part of the term which falls before the grant must be left out of account and the lease is treated as a lease for a term commencing with the grant;
- 972 (2) a lease which is determinable at the option of the lessor before the expiration of seven years from the commencement of the term is treated as a lease for a term of less than seven years; and
- 973 (3) a lease, other than a lease to which head (2) above applies, is not treated as a lease for a term of less than seven years if it confers on the lessee<sup>4</sup> an option for renewal for a term which, together with the original term, amounts to seven years or more<sup>5</sup>.

A lease which, by reason of the death of a party to it, may become determinable before the expiration of seven years at the lessor's option is not so determinable within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 13(2): Parker v O'Connor [1974] 3 All ER 257, [1974] 1 WLR 1160, CA.

The statutory provisions implying a covenant by the lessor to repair<sup>1</sup> do not apply to:

- 974 (1) a new lease granted to an existing tenant<sup>2</sup>, or to a former tenant still in possession<sup>3</sup>, if the previous lease<sup>4</sup> was not a lease to which those statutory provisions applied and, in the case of a lease granted before 24 October 1961, would not have been if it had been granted on or after that date<sup>5</sup>;
- 975 (2) a lease of a dwelling house which is a tenancy of an agricultural holding<sup>6</sup> or to a farm business tenancy<sup>7</sup>;
- 976 (3) a lease granted on or after 3 October 1980 to:

- 116. (a) a local authority<sup>8</sup>;
- 117. (b) a National Park authority<sup>9</sup>;
- 118. (c) a new town corporation<sup>10</sup>;
- 119. (d) an urban development corporation<sup>11</sup>;

- 121. (f) a co-operative housing association<sup>13</sup>;
- 122. (g) an educational institution or other specified<sup>14</sup> body<sup>15</sup>;

977 (4) a lease granted on or after 15 January 1989, other than a lease entered into in pursuance of a contract made before that date, to a housing action trust established<sup>16</sup> under the Housing Act 1988<sup>17</sup>;

978 (5) a lease granted on or after 3 October 1980 to:

- 123. (a) Her Majesty in right of the Crown, unless the lease is under the management of the Crown Estate Commissioners<sup>18</sup>; or
- 124. (b) a government department or a person holding in trust for Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department<sup>19</sup>;

979 (6) a new lease granted to an existing tenant<sup>20</sup>, or to a former tenant<sup>21</sup> still in possession, if the new lease is a tenancy to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>22</sup> applies and the previous lease<sup>23</sup> either is such a tenancy or would be but for the fact that the tenancy has been renewed by agreement<sup>24</sup> between the parties<sup>25</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(i) Liability to Repair/B. COVENANTS IMPLIED BY STATUTE/420. Exclusion or modification of repairing obligation.

420. Exclusion or modification of repairing obligation.

A covenant or agreement, whether contained in a lease to which the statutory provisions implying a covenant by the lessor to repair apply<sup>1</sup> or in an agreement collateral to such a lease, is void in so far as it purports:

980 (1) to exclude or limit the implied obligations of the lessor<sup>2</sup> or the implied immunities of the lessee<sup>3</sup>; or

981 (2) to authorise any forfeiture or impose on the lessee any penalty, disability or obligation in the event of his enforcing or relying upon those obligations or immunities, unless the inclusion of the provision was authorised by the court<sup>4</sup>.

The county court may, however, by order made with the consent of the parties, authorise the inclusion in a lease, or in an agreement collateral to a lease, of provisions excluding or modifying, in relation to the lease, those statutory provisions with respect to the repairing obligations of the parties if it appears to the court that it is reasonable to do so, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the other terms and conditions of the lease<sup>5</sup>.

The county court has jurisdiction to make a declaration that the repairing obligations apply, or do not apply, to a lease, whatever the net annual value of the property in question and notwithstanding that no other relief is sought other than a declaration<sup>6</sup>.

In Irvine v Moran (1990) 24 HLR 1, [1991] 1 EGLR 261 it was held that a tenant's covenant to paint the exterior was totally nullified and even a tenant's covenant to paint internal installations was so cut down as to have 'little practical significance'; see quaere.

(ii) Fitness for Habitation

421. Enforcement of housing standards by local authorities.

The Housing Act 2004 introduces a new system for assessing housing conditions and enforcing housing standards<sup>1</sup> which replaces the previous system based on fitness for human habitation<sup>2</sup>. The new system is discussed in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>3</sup>, as are other local authority powers in relation to overcrowding<sup>4</sup> and houses in multiple occupation<sup>5</sup>.

TOWARDS THE TENANT/(ii) Fitness for Habitation/422. Warranty of fitness for habitation; the common law position.

422. Warranty of fitness for habitation; the common law position.

At common law, there is in general no implied warranty on the part of a landlord that the demised premises are fit for the purpose for which they are taken<sup>1</sup>; and, therefore, on the letting of an unfurnished dwelling house or flat<sup>2</sup> there is no implied warranty on the part of the landlord that it is in a reasonably fit state for habitation<sup>3</sup>, or that it may lawfully be used for the purpose for which it was let<sup>4</sup>. The intending tenant is presumed to make his own inquiries as to its condition, and, in the absence of a special stipulation, he takes the house as it stands<sup>5</sup>. This is so notwithstanding that the house is, to the landlord's knowledge, required for immediate occupation<sup>6</sup>. If the house is, in fact, uninhabitable, then, after accepting the lease, the tenant is without remedy<sup>7</sup> except where he has obtained a warranty of fitness, or where he has been induced to take the lease by misrepresentation on the part of the landlord, in which case the tenant may be entitled to rescission or damages<sup>8</sup>. The mere omission of the landlord to disclose defects is not such misrepresentation<sup>9</sup> but the deliberate concealment of some defects may be conduct equivalent to a fraudulent misrepresentation<sup>10</sup>. If, however, the contract is still executory, it will not be enforced if the condition of the house is such that it is dangerous to health or otherwise uninhabitable<sup>11</sup>. A warranty of fitness will probably be implied where the tenancy agreement or the lease is entered into before the completion of the house by the landlord<sup>12</sup>.

Where, however, a person takes on work for or in connection with the provision of a dwelling (whether by the erection or by the conversion or enlargement of a building), he owes a duty to every person who acquires an interest in the dwelling to see that as regards that work the dwelling will be fit for habitation when completed: see the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 1(1); and BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 77. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(ii) Fitness for Habitation/423. Express and implied warranties of fitness.

423. Express and implied warranties of fitness.

A warranty at or before the making of a lease that a house is in a fit state for habitation, whether as regards repair or drainage, may be given as an express contract, or may be implied from a representation as to the state of the house. A representation by the landlord ceases to be a mere representation and constitutes a warranty if it is intended to be the basis of the contractual relation between the parties<sup>1</sup>. If, therefore, the intending tenant declines to take the lease unless the landlord gives an assurance that the drains are in order, and the landlord gives this assurance in consideration of his taking the lease, the landlord is bound by the warranty<sup>2</sup>. The warranty is both a warranty and a condition; hence a breach gives the tenant a claim for damages, and also entitles him to repudiate the lease within a reasonable time<sup>3</sup>. Such a warranty is collateral to the lease; and it is no objection that it is not contained in the lease, or is oral, unless the lease also deals with the same matter, in which case the contract contained in the lease may not be varied by an oral agreement<sup>4</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(ii) Fitness for Habitation/424. Implied condition and undertaking on letting of small houses.

424. Implied condition and undertaking on letting of small houses.

In certain contracts for the letting of a house<sup>1</sup> for human habitation there is implied, notwithstanding any stipulation to the contrary:

- 982 (1) a condition that the house is fit for human habitation<sup>2</sup> at the commencement of the tenancy<sup>3</sup>; and
- 983 (2) an undertaking that the house will be kept by the landlord<sup>4</sup> fit for human habitation during the tenancy<sup>5</sup>.

The condition and undertaking are so implied if the rent<sup>6</sup> does not exceed the following amounts:

- 984 (a) where the contract was made before 31 July 1923:
  - 125. (i) in the case of premises situated in London<sup>7</sup>, £40;
  - 126. (ii) in the case of premises situated in a borough or urban district which at the date of the contract had according to the last published census a population of 50,000 or more, £26;
  - 127. (iii) in the case of premises situated elsewhere, £16;
- 104 985 (b) where the contract was made on or after 31 July 1923 but before 6 July 1957, in the case of premises situated in London, £40, and elsewhere, £26;
- 986 (c) where the contract was made on or after 6 July 1957, in the case of premises situated in London, £80, and elsewhere £52<sup>8</sup>.

The condition and undertaking are not, however, implied where a house is let for a term of three years or more, the lease not being determinable at the option of either party before the expiration of three years, upon terms that the tenant<sup>9</sup> puts the premises into a condition reasonably fit for human habitation<sup>10</sup>.

Where under the contract of employment of a worker employed in agriculture the provision of a house for his occupation forms part of his remuneration and the implied terms as to fitness for human habitation<sup>11</sup> are inapplicable by reason only of the house not being let to him:

- 987 (A) there are implied as part of the contract of employment, notwithstanding any stipulation to the contrary, the like condition and undertaking as would be implied<sup>12</sup> if the house were so let; and
- 988 (B) the implied terms as to fitness for human habitation<sup>13</sup> apply<sup>14</sup> accordingly<sup>15</sup>;

but this does not affect any obligation of a person other than the employer to repair such a house, or any remedy for enforcing such an obligation<sup>16</sup>.

Where the statutory condition and undertaking are so implied, the landlord, or a person authorised by him in writing, may at reasonable times of the day, on giving 24 hours' notice in writing to the tenant or occupier, enter premises for the purpose of viewing their state and condition<sup>17</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'house' includes a part of a house and any yard, garden, outhouses and appurtenances belonging to the house or usually enjoyed with it: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 8(6), 9(3).

2 In determining for these purposes whether a house is unfit for human habitation, regard must be had to its condition in respect of the following matters: repair; stability; freedom from damp; internal arrangement; natural lighting; ventilation; water supply; drainage and sanitary conveniences; and facilities for preparation and cooking of food and for the disposal of waste water; and the house is to be regarded as unfit for human habitation if, and only if, it is so far defective in one or more of those matters that it is not reasonably suitable for occupation in that condition: ibid s 10.

3 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

5 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 8(1). It appears that the landlord's obligation under s 8(1) is limited to cases where the house is capable of being made fit for human habitation at reasonable expense: Buswell v Goodwin [1971] 1 All ER 418, [1971] 1 WLR 92, CA; Kenny v Royal Borough of Kingston-upon-Thames (1985) 17 HLR 344, [1985] 1 EGLR 26, CA. For the meaning of 'reasonable expense' see Hillbank Properties Ltd v Hackney London Borough Council [1978] QB 998, [1978] 3 All ER 343, CA. As to the statutory duty imposed on all persons taking on work for or in connection with the provision of a dwelling see the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 1; and PARA 422 note 5 ante.

Apart from the special provision for agricultural workers (see the text and notes 11-16 infra) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 8(1) does not apply to licences: Bomford v South Worcestershire Assessment Committee [1947] KB 575, [1947] 1 All ER 299, CA.

6 The rent referred to is the annual contractual rent (Rousou v Photi [1940] 2 KB 379, [1940] 2 All ER 528, CA); and in the case of a weekly tenancy the annual rent is computed by multiplying the weekly rent by 52 (Whitcombe v Pollock (1956) 106 L Jo 554). The failure to revalorise the rent means that hardly any properties now fall within this provision, which is largely irrelevant in practice.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(ii) Fitness for Habitation/425. Breach of the implied obligation.

425. Breach of the implied obligation.

Breach of the condition and undertaking implied by statute on the letting of a small house<sup>1</sup> not only gives the tenant a right of action for damages<sup>2</sup>, but also, it would seem, entitles him to abandon his tenancy<sup>3</sup>; and it may also give other persons who are injured or whose property is damaged as a result of defects in the premises a right of action for damages<sup>4</sup>. The factors to be considered by the court in determining whether the landlord is in breach of his obligation are limited to those listed in the statute<sup>5</sup>. On rather different provisions of earlier statutes and under the common law, defective ceilings<sup>6</sup>, broken sashcords<sup>7</sup>, defective steps inside the house<sup>8</sup>, infestation with bugs<sup>9</sup> or vermin<sup>10</sup> and recent infectious disease<sup>11</sup> have been held to render houses unfit for human habitation, but not occasional incursions of rats<sup>12</sup>, defective steps leading to the premises but not forming part of them<sup>13</sup> and a defective hot water system<sup>14</sup>. The standard of repair is not as high as that imposed by a covenant to keep the premises in good and tenantable repair, fair wear and tear excepted<sup>15</sup>.

Damages may be recovered for injury suffered as a result of a breach of the implied obligation only if the landlord had notice of the want of repair before the injury was suffered<sup>16</sup>.

2    Walker v Hobbs & Co (1889) 23 QBD 458.

3    It has always been assumed that the use of the words 'condition' and 'undertaking' in contrast with each other give the word 'condition' its strict (and now obsolescent) meaning, in relation to a lease, that is to say a term entitling the party who is not in breach to treat the other party's breach as a repudiation of the contract, and to determine the contract by accepting that repudiation: see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 1002 et seq. In Walker v Hobbs & Co (1889) 23 QBD 458, that was accepted as the situation, and in Wilson v Finch Hatton (1877) 2 Ex D 336 (furnished letting where such a condition is implied at common law), it was held that the tenant could so determine the tenancy, and no distinction was drawn between cases where the tenancy had commenced (such as that case) and cases where there was merely an agreement for a lease. The doctrine of 'conditions' as applied to leases has principally been applied so as to permit landlords to determine leases, ie as if to imply a proviso for re-entry; and the principle that a tenant may treat breach of the statutory condition as a repudiation must now be open to some doubt in view of the decision in Total Oil Great Britain Ltd v Thompson Garages (Biggin Hill) Ltd [1972] 1 QB 318, [1971] 3 All ER 1226, CA, where Lord Denning MR observed at 324 and at 1229 that a lease does not come to an end like an ordinary contract on repudiation and acceptance.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(1) LANDLORD'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE TENANT/(ii) Fitness for Habitation/426. Furnished houses.

426. Furnished houses.

On the letting of a furnished house, there is an implied condition that it is in a fit state for habitation at the commencement of the tenancy; and, if this condition is not fulfilled, the tenant is entitled to repudiate the contract at once<sup>1</sup>. He need not wait to give the landlord an opportunity for effecting repairs<sup>2</sup>. It is a breach of the condition if there are substantial defects in the drainage<sup>3</sup>; or if the house or any part of it is so infested with vermin as to be a source of serious inconvenience to the occupants<sup>4</sup>; or if there has been recent infectious illness, and the house has not been properly disinfected<sup>5</sup>; but not if there are merely ordinary defects of repair which may be easily remedied<sup>6</sup>. To fulfil the condition it is not enough that the landlord believes the house to be in a fit state for habitation; it must in fact be reasonably habitable<sup>7</sup>. The implied condition may be treated also as a warranty, and the tenant may recover damages for the breach<sup>8</sup>. The condition and warranty relate, however, only to the state of the premises at the commencement of the tenancy; and there is no implied condition or warranty that they are to continue fit for habitation throughout the term<sup>9</sup>.

Furniture supplied by a landlord must satisfy the statutory standards of fire safety<sup>10</sup> but those standards do not apply to furniture made before 1 January 1950<sup>11</sup>.

1 Smith v Marrable (1843) 11 M & W 5; Wilson v Finch Hatton (1877) 2 Ex D 336. It seems that the implied condition arises from the intention of the parties, to be inferred from the circumstances of the letting: Wilson v Finch Hatton supra. The rule in Smith v Marrable supra is now well established, although in Hart v Windsor (1844) 12 M & W 68 at 87 Parke B doubted his own decision in Smith v Marrable supra and held that there is no such implied condition in 'a lease of real estate merely'. Possibly the rule does not apply to a furnished house and grounds taken for a substantial term, such as five years (Chester v Powell, Powell v Chester (1885) 52 LT 722); but in Harrison v Malet (1886) 3 TLR 58, there was held to be an implied warranty that 'the house was at the time of letting in good condition', on the letting of a furnished house for two years. See also PARA 425 note 3 ante.

5 Bird v Lord Greville (1884) Cab & El 317 (measles); Collins v Hopkins [1923] 2 KB 617 (pulmonary tuberculosis). Where a person has recently suffered from a notifiable disease in a house, it is a criminal offence (1) to conceal that fact from a prospective tenant who makes relevant inquiries; and (2) to fail to have the house properly disinfected before letting or reletting it or any part of it: see the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 s 29 (as amended); and ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 46 (2010) PARA 907.

It has been said that there is force in the argument that this condition should also be implied in a letting of an unfurnished house but that it is for parliament and not the courts to introduce such a development in the law: McNerny v London Borough of Lambeth (1988) 21 HLR 188 at 194, CA, per Dillon LJ.

(2) TENANT'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE LANDLORD

(i) Repair and Rebuilding

427. Tenant's liability for repair.

In the absence of an express stipulation, the tenant's liability for the maintenance of the premises depends partly on the doctrine of waste<sup>1</sup>, and partly on an implied obligation to use the premises in a tenantlike manner<sup>2</sup>. The liability for waste is not founded on contract and accordingly is not excluded on the ground that there is an express contract dealing with the same matter<sup>3</sup>. The implied obligation to use the premises in a tenantlike manner is, however, excluded where there is an express contract to repair<sup>4</sup>. It has been said that a tenant from year to year is bound to keep the premises wind and water tight<sup>5</sup> and to make fair and tenantable repairs<sup>6</sup>, but it is doubtful whether this liability extends beyond the implied obligation to use the premises in a tenantlike manner<sup>7</sup>.

1 See PARA 431 et seq post.

2 Horsefall v Mather (1815) Holt NP 7; Marsden v Edward Heyes Ltd [1927] 2 KB 1, CA. The extent of this obligation is not entirely clear, but the tenant is certainly under a continuing obligation to repair acts which would amount to voluntary waste: Marsden v Edward Heyes Ltd supra at 8 per Atkin LJ. In Warren v Keen [1954] 1 QB 15 at 20, [1953] 2 All ER 1118 at 1121, CA, Denning LJ said that the obligation to use the premises in a tenantlike manner meant that the tenant 'must take proper care of the place' and 'must do the little jobs about the place which a reasonable tenant would do'. It is not a breach of the obligation for a tenant to fail to lag water-pipes or to turn off the mains and drain the system when going away for two nights: Wycombe Health Authority v Barnett (1982) 47 P & CR 394, 5 HLR 84, CA.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(2) TENANT'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE LANDLORD/(i) Repair and Rebuilding/428. Tenant's liability to rebuild after fire.

428. Tenant's liability to rebuild after fire.

At common law, the tenant was liable to rebuild or repair if the house was destroyed or damaged by fire unless the burning was by lightning or act of God, because, unless the tenant repaired the damage within a convenient time, he committed waste<sup>1</sup>. No distinction was made between accidental fires and fires caused by negligence<sup>2</sup>. By statute, however, no claim may be maintained against any person in whose house or other building any fire accidentally<sup>3</sup> begins, but this is without prejudice to any contract between landlord and tenant<sup>4</sup>; and consequently, where the fire is accidental and there is no contractual liability on the tenant to rebuild, he is not obliged to do so<sup>5</sup>.

A tenant may himself bring a claim against an undertenant for the negligent destruction of the premises by fire<sup>6</sup>; but to maintain a claim he must have had a reversionary interest in the house at the time of the fire; and where the tenant has assigned his interest, he may not maintain such a claim against an assignee<sup>7</sup>.

2 According to Sir E Coke, burning of the house by negligence or mischance is waste: Co Litt 53b.

3 'Accidentally' in the statute is opposed to 'negligently'; and the statute does not apply where the fire is the result of negligence: Balfour v Barty-King [1957] 1 QB 496, [1957] 1 All ER 156, CA. Nor does it apply where a fire is lighted intentionally and mischief results to the demised buildings or to buildings or other property on adjoining premises: Filliter v Phippard (1847) 11 QB 347. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(2) TENANT'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE LANDLORD/(i) Repair and Rebuilding/429. Obligation to repair fences.

429. Obligation to repair fences.

Tenants for years are liable for permissive waste, but not tenants at will or tenants from year to year<sup>1</sup>. Notwithstanding this distinction, however, it is the duty of the actual occupier of land to repair the fences; and for this purpose he may take sufficient wood<sup>2</sup>. Without any agreement to that effect the landlord may bring a claim against his tenant for not repairing, on the ground of the injury done to the reversion<sup>3</sup>. Moreover, if injury is caused to a third person through non-repair of the fences, the remedy is against the occupier and not the owner, unless the fences were out of repair when the land was let<sup>4</sup>, or unless the owner has undertaken to repair the fences<sup>5</sup>. Where damage is caused as a result of the escape of animals from one farm to another, it is no defence for the owner of the animals to show that the person who has suffered the damage was under a covenant with his landlord to repair the fences between the two farms<sup>6</sup>.

Where on land adjoining a highway there is a fence made with barbed wire, or having barbed wire in or on it, and the wire is a nuisance to the highway, the highway authority and, where it is not the highway authority, the local authority for the area in which the highway is situated may require the occupier of the land to abate the nuisance<sup>7</sup>.

430. Obligation to preserve boundaries.

The relation of landlord and tenant imposes on the tenant as part of the contract an obligation to preserve boundaries and not to permit them to be destroyed so that the landlord's land can no longer be distinguished<sup>1</sup>. If, therefore, the tenant has allowed a boundary to become indistinct, the landlord is entitled during the term to have the boundary ascertained by the court<sup>2</sup>; and, where the tenant's own land lies alongside that of the landlord and at the end of the tenancy the tenant is unable to render up specifically the landlord's land as the true boundary cannot be ascertained, he must restore to the landlord land of the same value as the demised premises<sup>3</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(2) TENANT'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE LANDLORD/(ii) Liability for Waste/431. Nature of waste.

(ii) Liability for Waste

431. Nature of waste.

Waste consists of any act or omission which causes a lasting alteration to the nature of the land in question to the prejudice of the person who has the remainder or reversion of the land<sup>1</sup>. The obligation not to commit waste is an obligation in tort, and is independent of contract or implied covenant<sup>2</sup>.

Waste is either voluntary or permissive. Voluntary waste implies the doing of some act which tends to the destruction of the premises, as, for example, by pulling down houses, or removing fixtures which the tenant is not entitled to remove or removing fixtures which the tenant is entitled to remove without making good the damage<sup>3</sup>; or to the changing of their nature<sup>4</sup>, as, for example, the conversion of pasture land into arable<sup>5</sup>, or pulling down buildings and erecting new buildings, even though of greater value<sup>6</sup>. Permissive waste implies an omission through which damage results to the premises, as, for example, where houses are allowed to fall into decay<sup>7</sup>.

In order to constitute voluntary waste by destruction of the premises, the destruction must be wilful or negligent; but the destruction of a building in the course of using it in what was apparently a reasonable and proper manner, having regard to its character and to the purposes for which it was intended to be used, is not waste<sup>8</sup>.

1 2 Bl Com (14th Edn) 281.

2 The obligation is, therefore, not excluded if there is an express covenant dealing with the same matter: Kinlyside v Thornton (1776) 2 Wm Bl 1111; Marker v Kenrick (1853) 13 CB 188; sed quaere: see the judgment of Kerr LJ in Mancetter Developments Ltd v Garmanson Ltd [1986] QB 1212, [1986] 1 All ER 449, CA. One consequence of the liability being tortious is that a company director may be vicariously liable for acts of waste carried out on his directions: Mancetter Developments Ltd v Garmanson Ltd supra.

There can be no partition of a leasehold house, since this would require interference with doors and walls: North v Guinan (1829) Beat 342. ### 432. Meliorating waste.

Although changing the nature of the demised premises is technically waste, this is not so if the change has been expressly sanctioned by the landlord<sup>1</sup>. It seems that an act does not constitute waste unless it is in fact injurious to the inheritance, either by diminishing the value of the estate, or by increasing the burden upon it, or by impairing the evidence of title<sup>2</sup>. At any rate, in the case of acts which may be technically waste but in fact improve the inheritance ('meliorating waste'), the court will not interfere to restrain them by injunction<sup>3</sup>, nor will they be a ground of forfeiture under a proviso for re-entry on commission of waste<sup>4</sup>. Apart, however, from acts done in exercise of statutory authority<sup>5</sup>, a substantial alteration in the character of the demised premises will be treated as waste and restrained by injunction, notwithstanding that the value may be thereby increased<sup>6</sup>; and the tenant is not entitled to pull down a house and build another which the landlord dislikes<sup>7</sup>, or to convert a dwelling house into a shop<sup>8</sup>.

1 Meux v Copley [1892] 2 Ch 253 at 262. In general, the consent of the landlord to an act of waste saves the tenant from the consequences of waste, such as forfeiture, even though the tenant has failed to comply with a condition that he should repair the damage due to the waste: Doe d Wood v Morris (1809) 2 Taunt 52.

2 Doe d Grubb v Earl Burlington (1833) 5 B & Ad 507 at 517 (pulling down a barn held not to be waste); approved in Jones v Chappell (1875) LR 20 Eq 539 (erection of new buildings held not to be waste); but see the text and notes 3-8 infra. The evidence of title is affected if the identity of the property is destroyed; but this has been said to be 'a very peculiar head of the law, which has not been extended in modern times': Jones v Chappell supra at 542. Indeed, having regard to the improved means of identifying a property by plans, the supposed injury to title is now a 'theoretical absurdity' (Doherty v Allman (1878) 3 App Cas 709 at 735, HL, per Lord Blackburn) and can have no application in the case of registered land. As to the register of title see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 811 et seq.

433. Accidental injury.

As the liability for waste is a liability created by law, the tenant is not liable for loss caused by inevitable accident, as, for example, where a house is destroyed by accidental fire or tempest; but, where the liability arises by contract, the tenant in such cases is liable<sup>1</sup>. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(2) TENANT'S OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS THE LANDLORD/(ii) Liability for Waste/434. Extent of tenant's liability for waste.

434. Extent of tenant's liability for waste.

The liability of a tenant for waste, apart from covenant, depends upon the nature of his tenancy<sup>1</sup>. A tenant at will is not liable for either voluntary or permissive waste as such<sup>2</sup>, although as voluntary waste terminates the tenancy, and renders him liable in trespass<sup>3</sup>, he is in fact liable for damage to the premises caused by his own wilful act<sup>4</sup>.

Tenants for years, or from year to year, or for any other period, are liable for voluntary waste, whether committed by themselves or any other person, since, if it is committed by another, they are presumed to be able to prevent it, and it is their duty to do so<sup>5</sup>.

It has also been held that a tenant for years is liable for permissive waste<sup>6</sup> and, therefore, is apparently obliged to do such repairs as are necessary to preserve the premises in as good a state as at the beginning of the tenancy; but it is doubtful whether a tenant from year to year is so liable<sup>7</sup>. His liability probably extends only as far as the duty to use the premises in a tenantlike manner<sup>8</sup>. Certainly a tenant from year to year must not commit any waste<sup>9</sup>; but he is not liable to do substantial repairs, such as to reroof the house, or to renew main timbers<sup>10</sup>, nor need he make good the results of ordinary wear and tear, as, for example, by replacing doors, windows or stairs worn out with age<sup>11</sup>. A weekly tenant is not liable for permissive waste<sup>12</sup>.

1 At common law there was no action for waste, either voluntary or permissive, against a tenant, whether for life, or years, or from year to year or at will, the reason being that the tenant took the land by the act of the landlord, and it was the folly of the landlord not to restrain the waste by express covenant: Countess of Shrewsbury's Case (1600) 5 Co Rep 13b, 2 Co Inst 300. The liability for waste in the case of tenants was first imposed by 52 Hen 3 (Statute of Marlborough) (1267) c 23, frequently referred to as the Statute of Marlbridge, and the writ of waste, under which the tenant was liable to forfeiture and treble damages, was introduced by 6 Edw 1 (Statute of Gloucester) (1278) c 5 (repealed by the Civil Procedure Acts Repeal Act 1879). An action on the case was in practice substituted for the writ of waste, which was abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act 1833 s 36 (repealed); but it was only the remedy that was changed, the rights and liabilities of the parties remaining as before (see notes to 2 Wms Saund (1871 Edn) 644, 651; Bacon v Smith (1841) 1 QB 345). Apparently the above statutes extended to permissive, as well as voluntary waste: see note 6 infra.

2 52 Hen 3 (Statute of Marlborough) (1267) c 23 applies to 'fermors during their term'. The word 'fermors' is equivalent to tenants, but in the case of a tenant at will there is no term: see PARA 198 ante.

3 Countess of Shrewsbury's Case (1600) 5 Co Rep 13b. There is no modern case in which a tenancy has been held to have been determined in this manner, and this aspect of the law of waste is so feudal in its concepts as to make it doubtful whether a tenancy does so determine under the modern law of landlord and tenant.

4 Thus a tenant at will is not liable for permissive waste: see Panton v Isham (1701) 3 Lev 359 (destruction by negligently keeping fire); Harnett v Maitland (1847) 16 M & W 257.

5 See Attersoll v Stevens (1808) 1 Taunt 183 at 196; 2 Wms Saund (1871 Edn) 658 note (m). The liability on a covenant to repair and the liability for voluntary waste are distinct: Edge v Pemberton (1843) 12 M & W 187.

6 This is in accordance with 52 Hen 3 (Statute of Marlborough) (1267) c 23, if Sir E Coke was right in saying that that statute applied to permissive waste (2 Co Inst 145); and it seems to be the better opinion (Harnett v Maitland (1847) 16 M & W 257; Yellowly v Gower (1855) 11 Exch 274 at 294; Davies v Davies (1888) 38 ChD 499; contra Jones v Hill (1817) 7 Taunt 392). The same reasoning would, however, make tenants for life liable (Yellowly v Gower supra; Barnes v Dowling (1881) 44 LT 809, DC), but it has been held that they are not liable (Re Cartwright, Avis v Newman (1889) 41 ChD 532; and see Powys v Blagrove (1854) 4 De GM & G 448). If, however, a tenancy for life is created on condition of keeping the premises in repair, the tenant is liable for permissive waste by reason of the condition apart from the statute: Woodhouse v Walker (1880) 5 QBD 404; and see SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 995.

7 In Torriano v Young (1833) 6 C & P 8 it was held that a tenant from year to year was not liable for permissive waste. Cf Yellowly v Gower (1855) 11 Exch 274 where it was, however, stated that the liability of the tenant was 'much limited'. See also Martin v Gilham (1837) 7 Ad & El 540.

435. Remedies.

Whether the liability of the tenant is founded on waste or on implied contract, it may be enforced either by an injunction or damages. Damages may be given for waste completed at the time of the beginning of the proceedings; and an injunction may be granted against further waste<sup>1</sup>. An injunction may be obtained at the suit of the landlord against an undertenant, but, unless given in lieu of an injunction, damages may, it seems, be recovered only against the immediate tenant<sup>2</sup>. To obtain an injunction against waste, it is necessary to show that the waste will cause substantial injury to the reversion<sup>3</sup>, although damages may be given in a case where an injunction would be refused<sup>4</sup>.

A claim for waste is a claim in respect of a tort<sup>5</sup>. The measure of damages is accordingly the injury to the reversioner<sup>6</sup>, and it is measured by considering the depreciation of the selling value of the reversioner's interest<sup>7</sup>. A claim may be brought after the expiration of the term for waste done during the term<sup>8</sup>; and, where a tenant holds over after the expiration of notice to quit and commits waste, the landlord's reversionary estate is treated as continuing, so as to entitle him to sue for the waste<sup>9</sup>.

2 See CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 440.

3 See PARA 432 ante.

4 See CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 364, 366. If, however, the damages are merely nominal, judgment will be entered for the defendant: Governors etc of Harrow School v Alderton (1800) 2 Bos & P 86; Doherty v Allman (1878) 3 App Cas 709 at 725, 733. In cases on 6 Edw 1 (Statute of Gloucester) (1278) c 5 (repealed), a judgment for the plaintiff would have involved a forfeiture, and this seems to have been the reason for refusing him judgment; but the fact that the injury was nominal would seem to show that there was no actionable waste: Rigg v Parsons (1801) cited in 2 East at 156.

5 Defries v Milne [1913] 1 Ch 98, CA. The action (now known as a 'claim': see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 18) must be supported by specific evidence as to the particulars of dilapidations: Smith v Douglas (1855) 16 CB 31.

6 Whitham v Kershaw (1886) 16 QBD 613 at 617, 618, CA. Cf paras 459-460 post. Even where the premises have themselves not been damaged, as, for example, where a new outer door is built without weakening the house, the possibility of injury to the reversion must still be considered: see Young v Spencer (1829) 10 B & C 145 (where, however, the only injury specified was injury to the evidence of title). REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/436. Covenant construed with reference to original condition of premises.

(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR

436. Covenant construed with reference to original condition of premises.

Every covenant to repair must be construed primarily according to the words used<sup>1</sup>, but having regard to the age and nature of the premises at the commencement of the lease<sup>2</sup>. In the case, however, of a covenant by the tenant for general repair, such as a covenant to repair the demised premises and to yield them up in good and substantial repair and condition<sup>3</sup>, or to keep and leave them in good and tenantable order and repair<sup>4</sup>, or as often as occasion requires well and substantially to repair, uphold and keep them, and the same so well and substantially repaired, upheld and kept to yield up at the end of the term<sup>5</sup>, the particular form of words used is immaterial so long as it plainly expresses the intention that the premises are to be repaired, kept in repair and yielded up in repair<sup>6</sup>. In each case the obligation upon the tenant is to keep and deliver up the premises he has taken in a state of repair proper for such premises<sup>7</sup>; and the tenant may, therefore, be liable to put the premises into a better condition than they were in at the time of the letting<sup>8</sup>.

Where the premises were old at the time of the demise, the tenant must keep and deliver them up in a fit state of repair as old premises. He is under no duty under his covenant to bring the premises up to date<sup>9</sup>; but the fact that the premises happen to be old in no way relieves him from the burden of his covenant. If, in order to comply with his covenant, it is necessary that he should replace part after part until the whole is replaced, he is obliged to do so<sup>10</sup>; but, provided that he keeps the premises in a habitable condition, he is not responsible for such deterioration as the premises may suffer as a result of the natural operation of the elements and the passage of time<sup>11</sup>. It is not, however, an absolute rule that a covenant to repair carries with it a duty not to destroy the subject matter of the lease<sup>12</sup>.

Even if statutory regulations prevent a tenant from complying with his repairing covenant, he remains liable, unless they provide to the contrary, in damages for breach of covenant<sup>13</sup>; but, if the illegality is supervening, that is say, the regulations were not in force at the date the covenant was entered into, the tenant may be able to rely on the doctrine of frustration by way of defence<sup>14</sup>.

The test of material compliance with a covenant to repair is an objective one; and materiality is to be assessed by reference to the ability of the landlord to relet or sell the property without delay or additional expenditure. There is no justification for attributing to the parties an intention that the insertion of the word 'material' in a break clause allowing for notice of termination by the tenants if they have materially complied with their covenants is intended to permit only trivial or trifling breaches; and in this context 'material compliance' and 'substantial compliance' may be regarded as interchangeable, whereas 'reasonable' connotes a different test<sup>15</sup>.

1 'The sole duty of the court is to give proper and full effect to each word used': Lurcott v Wakely and Wheeler [1911] 1 KB 905 at 915, CA, per Fletcher Moulton LJ; approved in Anstruther-Gough-Calthorpe v McOscar [1924] 1 KB 716 at 713, CA, per Atkin LJ. Thus 'amend', 'renew' and 'keep in good condition' are capable of going beyond repair: (Credit Suisse v Beegas Nominees Ltd [1994] 4 All ER 803, [1994] 1 EGLR 76); and 'good condition' in a repairing obligation is intended to mark a separate concept and to make a significant addition to that conveyed by the word 'repair', and is not restricted to good structural condition (Welsh v Greenwich London Borough Council (2000) 81 P & CR 144, [2000] 3 EGLR 41, CA). See also Mason v TotalFinaElf UK Ltd [2003] EWHC 1604 (Ch), [2003] 3 EGLR 91, [2003] All ER (D) 191 (Jul). In Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v British Railways Board [1987] 2 EGLR 137 a covenant 'to rebuild, reconstruct or replace when necessary' the demised premises in a 150-year lease was held to impose a heavier obligation than a mere covenant to repair; as was a covenant 'to renew or replace whenever necessary' in New England Properties v Portsmouth New Shops, Sterling Surveys v New England Properties, New England Properties v Ex-Electronics (UK) Ltd (1993) 67 P & CR 141, [1993] 1 EGLR 84. See also Dickinson v St Aubyn [1944] KB 454, [1944] 1 All ER 370, CA (covenant to repair in last quarter inoperative because of exercise of option to break).

Where a lease appears to give rise to mutual repairing covenants, which is deeply impractical, it ought to be construed to avoid any such overlap unless it is impossible to do so: Petersson v Pitt Place (Epsom) Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 86, (2001) 82 P & CR 276, [2001] All ER (D) 114 (Jan) (roof terraces excluded from the 'main structure' of the premises in order to give repairing covenants a meaning which avoided dual liability); and see Ibrahim v Dovecorn Reversions Ltd (2001) 82 P & CR 362, [2001] 2 EGLR 46; cf Delgable Ltd v Perinpanathan [2005] EWCA Civ 1724, [2006] 1 EGLR 78, [2005] All ER (D) 208 (Dec) (cost of roof repair correctly apportioned between parties).

In order to undertake the repairs in that case, the tenants would have had to move their mainframe computer; they wished to carry out the repairs at the end of the tenancy and refused access to the landlord in order to carry out the repairs; in subsequent proceedings the court refused to grant an injunction to the landlord and awarded damages as the appropriate remedy: see Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council v Creska Ltd (1999) 78 P & CR D46, [1999] All ER (D) 644. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/437. Meaning of 'repair'; inherent defects; improvements.

437. Meaning of 'repair'; inherent defects; improvements.

Before liability can arise under a repairing covenant, the subject matter of the covenant must have deteriorated so as to be in a condition worse than it was at some earlier time<sup>1</sup>. Repair has been said to connote the idea of making good damage<sup>2</sup>. Thus, a covenant to repair the structure does not oblige the covenantor to remedy a design fault which does not result in damage to the structure<sup>3</sup>; and an element in a building may not perform its function but nevertheless not be out of repair<sup>4</sup>. If the building is in no worse condition than when it was built, it will not be held to be in disrepair<sup>5</sup>.

A design defect of the above kind, that is to say, one which does not result in damage to the subject matter of the covenant, must be distinguished from a defect which does cause such damage<sup>6</sup>. There is no rule in English law by which a tenant is excused from liability to repair merely because the need for the work results from an inherent defect<sup>7</sup>. If the covenant bites, repairing the damage often involves curing the cause of the defect, and in so doing improving the property to some extent, if to do so would accord with proper building practice or be required by modern building standards or be necessary to do the job properly once and for all<sup>8</sup>.

Where, however, the defects in the property are serious and the remedial works required very expensive, the question can arise whether the works fall within the scope of the repairing covenant or whether they are to be categorised as improvements rather than repair. It has been said that, however large the words of the covenant might be, a covenant to repair a house is not a covenant to give a different thing from that which the tenant took when he entered into the covenant<sup>9</sup>. The dividing line is difficult to draw in theoretical and general terms. It has been said that the question is one of fact and degree and that the correct approach is to look at the particular building, to look at the precise terms of the lease, and then to come to a conclusion as to whether, on a fair interpretation of those terms in relation to that state, the requisite work can fairly be termed repair. However large the covenant is, it must not be looked at in isolation<sup>10</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/438. Factors distinguishing repairs from improvements.

438. Factors distinguishing repairs from improvements.

To assist in drawing the distinction between works which amount to repair and those which do not, the courts have identified a number of factors. Repair has been said to be restoration by renewal or replacement of subsidiary parts of a whole; whereas renewal, as distinct from repair, is reconstruction of the entirety, meaning by entirety not necessarily the whole but substantially the whole subject matter under discussion<sup>1</sup>. Thus, where the demised building is erected on inherently defective foundations, the tenant is not liable to substitute new foundations<sup>2</sup>. Similarly, where a drain is unsuitable and the local authority constructs a new one, this is not an expense which falls on the tenant under a covenant to repair drains<sup>3</sup>; and in general he is not liable for the cost of improvements in the original structure of a house, such as the mode of laying joists, which the landlord effects in making repairs<sup>4</sup> nor, where he has undertaken to repair a road of one kind, is he liable if the landlord converts it into a road requiring repairs of a different nature<sup>5</sup> and regard must always be had to the condition of the road in estimating the tenant's liability<sup>6</sup>. Although under his covenant to repair the tenant is not bound to improve the building so as to give the landlord something different from what he demised, the tenant must, however, do such repairs as are suitable for the building having regard to its age and class at the time of the demise<sup>7</sup>; and he must replace any parts, including the floors or roof or external walls, which become defective or dangerous owing to the lapse of time or the effect of the elements<sup>8</sup>.

Three different tests may be discerned from the authorities, which may be applied separately or concurrently as the circumstances of the individual case may demand; but all are to be approached in the light of the nature and age of the premises, their condition when the tenant went into occupation and the other express terms of the tenancy<sup>9</sup>:

- 989 (1) whether the alterations go to the whole or substantially the whole of the structure or only to a subsidiary part<sup>10</sup>;
- 990 (2) whether the effect of the alterations is to produce a building of a wholly different character from that which had been let<sup>11</sup>;
- 991 (3) what was the cost of the works in relation to the previous value of the building, and what was their effect upon the value and lifespan of the building<sup>12</sup>.

Relevant factors have been said to include:

- 992 (a) the nature of the building;
- 993 (b) the terms of the lease;
- 994 (c) the state of the building at the date of the lease;
- 995 (d) the nature and extent of the defect sought to be remedied;
- 996 (e) the nature, extent and cost of the proposed remedial works;
- 997 (f) at whose expense the proposed remedial works are to be done;
- 998 (g) the value of the building and its expected lifespan;
- 999 (h) the effect of the works on such value and lifespan;
- 1000 (i) current building practice;
- 1001 (j) the likelihood of a recurrence if one remedy rather than another is adopted;
and
- 1002 (k) the comparative cost of alternative remedial works and their impact on the use and enjoyment of the building by the occupants<sup>13</sup>.

441. Standard of repair.

If he has expressly covenanted to put a house into tenantable repair and to keep it in such repair, and it is not in tenantable repair at the commencement of the tenancy, the tenant must do the necessary repairs, notwithstanding that the building is thereby put in a better condition than when the landlord let it<sup>1</sup>. The effect is the same if, without expressly covenanting to put it into repair, the tenant covenants only to keep the house in tenantable repair. Such a covenant presupposes putting the housing in such repair, and keeping it in repair during the term<sup>2</sup>. The construction of the covenant is the same whether the covenant specifies 'tenantable' or 'habitable' or 'good' repair<sup>3</sup>. A general covenant to repair without any such words is satisfied if the premises are kept in a substantial state of repair<sup>4</sup>.

The repairs which must be done in order to keep a house in tenantable repair vary according to the circumstances of the building. Good tenantable repair is such a repair as, having regard to the age, character and locality of the house, would make it reasonably fit for the occupation of a reasonably minded tenant who would be likely to take it<sup>5</sup>; accordingly the tenant must do such repairs as are necessary to preserve the premises and to make them suitable for a new tenant; he is not, however, relieved from his liabilities by reason of a deterioration in the neighbourhood since the time of the demise. He has to do such repairs as will make the house reasonably fit for occupation by a tenant who would have been likely to occupy it at the time of the demise<sup>6</sup>.

The tenant must do both outside and inside painting at suitable times<sup>7</sup>, but he is not necessarily bound to repaper and paint throughout the house at the end of the term<sup>8</sup>, or to leave the house in the same state of decorative repair as when he took it<sup>9</sup>. Where the landlord is liable to carry out structural repairs and, in doing so, he damages the decorations, he is liable to make good the damage to the decorations<sup>10</sup>.

Covenants of this nature must be reasonably construed. The landlord may not claim for slight defects<sup>11</sup>, and, under a covenant to repair and paint, the tenant is not bound to fill up cracks in plaster and holes made by nails within the period for redecorating<sup>12</sup>. An actual omission to repair is not excused because the tenant has employed persons upon whom in good faith he relied to do the repairs<sup>13</sup>. In general it is for the covenantor to decide how to carry out the repair<sup>14</sup>. Thus, if the landlord covenants to repair a roof and it can reasonably be done either by patching or replacing it, the tenant cannot complain at the method chosen<sup>15</sup>.

1 A covenant to put premises into repair 'forthwith' is performed if the repairs are done with reasonable speed: Doe d Pittman v Sutton (1841) 9 C & P 706; Belcher v M'Intosh (1839) 8 C & P 720 (habitable repair).

- 3 Proudfoot v Hart (1890) 25 QBD 42 at 51, CA. Under a covenant to do 'necessary repairs', the tenant must do all repairs which are necessary during the term (Truscott v Diamond Rock Boring Co (1882) 20 ChD 251, CA). In Firstcross Ltd v Teasdale (1982) 47 P & CR 228, 8 HLR 112 a distinction was drawn between 'good habitable repair' and 'good tenantable condition' which in a letting for three months of a furnished flat was held to impose a duty merely to use the premises in a tenantlike manner as in Warren v Keen [1954] 1 QB 15, [1953] 2 All ER 1118, CA.

- 6 Anstruther-Gough-Calthorpe v McOscar [1924] 1 KB 716, CA (character of the neighbourhood had deteriorated since the demise; tenant contended unsuccessfully that he had only to leave the house in a condition fit for the class of tenant who would then be likely to reside in it). There is no support in the decided authorities for the 'commercial life' concept in construing, and therefore limiting, a tenant's repairing obligations: Ladbroke Hotels Ltd v Sandhu (1995) 72 P & CR 498, [1995] 2 EGLR 92.
- 7 Monk v Noyes (1824) 1 C & P 265 (covenant 'substantially to repair, uphold and maintain' requires inside painting to be done). Leases often contain provision that the tenant is to paint the premises at specified times; and, where the covenant specifies that the premises are to be painted in a certain year if the lease last so long, the tenant must paint if the lease is subsisting at the beginning of that year, even though the lease is determined in the course of the year: Kirklington v Wood [1917] 1 KB 332.

- 9 Crawford v Newton (1886) 36 WR 54, CA. Under a covenant to keep a house in tenantable repair, the tenant must repaint as necessary in order to preserve internal woodwork from decay (Crawford v Newton supra); but it seems that the obligation may go further than this and include certain internal repainting or decoration according to the character of the house concerned and the neighbourhood in which it is situated (Proudfoot v Hart (1890) 25 QBD 42 at 54, CA). The tenant is not bound to repaper merely because the old paper has worn out, the position being different if it has peeled off the walls; and, if he repapers, he need not put up paper of the same quality as that which he found on the walls (Proudfoot v Hart supra at 53-54).

PARAS 1386-2000)/10. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/442. Exception of fair wear and tear.

442. Exception of fair wear and tear.

The effect of an exception of damage or dilapidations resulting from fair wear and tear from a covenant to keep in good repair and condition depends upon the particular words of the covenant to be construed<sup>1</sup>, and, if proof is given that the premises are not in good repair and condition, the onus is on the tenant to prove that the matters complained of result from the fair wear and tear excepted<sup>2</sup>. If fair or reasonable wear and tear are excepted, the tenant is not bound to make good dilapidations caused by the friction of the air and by exposure and ordinary use<sup>3</sup>; but the exception does not mean that, if there is a defect originally proceeding from fair wear and tear, he is released from his obligation to keep in good repair and condition everything which it may be possible to trace ultimately to that defect. The tenant is bound to do such repairs as may be required to prevent the consequences flowing originally from fair wear and tear from producing others which wear and tear would not directly produce<sup>4</sup>.

The question whether wear and tear is fair or reasonable is not affected by the amount of the dilapidation<sup>5</sup>. If the passage of time and the operation of the elements have a more deteriorating effect than usual because of the original unsoundness of the premises, the tenant is not liable for the resulting dilapidations<sup>6</sup>.

443. Destruction of premises.

If the lease contains a covenant by the tenant to repair, without exception of damage by fire or other exceptional cause, he is bound to rebuild or repair the premises should they be destroyed or injured during the term<sup>1</sup>. In the absence of words expressly or impliedly fixing a time for the performance of the covenant, the tenant has such time as is reasonable in all the circumstances of the case for performance of the covenant, whether this time does or does not extend beyond the term of the tenancy<sup>2</sup>.

If the tenant's liability on the covenant requires him only to leave the premises in the same state as when he entered, and the rebuilding will increase the value, the damages will be assessed by deducting the amount of such increase from the cost of rebuilding<sup>3</sup>. An exception of damage by fire in the covenant to repair exempts the tenant from liability to rebuild, but does not exempt him from payment of rent<sup>4</sup>.

It is common to find a provision in the lease that rent is to be suspended in the event of the premises becoming unusable by virtue of destruction by fire<sup>5</sup>.

The liability on the covenant to repair is not limited by a covenant by the tenant to insure, and he may have to expend a greater sum than the amount of the insurance: Digby v Atkinson supra. It has been held that destruction of the premises before the tenant could take possession would be no defence to a claim on the agreement to take a lease (see Phillipson v Leigh (1795) 1 Esp 398) but it would seem that the doctrine of frustration might now apply (see National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675, [1981] 1 All ER 161, HL; and PARAS 274-276 ante). REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/444. Repair of buildings erected subsequent to demise.

444. Repair of buildings erected subsequent to demise.

A covenant to repair may expressly extend to buildings erected subsequently to the demise<sup>1</sup>; but, even without express mention of such buildings, a covenant to repair the demised premises extends to all things which are for the time being a part of the premises included in the lease<sup>2</sup>. Consequently the covenant extends to additional buildings<sup>3</sup> and to fixtures<sup>4</sup>. The words used in the lease may, however, show a contrary intention, so that a covenant to repair 'the demised buildings' applies only to buildings existing at the time of the demise<sup>5</sup>, and a covenant to leave the demised premises with all new erections well repaired applies only to the new erections<sup>6</sup>. A covenant to repair and yield up in repair, expressed in such terms that it extends to all fixtures, deprives the tenant of his ordinary right to remove tenant's fixtures<sup>7</sup>.

446. Covenant to rebuild.

A covenant which binds the tenant specifically to rebuild is not satisfied by merely repairing; and so, where such a covenant extends to several houses, it is not sufficient for the tenant to rebuild some and repair others<sup>1</sup>. If, however, the covenant is a general covenant to repair houses and to rebuild within a specified time as occasion may require, it is enough if the tenant repairs so as to make the houses substantially as good as new<sup>2</sup>. A covenant to pull down a house and build a new one does not require that the new one should be similar in construction and elevation to the old one<sup>3</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/447. Covenant conditional upon landlord's putting premises in repair.

447. Covenant conditional upon landlord's putting premises in repair.

The liability of the tenant to repair may be made conditional upon the landlord's first putting the premises in repair<sup>1</sup>, or upon his doing some other act, such as providing materials for repair<sup>2</sup>. In the former case the complete performance of the condition by the landlord is essential to make the tenant liable for the repair of any part of the premises<sup>3</sup>; and in the latter case it is sufficient if the landlord is ready to supply the materials when required<sup>4</sup>. If the putting of the premises in repair or the provision of materials by the landlord is expressed in the lease in such a way as merely to qualify the tenant's liability to repair, the tenant has no right of action against the landlord for failure either to put the premises in repair or to provide materials<sup>5</sup>.

The lease may, however, be so expressed that the landlord has covenanted to put the premises in repair or to provide materials, in which case the tenant may sue for breach of covenant on the landlord's default<sup>6</sup>.

Whether the landlord has so covenanted or the tenant's liability is merely qualified depends in each case on the wording of the lease, but the lease may be expressed in such words as to amount both to a qualification of the tenant's liability and to a covenant by the landlord<sup>7</sup>.

448. Repair to surveyor's satisfaction.

If the tenant covenants to do work, whether of repair<sup>1</sup> or of building<sup>2</sup>, to the satisfaction of a surveyor to be appointed by the landlord, such appointment is a condition precedent to the tenant's liability; but it has been held that, where work is to be done subject to the superintendence of specified persons, such superintendence is not a condition precedent<sup>3</sup>. Where a surveyor is appointed and expresses dissatisfaction, there is no breach of the covenant on the tenant's part if in fact the surveyor ought to have been satisfied<sup>4</sup>. Any term which provides that a surveyor's decision or certificate is to be binding on a question of law is void as being contrary to public policy, as it purports to oust the jurisdiction of the courts<sup>5</sup>.

The requirement that repair work is to be done to the satisfaction of the landlord's surveyor means that the surveyor can prescribe what work is to be done, provided that he exercises his own judgment and comes to an honest view of what is required to make good a want of repair or absence of good condition; and if the tenant makes no attempt to ascertain the requirements of the landlord's surveyor before the expiry of the tenancy, it cannot object to the communication of the surveyor's requirements after that date<sup>6</sup>.

449. Notice of breach of covenant to repair.

Formerly it was usual to insert in the lease a general covenant by the tenant to repair, and also a covenant to repair on notice; that is, to do within a prescribed time repairs covered by the general covenant, of which the landlord should give notice<sup>1</sup>. Such covenants, if grammatically separate, were construed as independent covenants<sup>2</sup>, the first being broken by the mere want of repair<sup>3</sup>, and the second by the failure to comply with the notice. A notice given in accordance with the second covenant, that is, to repair specified defects within the prescribed time, operated as a waiver of any forfeiture for breach of the general covenant<sup>4</sup>; but, if the notice departed from the terms of the second covenant, and required repair 'forthwith'<sup>5</sup>, or 'in accordance with the covenants of the lease'<sup>6</sup>, it was deemed to be given under the general covenant, although not strictly necessary, and there was no waiver. Where the covenant is a covenant to repair on notice and to leave in repair at the end of the term, these constitute distinct liabilities and notice is not necessary to enable the landlord to sue on the covenant at the end of the term<sup>7</sup>.

Modern leases commonly contain a term entitling the landlord to enter to inspect the state of the premises, to give notice to the tenant of any want of repair so found, to enter to execute the necessary works if the tenant does not do so and to recover the costs thereof as a debt. A landlord's claim for reimbursement under such a clause is a claim in debt for reimbursement of sums spent in carrying out the repairs himself and not a claim for damages<sup>8</sup> and is not therefore subject to the statutory restrictions applicable to damages for breach of a repairing covenant<sup>9</sup>.

The landlord is now precluded by statute<sup>10</sup> from enforcing any right of re-entry or forfeiture for breach of a covenant to repair unless he has first given to the tenant<sup>11</sup> notice specifying the nature of the breach and has allowed a reasonable time for the execution of repairs<sup>12</sup>; and a right of re-entry or forfeiture for breach of a covenant or agreement to keep or put premises in repair during the currency of a lease, or to leave or put premises in repair at the termination of a lease, whether such covenant or agreement is express or implied, and whether general or specific, is not enforceable, by action or otherwise, unless the lessor proves that the fact that such a notice<sup>13</sup> had been served on the lessee was known either:

- 1024 (1) to the lessee; or
- 1025 (2) to an underlessee holding under an underlease which reserved a nominal reversion only to the lessee; or
- 1026 (3) to the person who last paid the rent due under the lease either on his own behalf or as agent for the lessee or underlessee<sup>14</sup>.

Negotiations by the tenant for the sale of his interest in the premises to the landlord suspend the notice during their currency unless a contrary intention is clearly demonstrated<sup>15</sup>.

11 For these purposes, 'the tenant' means a tenant who is in possession or has a subsisting tenancy at the time when proceedings are taken: Cusack-Smith v Gold [1958] 2 All ER 361, [1958] 1 WLR 611. If a notice is properly served on a tenant who later assigns, then, so far as the particular breaches are concerned, no further notice need be served on the assignee before beginning a claim for re-entry or forfeiture as against the assignee: Kanda v Church Comrs for England [1958] 1 QB 332, sub nom Church Comrs for England v Kanda [1957] 2 All ER 815, CA. Although a mortgagee by way of legal charge is a lessee for the purposes of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended), there is no obligation to serve notice upon a mortgagee: Church Comrs for England v Ve-Ri-Best Manufacturing Co Ltd [1957] 1 QB 238, [1956] 3 All ER 777. Where a notice is sent by special delivery or the recorded delivery service addressed to a person at his last-known place of abode in the United Kingdom, then that person is deemed, for these purposes, unless the contrary is proved, to have had knowledge of the fact that the notice had been served as from the time at which the letter would have been delivered in the ordinary course of post: s 18(2); and see the Recorded Delivery Service Act 1962 s 1 (as amended); and POST OFFICE vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARAS 116, 119. #### 450. Court's power to grant relief.

After a notice is served on a lessee<sup>1</sup> relating to the internal decorative repairs to a house or other building, he may apply to the court for relief; and, if the court is satisfied that the notice is unreasonable, having regard to all the circumstances of the case including in particular the length of the lessee's term or interest remaining unexpired, it may by order wholly or partially relieve the lessee from liability for such repairs<sup>2</sup>. The above provisions do not, however, apply:

- 1027 (1) where the liability arises under an express covenant or agreement to put the property in a decorative state of repair and the covenant or agreement has never been performed;
- 1028 (2) to any matter necessary or proper for putting or keeping the property in a sanitary condition, or for the maintenance or preservation of the structure;
- 1029 (3) to any statutory liability to keep a house in all respect reasonably fit for human habitation;
- 1030 (4) to any covenant or stipulation to yield up the house or other building in a specified state of repair at the end of the term<sup>3</sup>.

The county court has jurisdiction under the above provisions<sup>4</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease' includes an underlease and an agreement for a lease; and 'lessee' has a corresponding meaning and includes any person liable to effect the repairs: Law of Property Act 1925 s 147(3).

2 Ibid s 147(1). Section 147(1) applies whether the notice was served before, on or after 1 January 1926, and has effect notwithstanding any stipulation to the contrary: s 147(4). This special right to apply for relief is separate from the general right to apply for relief against forfeiture: see PARA 622 post.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/451. Covenants to put into and keep in repair.

451. Covenants to put into and keep in repair.

While a covenant to put premises into repair admits of only a single breach for which, when damages have been recovered, there is no further remedy on the covenant<sup>1</sup>, a breach of a covenant to keep in repair, if not made good, is a continuing breach<sup>2</sup>; and the recovery of damages in one claim does not prevent the recovery of damages in a subsequent claim, although in assessing damages in the subsequent claim the amount recovered in the first must be taken into account<sup>3</sup>. Under a covenant to keep in repair, the tenant is bound to have the premises at all times in proper repair; and, if they are out of repair, a claim may be brought at any time during the term<sup>4</sup>. If a breach is of a continuing nature, the landlord is not precluded from forfeiting a lease merely because he has in the past waived the right to forfeit by accepting rent with knowledge of that breach<sup>5</sup> nor, provided that there has been no significant change in the condition of the property, by the acceptance of rent after the service of the statutory notice<sup>6</sup>.

Where there is an express covenant to build within a fixed period and the tenant does not do so, there is only a single breach, which may be waived by the subsequent acceptance of rent<sup>7</sup>. Such a breach is, however, capable of remedy<sup>8</sup>. Where, in addition to such a covenant, there is a covenant to keep the buildings to be erected in repair, it cannot be claimed that the failure to build is a breach of the covenant to repair<sup>9</sup>.

1 Coward v Gregory (1866) LR 2 CP 153. Similarly a covenant by the landlord to make a new road within a year is finally broken on default at the end of the year: Morris v Kennedy [1896] 2 IR 247, Ir CA.

2 Where, after the notice to repair, the premises are condemned by the local authority and pulled down, there is a continuing breach until the demolition: Re Serle, Gregory v Serle [1898] 1 Ch 652. As to damages where the demised premises are compulsorily purchased in a dilapidated state see Re King, Robinson v Gray [1962] 2 All ER 66, [1962] 1 WLR 632; on appeal [1963] Ch 459, [1963] 1 All ER 781, CA.

3 Coward v Gregory (1866) LR 2 CP 153. In order that the claim for non-repair under the general covenant may be maintained, the premises must be out of repair at the beginning of the claim; hence, if the landlord does the repairs himself, he is unable to recover damages: Williams v Williams (1874) LR 9 CP 659; and see SEDAC Investments Ltd v Tanner [1982] 3 All ER 646, [1982] 1 WLR 1342. He may, however, be able to recover the expenses of repair if there is a special covenant to repair on notice, provided that proper notice has been given: Williams v Williams supra (underlandlord did repairs to avoid forfeiture of the head lease and then sued the undertenant). As to the recovery of the expenses of such repairs see Colley v Streeton (1823) 2 B & C 273; Joyner v Weeks [1891] 2 QB 31 (revsd on the facts [1891] 2 QB 31 at 43, CA). If the lease provides for the landlord to do the repairs and to recover the expenses of them, he waives his right to forfeit the lease if he demands the payment of such expenses: Doe d Baron and Baroness de Rutzen v Lewis (1836) 5 Ad & El 277. As to damages generally see PARAS 459-460 post.

4 Luxmore v Robson (1818) 1 B & Ald 584 at 585; and see the cases cited in PARA 441 note 2 ante. Where, however, a tenant is bound to repair and deliver up in repair at the end of the term, the removal of fixtures which he does not immediately replace is not a breach of the covenant if they can be replaced before the end of the term: Doe d Burrell v Davies (1851) 15 Jur 155.

A covenant in a lease to keep the demised premises in 'complete good and substantial repair and condition' which extends to the building as a whole obliges the landlord to keep the other parts of the building in which the demised premises were situated in repair at all times so that there is a breach of the repairing obligation in respect of those other parts immediately a defect occurs, and not (as is the case with the demised premises) at the later time when he has information about the existence of the defect and has failed to carry out the necessary works with reasonable expedition: British Telecommunications plc v Sun Life Assurance Society plc [1996] Ch 69, [1995] 4 All ER 44, CA. It may be otherwise if there is a specific term in the covenants that requires notice of disrepair to be given to the covenantor: see Ladsky v TSB Bank plc (1996) 74 P & CR 372, CA.

9 Stephens v Junior Army and Navy Stores Ltd [1914] 2 Ch 516, CA (express covenant to build held to exclude any implied obligation to build arising from the covenant to keep the buildings to be erected in repair). In Jacob v Down [1900] 2 Ch 156, Stirling J expressed the opinion obiter that in such circumstances there was a breach of the covenant to repair, but his opinion was the subject of criticism and not followed in Stephens v Junior Army and Navy Stores Ltd supra. In Bennett v Herring (1857) 3 CBNS 370 it was held that breach of a covenant to complete the erection of certain buildings was also a breach of a covenant to repair those buildings, but, in view of the decision in Stephens v Junior Army and Navy Stores Ltd supra, this case would seem of doubtful authority.

An assignor of a lease who by non-compliance with a notice to repair has rendered the lease liable to forfeiture is unable to make a good title under an open contract, even if the assignee has paid and the landlord has accepted rent from him after the contract but before completion: Re Martin, ex p Dixon (Trustee) v Tucker (1912) 106 LT 381.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/10. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/452. Covenant by landlord to repair.

452. Covenant by landlord to repair.

The liability of a landlord under a covenant on his part to repair is subject to the same rules of construction as a covenant by the tenant<sup>1</sup>. It has to be construed with reference to the state of the premises at the commencement of the demise; and the landlord is not bound to give to the tenant during the term a different thing from that which the tenant took from him at the commencement of the tenancy. Consequently, he is not bound to make good defects which affect the stability of the premises as a whole, and are due to some inherent fault<sup>2</sup>, although he may be liable to do repairs which were necessary at the date of the demise<sup>3</sup>. In the case of a building which was new when let, it has been held that the right comparison is between the premises contemplated by the parties at the date of the lease, as opposed to the premises as defectively designed, and the premises as damaged by the works<sup>4</sup>. The non-payment of rent<sup>5</sup> or service charge<sup>6</sup> does not absolve the landlord from his obligation to repair. Where the landlord covenants to repair but the sums so expended are recoverable by way of service charge, the standard of work must be such as the tenants, given the remaining length of their leases, can fairly be expected to pay for<sup>7</sup>.

A covenant by the landlord to repair the external parts of the demised premises extends to a partition wall<sup>8</sup> but not to parts of the building or installations which are not demised<sup>9</sup>; and a covenant to do structural work of a substantial nature requires the landlord to do repairs to the roof and make good rendering and brickwork<sup>10</sup>. The structure of a dwelling house has been said to consist of those elements which give it its essential appearance, stability and shape but not to extend to the many and various ways in which the house is fitted out, equipped, decorated and generally made to be habitable; it is not limited to load-bearing elements; and it does not include a separate garage, gates, internal plaster and door furniture but does include windows, including their sashes, cords, frames and essential furniture<sup>11</sup>. A landlord who has covenanted to repair the main walls of a building is not generally liable to repair windows<sup>12</sup>. A covenant by the landlord to put premises into repair does not bind him to put them in repair for a special purpose not mentioned in the agreement<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to such rules of construction see PARA 436 et seq ante; as to the necessity of notice see PARA 453 post; as to the tenant's remedies for breach of covenant see PARAS 462-466 post; and as to the landlord's covenants to repair implied by statute see PARA 416 et seq ante.

Where, however, a tenant evinces a fixed intention not to be bound by its obligation to pay service charges, it has been argued that Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten supra is distinguishable, and the landlord is not then liable to perform the repairing obligations: Bluestorm Ltd v Portvale Holdings Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 289 at [48]-[49], [2004] HLR 939, [2004] 2 EGLR 38 per Sir Martin Nourse. Maurice Kay LJ, however, declined to follow that suggestion, notwithstanding the 'conceptual imperfections' of Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten supra (see Bluestorm Ltd v Portvale Holdings Ltd supra at [41]) and Buxton LJ, while considering that a provision like that in Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten supra might deprive the non-payer of a right to complain of the landlord's breach when there is a direct connection between the non-payment and the breach, preferred that the point should be left to be considered, or repudiated, when it becomes essential to a decision, as it was not in Bluestorm Ltd v Portvale Holdings Ltd supra (see Bluestorm Ltd v Portvale Holdings Ltd supra at [32] et seq).

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(3) CONSTRUCTION OF COVENANTS TO REPAIR/453. Requirement of notice to landlord of want of repair.

453. Requirement of notice to landlord of want of repair.

A covenant by a landlord to repair the demised premises is construed as a covenant to repair on notice<sup>1</sup>; and, until he has received notice, or has actual knowledge of the want of repair<sup>2</sup>, he is not guilty of any breach of his covenant<sup>3</sup>. The fact that the landlord has a right of entry upon the premises does not relieve the tenant of the obligation to give such notice before he may hold his landlord liable for breach of covenant<sup>4</sup> but may give rise to a duty to take reasonable care that the premises are safe under the Defective Premises Act 1972<sup>5</sup>. Directly the landlord has been given notice or he or his agents have knowledge of the defect, it is his duty, if permanent repair is not immediately possible, to take immediate steps to render the premises temporarily safe<sup>6</sup>.

The requirement of notice does not, however, apply where the covenant relates to parts of the building not demised to the tenant. In such a case, the liability for breach of the covenant does not depend on notice and arises as soon as the disrepair occurs<sup>7</sup>.

In Griffin v Pillet supra, however, Wright J followed the opinion expressed by Lord Sumner in Murphy v Hurly [1922] 1 AC 369, HL, to the contrary effect; and in O'Brien v Robinson [1973] AC 912 at 926, [1973] 1 All ER 583 at 589, HL, Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest observed obiter that the landlord's obligation arises whenever he acquires knowledge of disrepair, whether or not that knowledge is shared by the tenant. #### 454. In general.

The landlord's remedies for breach by the tenant of his repairing covenant are:

- 1031 (1) forfeiture<sup>1</sup>; and/or
- 1032 (2) a claim for damages<sup>2</sup>; or
- 1033 (3) entry to carry out the repairs and recovery of the cost of doing so if the terms of the lease so provide<sup>3</sup>.

In rare cases, specific performance is also available as the appropriate remedy<sup>4</sup>.

1 See PARA 603 et seq post.

2 See PARAS 455-460 post. Damages are recoverable only from the tenant or an assignee; a beneficiary in occupation is not liable: Ramage v Womack [1900] 1 QB 116.

4 See Rainbow Estates Ltd v Tokenhold Ltd [1999] Ch 64, [1998] 2 All ER 860, where Lawrence Collins QC, sitting as a deputy judge of the High Court, granted specific performance of repairing covenants relating to a listed building, stating that the lack of any serious alternative remedy, the absence of any real dispute about the repairs required, the scope of the repairs and the deterioration of the state of the property and the notices served by the district council together strongly pointed to specific performance being the appropriate remedy. #### 455. Notice by landlord before claim for damages.

Where in the case of a tenancy<sup>1</sup>, whether of a house or of other property, and without regard to rateable value<sup>2</sup>, where the following conditions are fulfilled, namely:

- 1034 (1) the tenancy was granted for a term of years certain of not less than seven years;
- 1035 (2) three years or more of the term remain unexpired at the date of the service of the notice of dilapidations<sup>3</sup> or, as the case may be, the claim for damages; and
- 1036 (3) the tenancy is neither a tenancy of an agricultural holding in relation to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies nor a farm business tenancy<sup>4</sup>, a lessor<sup>5</sup> serves on a lessee<sup>6</sup> a notice<sup>7</sup> that relates to a breach of covenant or agreement to keep or put in repair<sup>8</sup> during the currency of the lease all or any of the property comprised in the lease<sup>9</sup>, the lessee may within 28 days from that date serve on the lessor a counter-notice to the effect that he claims the benefit of the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938<sup>10</sup>.

A right to damages for a breach of such a covenant is not enforceable by a claim commenced at any time at which three years or more of the term of the lease remain unexpired unless the lessor has served on the lessee a notice<sup>11</sup> not less than one month before the commencement of the claim, and, where a notice is so served, the lessee may, within 28 days from the date of service of it, serve on the lessor a counter-notice to the effect that he claims the benefit of the 1938 Act<sup>12</sup>.

A notice so served by a lessor is not valid unless it contains a statement, in characters not less conspicuous than those used in any other part of the notice, to the effect that the lessee is entitled to serve on the lessor a counter-notice claiming the benefit of the 1938 Act, and a statement in the like characters specifying the time within which and the manner in which a counter-notice may be served and specifying the name and address for service of the lessor<sup>13</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means a tenancy created either immediately or derivatively out of the freehold, whether by lease or underlease, by an agreement for a lease or underlease or by a tenancy agreement or in pursuance of any enactment, including the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, but does not include a mortgage term or any interest arising in favour of a mortgagor by his attorning tenant to his mortgagee: s 69(1). 'Mortgage' includes a charge or lien and 'mortgagor' and 'mortgagee' are to be construed accordingly: s 69(1).

2 As to the abolition of domestic rates see PARA 521 post.

3 For these purposes, 'notice of dilapidations' means a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1) (see PARA 619 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 51(6).

4 Ibid s 51(1) (amended by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 11). For these purposes, 'agricultural holding' has the same meaning as in the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323); and 'farm business tenancy' has the same meaning as in the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1) (amended for these purposes by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 22; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 Schedule para 12).

5 For these purposes, 'lessor' has the meaning assigned to it by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) (see PARA 619 note 3 post) except that it does not include any reference to the person making such a grant as is mentioned in s 146 (as amended) or persons deriving title under such a person: Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 7(1).

6 For these purposes, 'lessee' has the meaning assigned to it by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) (see PARA 619 note 1 post) except that it does not include any reference to the grantee under such a grant as is mentioned in s 146 (as amended) or to persons deriving title under such a person: Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 7(1). 'Lessee' means a lessee who is in possession or who has a subsisting tenancy at the date when proceedings were taken: Cusack-Smith v Gold [1958] 2 All ER 361, [1958] 1 WLR 611; cf Baker v Sims [1959] 1 QB 114 at 129, [1958] 3 All ER 326 at 335, CA, per Lord Evershed MR. A mortgagee in possession is not a lessee for these purposes: Smith v Spaul [2002] EWCA Civ 1830, [2003] QB 983, [2003] 1 All ER 509.

7 le a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1): see PARA 619 post. The notice is valid only if served before work has been done such as would remedy the breach: SEDAC Investments Ltd v Tanner [1982] 3 All ER 646, [1982] 1 WLR 1342; considered in Hamilton v Martell Securities Ltd [1984] Ch 266, [1984] 1 All ER 665.

8 This requirement does not, however, necessarily apply to every obligation imposed by a compendious repairing covenant such as an obligation to clean a lavatory (Starokate Ltd v Burry [1983] 1 EGLR 56, (1982) 265 Estates Gazette 871, CA) or to an obligation to lay out insurance moneys on rebuilding (Farimani v Gates [1984] 2 EGLR 66, (1984) 271 Estates Gazette 887, CA).

9 For these purposes, 'lease' (1) has the meaning assigned to it by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) (see PARA 619 note 1 post) except that it does not include any reference to such a grant as is mentioned in s 146 (as amended); and (2) means a lease for a term of seven years or more, not being a lease of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 which is a lease in relation to which that Act applies and not being a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995: Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 7(1) (amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 51(2) (g); the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 17; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 Schedule para 8). As to the necessity of a notice before action is taken to forfeit a lease for breach of covenant see PARA 619 post.

10 Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1(1) (s 1(1), (2) amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 51(2), (5)). As to the leases to which the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 does not apply see PARA 457 post. A mortgagee in possession is not entitled to serve a counter-notice under this provision: Smith v Spaul [2002] EWCA Civ 1830, [2003] QB 983, [2003] 1 All ER 509, disapproving Target Home Loans Ltd v Iza Ltd [2000] 1 EGLR 23, [2000] 02 EG 117, Central London county court.

The provisions of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 196 (as amended) (see PARA 621 post) extend to notices and counter-notices required or authorised by the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 (s 7(2)); and the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23(2) (see PARA 703 post) applies in relation to any counter-notice to be served under the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 (Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 51(4)). A tenant may not rely on a counter-notice served by his mortgagees: Church Comrs for England v Ve-Ri-Best Manufacturing Co Ltd [1957] 1 QB 238, [1956] 3 All ER 777.

The Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 applies where there is an interest belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Crown, or to a government department, or held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department, in like manner as if that interest were an interest not so belonging or held: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 51(3). The provisions of the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 apply to claims for forfeiture or damages in respect of breaches of covenants to repair, but not to claims for debts due under a lease: Middlegate Properties Ltd v Gidlow Jackson (1977) 34 P & CR 4, CA (claim by the landlord under the terms of the lease for the costs of preparing a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) relating to breaches of repairing covenants). Cf the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 2; and note 13 infra. See also Hamilton v Martell Securities Ltd [1984] Ch 266, [1984] 1 All ER 665, followed in Colchester Estates (Cardiff) v Carlton Industries plc [1986] Ch 80, [1984] 2 All ER 601 (expenses of executing repairs pursuant to express right to enter to do so and recover the cost as a debt); and see PARA 449 note 8 ante.

11 See note 7 supra.

12 Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1(2) (as amended: see note 10 supra).

13 Ibid s 1(4). In Sidnell v Wilson [1966] 2 QB 67, [1966] 1 All ER 681, CA (overruled on other grounds by Associated British Ports v CH Bailey plc [1990] 2 AC 703, [1990] 1 All ER 929, HL), it was held that a notice which did not comply with the provisions of the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 could be read together with a subsequent letter from the landlord, so that the two documents together constituted a valid notice. The notice need not specify all the ways in which service of a counter-notice may be effected, and the requirement that the statement of the tenant's right to serve a counter-notice should be in 'characters not less conspicuous than those used in any other part of the notice' means that the statement must be equally readable or equally sufficient to inform the tenant of his right: Middlegate Properties Ltd v Messimeris [1973] 1 All ER 645, [1973] 1 WLR 168, CA. Cf BL Holdings Ltd v Marcolt Investments Ltd [1979] 1 EGLR 97, (1978) 249 Estates Gazette 849, CA.

A lessor on whom a counter-notice is served under the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1 (as amended) is not entitled to the benefit of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(3) (see PARA 623 post) so far as regards any costs or expenses incurred in reference to the breach in question, unless he makes an application for leave for the purposes of the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1 (as amended); and on such an application the court has power to direct whether and to what extent the lessor is to be entitled to the benefit thereof: s 2.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(i) Landlord's Remedies/456. Effect of counter-notice by tenant.

456. Effect of counter-notice by tenant.

Where a counter-notice is served by a lessee<sup>1</sup>, then, notwithstanding anything in any enactment or rule of law, no legal proceedings<sup>2</sup> may be taken by the lessor<sup>3</sup> for the enforcement of any right of re-entry or forfeiture under any proviso or stipulation in the lease<sup>4</sup>, for breach of the covenant or agreement in question, or for damages for breach thereof, otherwise than with the leave of the court<sup>5</sup>. Where the landlord has obtained leave to commence proceedings against the tenant, and the tenant subsequently assigns the lease, the landlord may not bring a claim against the assignee without obtaining fresh leave<sup>6</sup>.

Leave may not, however, be so given unless the lessor proves:

- 1037 (1) that the immediate remedying of the breach in question is requisite for preventing substantial diminution in the value of his reversion, or that the value thereof has been substantially diminished by the breach<sup>7</sup>;
- 1038 (2) that the immediate remedying of the breach is required for giving effect in relation to the premises to the purposes of any enactment, or of any byelaw or other provision having effect under an enactment, or for giving effect to any order of a court or requirement of any authority under any enactment or any such byelaw or other provision;
- 1039 (3) in a case in which the lessee is not in occupation of the whole of the premises as respects which the covenant or agreement is proposed to be enforced, that the immediate remedying of the breach is required in the interests of the occupier of the premises or of part thereof;
- 1040 (4) that the breach can be immediately remedied at an expense that is relatively small in comparison with the much greater expense that would probably be occasioned by postponement of the necessary work; or
- 1041 (5) special circumstances which, in the opinion of the court, render it just and equitable<sup>8</sup> that leave should be given<sup>9</sup>.

The above grounds are alternatives and leave may be given if the landlord proves one of them<sup>10</sup>. The relevant date upon which the landlord has to prove one or more of those grounds is the date of the hearing of the application for leave to bring forfeiture proceedings<sup>11</sup>. He must prove both the breach and the ground according to the ordinary civil standard of proof, namely on the balance of probabilities; and it is not sufficient to establish merely a prima facie case<sup>12</sup>. The court has a discretion to refuse leave even if the landlord has made out his ground<sup>13</sup>. In granting or refusing leave, the court may impose such terms and conditions on the lessor or the lessee as the court may think fit<sup>14</sup>.

1 le under the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1 (as amended): see PARA 455 ante. For the meaning of 'lessee' see PARA 455 note 6 ante.

2 The statutory wording is 'no proceedings, by action or otherwise'. An 'action' is now generally known as a claim: see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 18.

3 For the meaning of 'lessor' see PARA 455 note 5 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 455 note 9 ante.

5 Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1(3). The prohibition ceases to apply where there are less than three years of the term to run: Baker v Sims [1959] 1 QB 114, [1958] 3 All ER 326, CA. Where a tenant fails to comply with a repairing covenant in a lease which expressly confers on a landlord the right to enter on the demised premises, carry out the repairs himself and recover the cost from the tenant, a claim by the landlord to recover the cost of the repairs is a claim in debt for reimbursement of sums spent in carrying out the repairs himself rather than a claim for damages for breach of the covenant to repair within the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1 (as amended), and accordingly the landlord does not require leave under s 1(3) to bring the claim against the tenant: Jervis v Harris [1996] Ch 195, [1996] 1 All ER 303, CA.

For these purposes, 'the court' means the county court except in a case where the claim for which leave may be given would have to be taken in a court other than the county court and means in such excepted case that other court: Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 6(1). Where appropriate, the court may give leave even where the landlord has failed to ascertain the name of the tenant: Pascall v Galinski [1970] 1 QB 38, [1969] 3 All ER 1090, CA.

A landlord's application for leave to commence proceedings which are intended to include a claim for forfeiture is registrable under the Land Charges Act 1972 s 5(1) (see LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 647) as a pending land action: Selim Ltd v Bickenhall Engineering Ltd [1981] 3 All ER 210, [1981] 1 WLR 1318. It is doubtful, however, whether a claim for damages alone is a pending action.

7 Even if the premises are in substantial disrepair or completely destroyed by fire, the landlord may be unable to demonstrate substantial diminution in the value of the reversion: see Associated British Ports v CH Bailey plc [1990] 2 AC 703, [1990] 1 All ER 929, HL; Landmaster Properties Ltd v Thackeray Property Services Ltd [2003] EWHC 959 (QB), [2003] 2 EGLR 30, [2003] All ER (D) 86 (Apr).

8 See Landmaster Properties Ltd v Thackeray Property Services Ltd [2003] EWHC 959 (QB), [2003] 2 EGLR 30, [2003] All ER (D) 86 (Apr) (special circumstances existing where the premises had been destroyed by fire started by a trespasser after tenant had left property unoccupied and allowed it to be vandalised).

12 Associated British Ports v CH Bailey plc [1990] 2 AC 703, [1990] 1 All ER 929, HL, overruling Sidnell v Wilson [1966] 2 QB 67, [1966] 1 All ER 681, CA. It would seem that matters proved at the leave stage may not be relitigated in the subsequent proceedings: Associated British Ports v CH Bailey plc supra at 714 and at 936, per Lord Templeman.

13 Land Securities plc v Metropolitan Police District Comr [1983] 2 All ER 254, [1983] 1 WLR 439 (leave refused on the ground that the questions which the landlord wanted resolved could be resolved more conveniently, quickly and cheaply in existing proceedings for declaratory relief); Re Metropolitan Film Studios Ltd v Twickenham Film Studios Ltd [1962] 3 All ER 508, [1962] 1 WLR 1315 (where it was suggested that the discretion should be exercised in the landlord's favour unless the court was clearly convinced that it would be wrong to do so; sed quaere).

14 Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938 s 1(6). The court might eg adjourn or dismiss the application on terms that certain repairs are carried out: Associated British Ports v CH Bailey plc [1990] 2 AC 703 at 713, [1990] 1 All ER 929 at 936, HL, per Lord Templeman. In practice 'unless' orders are often made, giving leave unless specified works have been executed by a specified date.

457. Breaches of covenant to which restrictions do not apply.

The statutory restrictions on the enforcement of covenants to repair<sup>1</sup> apply to leases created and to breaches occurring before or after the commencement of the Acts by which they were imposed<sup>2</sup>; but those restrictions do not apply to a breach of a covenant or agreement in so far as it imposes on the lessee<sup>3</sup> an obligation to put premises into repair which is to be performed upon the lessee taking possession of the premises or within a reasonable time thereafter<sup>4</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(i) Landlord's Remedies/458. Other provisions protecting tenants.

458. Other provisions protecting tenants.

So long as land is requisitioned in the exercise of emergency powers, the tenant is in general relieved from liability for breach of a covenant to repair<sup>1</sup>. The obligation of a tenant to repair may be modified, suspended or extinguished by the occurrence of war damage; and in such a case all rights or remedies arising from that obligation will be modified, suspended or extinguished accordingly<sup>2</sup>.

Although, in some circumstances, the doctrine of frustration may be applied to particular covenants<sup>3</sup>, the tenant may be liable for breach of a repairing covenant even though he is unable to obtain planning permission to do the necessary repairs<sup>4</sup>, or is otherwise prevented by regulations from complying with the covenant<sup>5</sup>.

In certain circumstances, where a tenancy is subject to the statutory protection for long residential tenancies<sup>6</sup>, the tenant, by giving notice to his landlord, may render an order for possession for breach of his covenant to repair of no effect<sup>7</sup>; and the service of a notice of claim for the freehold or an extended lease<sup>8</sup> or a notice claiming to exercise the right to collective enfranchisement<sup>9</sup> or the right to acquire a new lease<sup>10</sup> prevents the landlord from taking forfeiture proceedings except with the leave of the court<sup>11</sup>.

459. Claim for damages during term.

Damages for a breach of a covenant or agreement to keep or put premises in repair during the currency of a lease<sup>1</sup>, whether such covenant or agreement is expressed or implied, and whether general or specific, may in no case exceed the amount, if any, by which the value of the reversion, whether immediate or not, in the premises is diminished owing to the breach of that covenant or agreement<sup>2</sup>. The reversion to be considered is that expectant upon the existing lease and not that expectant on a reversionary lease to take effect on a future day<sup>3</sup>. In practice the damages are generally the amount by which the saleable value of the premises has been diminished by reason of the non-repair of the premises<sup>4</sup>. If the damages are claimed during the subsistence of the term, the amount of the diminution depends in part upon the length of the unexpired term<sup>5</sup>; but, where the term is forfeited by reason of the breach of covenant, the damages are assessed as if the term had expired, so that the acceleration of the landlord's reversion by reason of the forfeiture does not reduce or discount the damages then recoverable<sup>6</sup>.

Where the landlord is the freeholder, and is entitled to the reversion free from any liability on his part, the diminution caused to the saleable value of his estate furnishes the proper measure of damages<sup>7</sup>. Where the landlord is himself a tenant, the reversion may be notional only; but this does not prevent it from being valued and damages from being assessed<sup>8</sup>. Further, if the landlord is under a covenant with his superior landlord to repair, and the tenant has notice of the existence of a head lease, the landlord's liability under the covenant in the head lease must be taken into account in assessing the damages<sup>9</sup>. Where the tenant covenants to spend a certain sum each year on repairs or pay the difference in money, the difference in money is recoverable as a debt and not as damages for failure to repair, and the amount is not limited to the diminution in value of the reversion<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease' means a lease, underlease or other tenancy, assignment operating as a lease or underlease, or an agreement for such a lease, underlease, tenancy or assignment: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 25(1).

2 Ibid s 18(1). In an appropriate case the court can infer the damage to the reversion from the evidence as to the estimated cost of the repairs: see eg Latimer v Carney [2006] EWCA Civ 1417, [2006] All ER (D) 347 (Oct). If none of the repairs can realistically be expected to survive the refurbishment, or if only such an insignificant proportion can be expected to survive as to fall within the 'de minimis' concept, the landlord's interest at the term date will not be diminished in any way by reason of the disrepair: Firle Investments Ltd v Datapoint International Ltd [2000] All ER (D) 634 (judge's order as to costs varied on appeal [2001] EWCA Civ 1106, [2001] NPC 106, [2001] All ER (D) 258 (Jun)). See also Ultraworth Ltd v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corp plc [2000] 2 EGLR 115, [2000] All ER (D) 100 (no diminution in value of reversion).

4 Smith v Peat (1853) 9 Exch 161; cf Metge v Kavanagh (1877) IR 11 CL 431; and as to the identity of the premises see Mapleton v Rawlings (1854) 3 CLR 237.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(i) Landlord's Remedies/460. Claim for damages after determination of term.

460. Claim for damages after determination of term.

After a lease has terminated, the landlord may bring a claim on the covenant to yield up the premises in repair. Damages for breach of a covenant or agreement to leave or put premises in repair at the termination of a lease<sup>1</sup>, whether such covenant or agreement is expressed or implied, and whether general or specific, may in no case exceed the amount, if any, by which the value of the reversion, whether immediate or not, in the premises is diminished owing to the breach of that covenant or agreement<sup>2</sup>. In particular, no damages may be recovered for a breach of any such covenant or agreement to leave or put premises in repair at the termination of a lease if it is shown that the premises, in whatever state of repair they might be, would have been or would be pulled down at or shortly after the termination of the tenancy, or such structural alterations would have been or would be made to them as would render valueless the repairs covered by the covenant or agreement<sup>3</sup>. In such a case the tenant must show that at the termination of the lease the landlord had formed a definite intention to demolish or reconstruct the premises<sup>4</sup>.

At common law the measure of damages was the sum which it would take to put the premises in the state of repair in which the tenant ought, under the covenant, to leave them<sup>5</sup>. The proper cost of repairs may still be prima facie evidence of the extent of the damage to the reversion<sup>6</sup> but it is wrong to treat undiscounted costs of repair as a safe guide, especially where there is no finding that the landlord is going to undertake the repairs<sup>7</sup>. The fact that the premises can immediately be relet without any substantial expenditure due to a shortage of housing, is, of itself, irrelevant when assessing the damage to the reversion<sup>8</sup>, as is the fact that the landlord has taken a covenant from a new tenant to put the premises into repair, while agreeing to pay over to him any damages for dilapidations recovered from the previous tenant<sup>9</sup>. It seems that the landlord is entitled, as part of his damages, to a sum for loss of rent during the time the repairs are being effected, as long as this sum and the cost of repairs do not exceed the diminution in the value of the reversion<sup>10</sup>, but the cost of drawing up a schedule of dilapidations is not recoverable, unless there is special provision for it in the lease<sup>11</sup>. Where damages are assessed by reference to the cost of repairs, the landlord is entitled to recover a sum equal to the VAT chargeable on the cost of repairs if he is not registered for VAT and is not going to deal with the premises in such a way as to enable him to recover the VAT as input tax<sup>12</sup>.

Where at the determination of the tenancy the premises are occupied for the purpose of their business by subtenants, holding on terms which include repairing obligations which correspond with those in the head lease, who are entitled and intend to renew<sup>13</sup> their tenancies, there is likely to be no diminution in the value of the reversion, because the rents on renewal will be fixed on the assumption that the premises are in repair<sup>14</sup>.

If the landlord has, during the term, already recovered damages for breach of covenant to keep in repair, these will be deducted from the sum which the tenant would otherwise pay as damages for breach of the covenant to leave in repair<sup>15</sup>.

Where the landlord has re-entered for breach of the covenant to repair, the damages to which he is entitled will not be diminished by the fact that he has obtained possession of the premises at an earlier date than if the lease had run its full period. In such a case the proper measure of damages is the difference in value between the premises as they were at the time of re-entry and the premises as they would have been had the covenant been performed<sup>16</sup>. The tenant is not liable on the repairing covenant for damage arising after the date of forfeiture<sup>17</sup>.

461. Specific performance.

It was the traditional view that specific performance of a tenant's repairing covenant would not be granted<sup>1</sup>. However, following development of the jurisdiction to grant specific performance of contracts to do building works, specific performance of repairing covenants began to be granted by analogy in cases where the works were sufficiently defined<sup>2</sup>. It has now been held that a modern law of remedies requires specific performance of a tenant's repairing covenant to be available in appropriate circumstances, and there are no constraints of principle or binding authority against the availability of the remedy, on the grounds that:

1042 (1) even if want of mutuality were any longer a decisive factor, the availability of the remedy against the tenant would restore mutuality as against the landlord;

- 1043 (2) the problems of defining the work and the need for supervision can be overcome by ensuring that there is sufficient definition of what has to be done in order to comply with the order of the court;
- 1044 (3) the court ought not be constrained by the supposed rule that the court will not enforce the defendants' obligation in part<sup>3</sup>.

There is, however, a need for great caution in granting the remedy against a tenant, and it will be a rare case in which the remedy of specific performance will be the appropriate one; in the case of commercial leases, the landlord will normally have the right to forfeit<sup>4</sup> or to enter and do the repairs at the expense of the tenant<sup>5</sup> and in residential leases, the landlord will normally have the right to forfeit in appropriate cases. Furthermore, the remedy ought not to be sought as a means of circumventing the statutory restrictions<sup>6</sup> on the recovery of damages<sup>7</sup>.

The Law Commission has recommended legislation to give the court power to decree specific performance of a repairing obligation in any lease or tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(ii) Tenant's Remedies/463. Damages for breach of covenant by landlord.

463. Damages for breach of covenant by landlord.

Where the landlord is guilty of a breach of covenant to repair the demised premises, he is not liable for any damage suffered prior to the receipt by him of the notice to repair or to the time at which he has actual knowledge of the want of repair<sup>1</sup>.

The object of an award of damages is not to punish the landlord but to restore the tenant to the position he would have been in had there been no breach<sup>2</sup>. The facts of each case must be looked at carefully to see what damage the tenant has suffered and how he may be fairly compensated by a monetary award<sup>3</sup>. It is not necessary in every case to obtain evidence of the diminution in the value to the tenant<sup>4</sup>. Thus, if, after notice of the defect, the landlord neglects the property for so long that it becomes uninhabitable and the tenant moves into temporary accommodation and sues for specific performance of the landlord's repairing obligation, the measure of damages is:

- 1050 (1) the cost of redecorating<sup>5</sup>;
- 1051 (2) the cost of taking alternative accommodation<sup>6</sup>;
- 1052 (3) general damages for the unpleasantness of occupying the property as it deteriorated until it became uninhabitable and for any ill-health attributable to the disrepair<sup>7</sup>.

A tenant may also recover damages for personal injury or for damage to his property during the period when the landlord was in default<sup>8</sup> and for loss of profits<sup>9</sup>. If, however, the tenant chose to sell the dilapidated property and to move elsewhere, the proper measure of damages might be, subject to questions of remoteness, the diminution in the price attributable to the disrepair<sup>10</sup> and any abortive costs incurred in attempting to sell<sup>11</sup>. If the tenant had rented the property with a view to subletting it and the landlord was aware of this, the measure of damages would be the loss of rent attributable to the landlord's breach<sup>12</sup>.

The fact that the tenancy is protected and that the rent officer has fixed a fair rent, taking into account the state of disrepair, does not preclude the tenant from recovering damages<sup>13</sup>.

In assessing such damages, damage due to defects which the landlord is not bound to remedy must be excluded; and consideration of the question whether the execution of the repairs is to the commercial advantage or disadvantage of the landlord is irrelevant<sup>14</sup>.

It is not a condition precedent to the landlord's liability that the tenant should expend money in the execution of the repairs<sup>15</sup>; but, if the tenant does expend money in executing repairs which come within the landlord's express or implied obligations, the tenant may recoup himself out of future rents<sup>16</sup>. Alternatively, the tenant may set off an unliquidated claim for damages for breach by the landlord of his repairing obligations against the liability to pay rent<sup>17</sup>.

The tenant is not to be regarded as disentitling himself to damages by continuing to use the premises pending the carrying out of repairs<sup>18</sup>; but he is not entitled to damages if he prevents the landlord from doing the necessary work<sup>19</sup>.

A tenant's damages may be reduced if he fails to mitigate his loss<sup>20</sup>.

A tenant may pursue a claim for any loss incurred as a result of his landlord's breach of his repairing covenant notwithstanding that the tenant has assigned the term<sup>21</sup>.

A tenant's claim for damages is not registrable as a pending land action<sup>22</sup>.

1 See PARA 453 ante. The factual examples in heads (1)-(3) in the text are all discussed in Calabar Properties Ltd v Sticher supra where the court applied the same general principle as was applied in Dodd Properties (Kent) Ltd v Canterbury City Council [1980] 1 All ER 928, [1980] 1 WLR 433 at 446, CA: see PARA 98 ante.

4 In Wallace v Manchester City Council [1998] 3 EGLR 38, [1998] All ER (D) 322, CA, it was stated that diminution in value is not a separate head of damages.

5 A landlord's obligation to repair carries with it an obligation to make good any damage to the decorations consequential upon the works of repair as well as damage to the decorations caused directly by the failure to repair: McGreal v Wake (1983) 13 HLR 107, [1984] 1 EGLR 42, CA; Bradley v Chorley Borough Council [1985] 2 EGLR 49, CA; McDougall v Easington District Council (1989) 58 P & CR 201, [1989] 1 EGLR 93, CA. 6 This head of claim must be specifically pleaded: Calabar Properties Ltd v Sticher [1983] 3 All ER 759, [1984] 1 WLR 287, CA, overruling Green v Eales (1841) 2 QB 225 in so far as it held that alternative accommodation was not a recoverable head of claim; and see McGreal v Wake (1983) 13 HLR 107, [1984] 1 EGLR 42, CA.

The judge is not obliged to assess damages falling within head (3) in the text separately under heads of both diminution in value and discomfort, because those heads of damage are alternative ways of expressing the same concept. If he assesses damages on a global basis he ought to cross-check by reference to the rent payable for the period of the breach of covenant: Wallace v Manchester City Council [1998] 3 EGLR 38, [1998] All ER (D) 322, CA; applied in Shine v English Churches Housing Group [2004] EWCA Civ 434, [2004] HLR 727, [2004] All ER (D) 125 (Apr) (award in favour of secure weekly tenant reduced as rent lower than if paying on

464. Specific performance; in general.

Where the work which is to be done is sufficiently defined to enable a defendant landlord who is carrying out the order to give his contractors the proper instructions<sup>1</sup>, the court may order specific performance<sup>2</sup>. If the landlord does not comply with the order, the tenant may apply to the court for a direction authorising the tenant to carry out the work at the landlord's expense<sup>3</sup>. The landlord's financial inability does not necessarily provide a defence to a claim for specific performance<sup>4</sup>.

The remedy remains available to a tenant after a forfeiture, if proceedings for relief are pending<sup>5</sup>.

A claim for specific performance of the landlord's repairing obligations is not registrable as a pending action<sup>6</sup>.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(ii) Tenant's Remedies/465. Specific performance available by statute to tenants of dwellings.

465. Specific performance available by statute to tenants of dwellings.

In proceedings in which a tenant<sup>1</sup> of a dwelling<sup>2</sup> alleges a breach on the part of his landlord<sup>3</sup> of a repairing covenant<sup>4</sup> relating to any part of the premises in which the dwelling is comprised, the court may order specific performance of the covenant, whether or not the breach relates to a part of the premises let to the tenant<sup>5</sup> and notwithstanding any equitable rule restricting the scope of the remedy, whether on the basis of a lack of mutuality or otherwise<sup>6</sup>.

The court is entitled to have regard to the practical consequences of an order for specific performance<sup>7</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenant' includes a statutory tenant: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 17(2)(a). For the meaning of 'tenant' and 'statutory tenant' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a tenant, includes any person against whom the tenant has a right to enforce a repairing covenant: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 17(2)(c) (re-enacting the Housing Act 1974 s 125(2)). The Housing Act 1974 gave statutory force to the principle established in Jeune v Queens Cross Properties Ltd [1974] Ch 97, [1973] 3 All ER 97 (cited in PARA 464 ante). For the meaning of 'landlord' in relation to a statutory tenant see PARA 52 note 3 ante; and for the meaning of 'repairing covenant' see note 4 infra.

4 For these purposes, 'repairing covenant' means a covenant to repair, maintain, renew, construct or replace any property: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 17(2)(d).

5 For these purposes, in relation to a statutory tenant, any reference to the premises let to a tenant means the premises of which he is the statutory tenant: ibid s 17(2)(b).

6 Ibid s 17(1). The equitable rule referred to in the text is that supposed in Hill v Barclay (1810) 16 Ves 402 (see further SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARAS 809-810); but see PARA 461 ante at head (1) in the text. The Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 17 does not, however, apply to a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 32(1).

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(ii) Tenant's Remedies/466. Appointment of receiver or manager.

466. Appointment of receiver or manager.

The court has a general jurisdiction to make an interim or final order appointing a receiver and investing him with such powers as the court thinks necessary for the preservation of the property<sup>1</sup> whenever it appears to the court to be just and convenient to do so<sup>2</sup>. Additionally the tenant of a flat contained in premises consisting of the whole or part of a building containing two or more flats may in certain circumstances apply to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order appointing a manager in relation to those premises<sup>3</sup>.

A receiver has been appointed where no attempt has been made by the landlord to collect the rents and service charges, the landlord's covenants to repair and insure were not being complied with and the property was deteriorating<sup>4</sup>; where the landlord had not abandoned the building but had failed to implement a programme of major repairs through lack of funds and the tenants were willing to put the receiver in funds<sup>5</sup>; where management by the landlords was nonexistent, the roof was leaking and there was no suggestion that the landlords would remedy any of these matters pending the hearing<sup>6</sup>; and where the balance of convenience favoured the appointment of a receiver to protect the tenants' interests in a case where the landlord had shown a disinclination to do repairs but had started work on the construction of additions to the building<sup>7</sup>; but not where the landlord was a local housing authority and the order sought might provoke an industrial dispute<sup>8</sup>. A court has no power to direct the landlord to remunerate the receiver and therefore he should not take office unless satisfied that the assets are sufficient to defray his remuneration or that he has an enforceable indemnity from a party to the litigation; moreover, the appointment of a receiver in a case where the moneys under his control are inadequate to meet the cost of the repairs is likely to prove ineffective<sup>9</sup>.

For an example of an order appointing a receiver and manager under this jurisdiction see Clayhope Properties Ltd v Evans [1986] 2 All ER 795, [1986] 1 WLR 1223, CA. 3 See PARA 399 et seq ante. An application to the court for it to exercise in relation to any premises any jurisdiction to appoint a receiver or manager may not be made by a tenant, in his capacity as such, in any circumstances in which an application could be made by him to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as amended) (see PARA 402 ante) appointing a manager to act in relation to those premises: see s 21(6) (as amended); and PARA 399 ante.

(iii) Procedure for Housing Disrepair Claims

467. The pre-action protocol for tenants' claims.

There is a pre-action protocol<sup>1</sup> which covers housing disrepair claims<sup>2</sup> in England and Wales. The protocol is intended to encourage the exchange of information between parties at an early stage and to provide a clear framework within which parties in a housing disrepair claim can attempt to achieve an early and appropriate resolution of the issues. Before using the protocol tenants are expected to ensure that the landlord is aware of the disrepair and also to consider whether other options for having repairs carried out and/or for obtaining compensation are more appropriate<sup>3</sup>. Should a claim proceed to litigation, the court will expect all parties to have complied with the protocol as far as possible; parties who have unreasonably failed to do so may be ordered to pay costs or be subject to other sanctions<sup>4</sup>.

The pre-action protocol makes provision with regard to:

- 1053 (1) an early notification letter to be sent to the landlord<sup>5</sup>;
- 1054 (2) the letter of claim<sup>6</sup>;
- 1055 (3) limitation periods<sup>7</sup>;
- 1056 (4) the landlord's response<sup>8</sup>;
- 1057 (5) the use of experts<sup>9</sup>;
- 1058 (6) costs<sup>10</sup>;
- 1059 (7) alternative dispute resolution<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1060 (8) the form and content of specimen letters<sup>12</sup>.

2 For these purposes, a disrepair claim is a civil claim arising from the condition of residential premises and may include a related personal injury claim, but does not include disrepair claims which originate as counterclaims or set-offs in other proceedings. The types of claim which the Pre-action Protocol for Housing Disrepair Claims is intended to cover include those brought under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11 (as amended) (see PARAS 416-417 ante), the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4 (see PARA 475 post), common law nuisance and negligence (see PARA 474 et seq post), and those brought under the express terms of a tenancy agreement or lease. It does not cover claims brought under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 s 82 (as amended) (statutory nuisances: see NUISANCE vol 78 (2010) PARA 226) which are heard in a magistrates' court. The protocol covers claims by any person with such a disrepair claim, including tenants, lessees and members of the tenant's family: see Pre-action Protocol for Housing Disrepair Claims para 3.1.

3 Examples of other options are set out in the Pre-action Protocol for Housing Disrepair Claims para 4.1(a).

4 Pre-action Protocol for Housing Disrepair Claims para 1. The specific aims of the protocol are: (1) to avoid unnecessary litigation; (2) to promote the speedy and appropriate carrying out of any repairs which are the landlord's responsibility; (3) to ensure that tenants receive any compensation to which they are entitled as speedily as possible; (4) to promote good pre-litigation practice, including the early exchange of information and to give guidance about the instruction of experts; and (5) to keep the costs of resolving disputes down: see PARA 2.

5 See the Pre-action Protocol for Housing Disrepair Claims para 3.2.

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(4) REMEDIES FOR BREACH/(iii) Procedure for Housing Disrepair Claims/468. Procedure for bringing claims; in general.

468. Procedure for bringing claims; in general.

A landlord and tenant claim<sup>1</sup> must generally be started in the county court for the district in which the land is situated<sup>2</sup>. The general procedure for making claims and applications is discussed elsewhere in this work<sup>3</sup>.

1 'Landlord and tenant claim' means a claim under (1) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927; (2) the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938; (3) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954; (4) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985; or (5) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987: CPR 56.1(1). A practice direction may set out special provisions with regard to any particular category of landlord and tenant claim: CPR 56.1(2). There is no particular provision made in the practice direction accompanying CPR Pt 56 with regard to housing disrepair claims.

2 See CPR 56.2; and PARA 57 ante.

3 See CPR Pt 7, CPR Pt 23; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 116 et seq, 303 et seq.

(5) ALTERATIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS

469. Position at common law.

It is prima facie a breach of the covenant to repair if the tenant pulls down any part of the premises or makes alterations in them<sup>1</sup>, unless he is expressly or impliedly given power to do so by the lease<sup>2</sup>. Further, if the pulling down or alteration changes the nature of the demised premises, the tenant may be guilty of waste<sup>3</sup>.

In order to determine whether the pulling down or alteration constitutes a breach of the covenant, regard must, however, be had in each case to the user of the premises which is permitted by the lease<sup>4</sup>. It may be that the demised property may be used for a variety of purposes, for which without alteration and adaptation it is not suitable, in which case a right on the part of the tenant to adapt the premises for such use is to be inferred<sup>5</sup>.

An express covenant against making alterations or erecting new buildings is often found in leases; and a breach of any such covenant may be restrained by injunction<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, the court will grant a mandatory injunction requiring reinstatement where the tenant has interfered with the structure of the demised premises in breach of covenant<sup>7</sup>. In general the covenant will be construed so as only to forbid alterations which would affect the form or structure of the building<sup>8</sup>.

The tenant of a furnished house is not bound to keep the furniture and pictures in their original positions during the tenancy; and he is at liberty to store pictures or other articles in part of the house<sup>9</sup>.

1 Eg by opening a doorway in a wall (Doe d Vickery v Jackson (1817) 2 Stark 293; Gange v Lockwood (1860) 2 F & F 115) or pulling down a partition wall in the courtyard (Doe d Wetherell v Bird (1833) 6 C & P 195; and see Borgnis v Edwards (1860) 2 F & F 111). A change in the internal arrangements of the premises amounts to a change in 'layout' so as to be in breach of a covenant not to alter the plan, layout or elevation of the demised premises: Waycourt Ltd v Viscount Chelsea [2006] EWCA Civ 511, [2006] All ER (D) 295 (Mar) (vaults outside basement previously used for storage converted into a kitchen and dining area).

2 Doe d Dalton v Jones (1832) 4 B & Ad 126; Hyman v Rose [1912] AC 623, HL.

3 Hyman v Rose [1912] AC 623, HL. As to the restraint of waste by injunction see PARA 435 ante.

4 Hyman v Rose [1912] AC 623, HL, revsg Rose v Spicer, Rose v Hyman [1911] 2 KB 234, CA.

5 Rose v Spicer, Rose v Hyman [1911] 2 KB 234 at 254, CA, per Buckley LJ dissenting; followed on appeal sub nom Hyman v Rose [1912] AC 623, HL.

6 Perry v Davis (1858) 3 CBNS 769 (covenant not to make any external alterations or any internal alterations that might lessen the value of the premises without the landlord's consent in writing). Where there is such an express negative covenant, the court does not apparently have any discretion to refuse the injunction: Doherty v Allman (1878) 3 App Cas 709 at 720, HL; and see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 453. The position is different where there is no such covenant: Hyman v Rose [1912] AC 623, HL. The fact that the landlord stands by and sees the tenant making alterations in breach of covenant is not necessarily a waiver of the covenant: Perry v Davis supra.

7 Viscount Chelsea v Muscatt [1990] 2 EGLR 48, CA.

8 Bickmore v Dimmer [1903] 1 Ch 158, CA; Haigh v Waterman (1867) 16 LT 375 (breach of covenant not to erect new buildings by the erection of a greenhouse); Pocock v Gilham (1883) Cab & El 104 (breach by fixing advertisement hoardings to premises); cf Joseph v LCC (1914) 111 LT 276 (no breach of covenant not to alter elevation of building by the erection of an electric sign, as the alteration was only in the appearance and not in the fabric of the premises). In LCC v Hutter [1925] Ch 626, distinguishing Joseph v LCC supra, it was held that, by fixing brackets to the outside of premises for an electric advertisement, there had been a breach of the covenant not to cut or maim the principal walls, or damage the building or alter its elevation. See also Wood v Cooper [1894] 3 Ch 671 (breach by erection of permanent trellis work); White v Ryan [1932] IR 169 (removal of shop fittings not a breach of covenant).

In the absence of any such covenant, the tenant of an upper floor of a building is entitled to place window-boxes in brackets fixed into the outside wall (Hope Bros Ltd v Cowan [1913] 2 Ch 312; Goldfoot v Welch [1914] 1 Ch 213; and see PARA 162 note 5 ante), but the erection of a large sign may constitute a trespass on the forecourt (Gifford v Dent (1926) 71 Sol Jo 83; Kelsen v Imperial Tobacco Co (of Great Britain and Ireland) Ltd [1957] 2 QB 334, [1957] 1 All ER 343).

470. Statutory provisions as to improvements.

In all leases, whether made before, on or after 1 January 1926, containing a covenant, condition or agreement against the making of improvements without licence or consent, such covenant, condition or agreement is deemed, notwithstanding any express provision to the contrary, to be subject to a proviso that such licence or consent is not to be unreasonably withheld<sup>1</sup>. Where the covenant prohibits the making of alterations or additions without consent, it is deemed to be subject to the same proviso, if the proposed alterations or additions do in fact constitute an improvement<sup>2</sup>. Whether an alteration or addition is an improvement to the demised premises is a question of fact, to be considered from the point of view of the tenant<sup>3</sup>. It may be an improvement to make openings in the main wall of a building, even if the lease contains an absolute covenant not to cut or maim the main walls<sup>4</sup>, or to pull down a wall and merge the demised premises with premises held under a lease from a different landlord<sup>5</sup> or to convert a loft into living accommodation by raising the level of the roof<sup>6</sup>. An alteration may be an improvement from the point of view of the tenant even though it produces damage or diminution in letting value from the point of view of the landlord, but the case may be different if the effect is to destroy the subject matter demised<sup>7</sup>.

The proviso so implied does not preclude the right to require as a condition of such licence or consent the payment of a reasonable sum in respect of any damage to or diminution in the value of the premises or any neighbouring premises belonging to the landlord, and of any legal or other expenses properly incurred in connection with such licence or consent nor, in the case of an improvement which does not add to the letting value of the holding, does it preclude the right to require as a condition of such licence or consent, where such a requirement would be reasonable, an undertaking on the part of the tenant to reinstate the premises in the condition in which they were before the improvement was executed<sup>8</sup>.

The onus of proving that the landlord's consent is unreasonably withheld is on the tenant; but, if the landlord gives no reason and merely refuses, he must show that his action was reasonable<sup>9</sup>. He may object on aesthetic, artistic or sentimental grounds<sup>10</sup>; and he is entitled to withhold consent if the alteration necessarily entails trespassing on property retained by him<sup>11</sup> or if he has a reasonable objection to the use the tenant proposes to make of the altered property, whether that use is the same as or different from the use carried on in the remainder of the property<sup>12</sup>. He is entitled to take matters of estate management into account; but his interests must be weighed against the detriment which would be suffered by the tenant if consent were to be refused<sup>13</sup>.

1 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(2). The purpose of the statutory (or similar express) covenant, and the relevant considerations to be taken into account by the court when considering the reasonableness of a landlord's refusal of consent to proposed alterations or additions, were considered in Iqbal v Thakrar [2004] EWCA Civ 592, [2004] 3 EGLR 21, [2004] All ER (D) 304 (Apr), where it was held that the principles in International Drilling Fluids Ltd v Louisville Investments (Uxbridge) Ltd [1986] Ch 513, [1986] 1 All ER 321, CA, relating to consent by the landlord to an assignment (see PARA 492 post), can be applied with necessary changes. Those principles are: (1) the purpose of the covenant is to protect the landlord from the tenant effecting alterations and additions that could damage the property interests of the landlord; (2) a landlord is not entitled to refuse consent on grounds that have nothing to do with its property interests; (3) it is for the tenant to show that the landlord has unreasonably withheld its consent to the proposals that the tenant has put forward; implicit in that is the necessity for the tenant to make sufficiently clear what its proposals are, so that the landlord knows whether it should refuse or give consent to the alterations or additions; (4) it is not necessary for the landlord to prove that the conclusions that led it to refuse consent were justified, if they were conclusions that might have been reached by a reasonable landlord in the particular circumstances; (5) it might be reasonable for the landlord to refuse consent to an alteration or addition to be made for the purpose of converting the premises for a proposed use even if not forbidden by the lease, but whether such refusal would be reasonable or unreasonable will depend upon all the circumstances; eg, it might be unreasonable if the proposed use was a permitted use and the intention of the tenant in acquiring the premises to use them for that purpose was known to the freeholder when the freeholder acquired the freehold; (6) although a landlord will usually need to consider only its own interests, there might be cases where it would be disproportionate for a landlord to refuse consent, having regard to the effects upon it and upon the tenant respectively; (7) consent cannot be refused on grounds of pecuniary loss alone; the proper course for the landlord to adopt in such circumstances is to ask for a compensatory payment; and (8) in each case it will be a question of fact, dependent upon all the circumstances, as to whether the landlord, having regard to the actual reasons that impelled it to refuse consent, had acted unreasonably: see Iqbal v Thakrar supra at [26]. Those principles were also applied in Sargeant v Macepark (Whittlebury) Ltd [2004] EWHC 1333 (Ch), [2004] 4 All ER 662, [2004] 3 EGLR 26.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(2) does not, however, apply to leases of agricultural holdings within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 which are leases in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323), or to farm business tenancies within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302) or to mining leases: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(4) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 15; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 6). For the meaning of 'mining lease' see MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 322.

Nor does the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(2) apply to (a) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre; or (b) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation: see the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 84(1), (3)(c) (substituted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 96); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 532; the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 7(1), (3)(c); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 658; the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 149(3)(c) (amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 66(2)(a), (3)(c)); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 157.

As to tenant's improvements in respect of protected tenancies and statutory tenancies see the Housing Act 1980 s 81 (as amended); and PARA 838 post; and as to tenant's improvements in respect of secure tenancies see the Housing Act 1985 s 97; and PARA 1330 post.

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(2) applies as if the reference to the payment of a reasonable sum in respect of any damage to or diminution in the value of the premises or neighbouring premises belonging to the landlord were omitted: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 1(1), (3).

The court ought to have regard to the reasons that actually influenced the landlord's decision; if it transpires that the landlord made its decision for a reason which the court holds was not a permissible reason, it is nothing to the point for the landlord to show that other reasonable landlords could have withheld consent on other grounds, if those other grounds have not influenced the actual landlord in making its decision: Redevco Properties v Mount Cook Land Ltd [2002] All ER (D) 26 (Dec).

REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(5) ALTERATIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS/471. Tenant's remedy where consent is unreasonably refused.

471. Tenant's remedy where consent is unreasonably refused.

An unreasonable refusal of consent entitles the tenant either to make the improvements without any further request for consent<sup>1</sup>, or to bring proceedings for a declaration that the landlord has unreasonably withheld his consent<sup>2</sup>.

Where a landlord withholds his licence or consent to the making of an improvement on the demised property or any part thereof, and the High Court has jurisdiction to make a declaration that the licence or consent was unreasonably withheld, then, without prejudice to the jurisdiction of the High Court, the county court has the like jurisdiction whatever the net annual value for rating<sup>3</sup> of the demised property is to be taken to be for the purposes of the County Courts Act 1984 and notwithstanding that the tenant does not seek any relief other than the declaration<sup>4</sup>.

Where, on the making of an application to a county court for such a declaration, the court is satisfied that consent was unreasonably withheld, it must make a declaration accordingly<sup>5</sup>.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 53(1)(b) (amended by the County Courts Act 1984 s 148(1), Sch 2 Pt V para 23).

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 53(1)(b) (as so amended) and s 53(2) (see the text and note 5 infra) have effect whether the tenancy was created before or after 1 October 1954: s 53(3). Nothing in s 53 (as amended) is, however, to be construed as conferring jurisdiction on the county court to grant any relief other than a declaration under s 53 (as amended): s 53(4).

472. Modification of covenants by the court.

Where a tenant of business premises serves notice on his landlord of his intention to make an improvement on the premises, and either the landlord does not serve notice of objection on him, or the court certifies that the improvement is a proper improvement, the tenant may lawfully execute the improvement notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any lease of the premises<sup>1</sup>. Certain statutes empower a county court to set aside or modify the terms of an agreement between landlord and tenant which prevent the tenant from making alterations to the premises, where those alterations are necessary for compliance with the provisions of those statutes<sup>2</sup>.

The local housing authority<sup>3</sup> or a person interested in any premises may apply to the county court where:

1061 (1) owing to changes in the character of the neighbourhood in which the premises are situated, they cannot readily be let as a single dwelling house but could readily be let for occupation if converted into two or more dwelling houses<sup>4</sup>;
or

and the conversion is prohibited or restricted by the provisions of the lease of the premises, or by a restrictive covenant affecting the premises, or otherwise<sup>6</sup>. After giving any person interested an opportunity of being heard, the court may vary the terms of the lease or other instrument imposing the prohibition or restriction, subject to such conditions and upon such terms as the court may think just<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3; and PARA 788 et seq post. The court is not able to grant a certificate under s 3 if the landlord offers to do the works in return for a reasonable increase in the rent. If, however, the parties cannot agree upon the increase, the tenant is entitled to change its mind and unilaterally withdraw its notice: Norfolk Capital Group Ltd v Cadogan Estates Ltd [2004] EWHC 384 (Ch), [2004] 3 All ER 889, [2004] 1 WLR 1458.

The enforcing authority<sup>1</sup> with respect to fire safety may serve on the responsible person<sup>2</sup> in relation to premises<sup>3</sup> an alterations notice<sup>4</sup>, an enforcement notice<sup>5</sup> or a prohibitions notice<sup>6</sup> under the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005. Domestic premises are, however, generally excluded from the provisions of that Order<sup>7</sup>. Fire safety is discussed elsewhere in this work<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to enforcing authorities for these purposes see the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005, SI 2005/1541, art 25. That authority is generally the fire and rescue authority for the area in which the premises are situated: art 25(a).

TEXT AND NOTES--Functions of the Secretary of State under SI 2005/1541, in relation to Wales, are transferred to the National Assembly for Wales: SI 2006/1458.

NOTE 1--SI 2005/1541 art 25 amended: SI 2007/320.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/10. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(6) NUISANCE, NEGLIGENCE ETC/474. Liability for nuisance.

(6) NUISANCE, NEGLIGENCE ETC

474. Liability for nuisance.

Prima facie the occupier of premises is the person liable to third persons for a nuisance existing on or arising from the premises<sup>1</sup>. The landlord is not liable for any nuisance caused by the tenant by reason of the manner in which the premises are used by the latter<sup>2</sup>; but, apart from a nuisance caused in that way, the landlord is liable for the existence of a nuisance upon premises which are in the occupation of his tenant where:

- 1063 (1) he has let the premises or bought the reversion with a nuisance existing upon them, of the existence of which he knew or ought to have known<sup>3</sup>, and in such a case he cannot divest himself of liability to third persons merely by taking a repairing covenant from a tenant<sup>4</sup>;
- 1064 (2) he has let the premises for a purpose which is likely to cause a nuisance of a particular character and such nuisance results<sup>5</sup>;
- 1065 (3) he has let the premises, taking from the tenant a covenant to do the act which results in the nuisance<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1066 (4) the nuisance arises during the tenancy from the dangerous state of the premises and he has contracted to repair<sup>7</sup>, or he has expressly reserved the right to enter and repair<sup>8</sup>, or he has an implied right to enter and repair<sup>9</sup>.

In the case of such a nuisance arising from want of repair under head (4) above, the landlord is liable whether or not he knew or ought reasonably to have known of the dangerous condition of the premises<sup>10</sup>; but, where the nuisance is created not by want of repair, but, for example, by the act of a trespasser, or a process of nature, neither the landlord nor the tenant is liable unless, with knowledge or means of knowledge, he allows the danger to continue<sup>11</sup>.

The fact that the landlord is liable for the existence of a nuisance does not exclude the tenant's liability as occupier<sup>12</sup>. The liability is the same whether the injury is caused to a member of the public on the highway or to the owner of adjoining property<sup>13</sup>, but the owner or occupier of dangerous premises cannot be liable in nuisance to persons injured while they are on those premises<sup>14</sup>.

The tenant may contract to indemnify the landlord<sup>15</sup>.

475. Landlord's liability for negligence.

Where premises are let under a tenancy<sup>1</sup> which puts on the landlord an obligation to the tenant for the maintenance or repair of the premises, the landlord owes to all persons who might reasonably be expected to be affected by defects in the state of the premises a duty to take such care as is reasonable in all the circumstances to see that they are reasonably safe from personal injury<sup>2</sup> or from damage to their property caused by a relevant defect<sup>3</sup>. This duty is owed if the landlord knows, whether as a result of being notified by the tenant or otherwise, or if he ought in all the circumstances to have known, of the relevant defect<sup>4</sup>.

Where premises are let under a tenancy which expressly or impliedly<sup>5</sup> gives the landlord the right to enter the premises to carry out any description of maintenance or repair of the premises, then, as from the time when he first is, or by notice or otherwise can put himself, in a position to exercise the right and so long as he is or can put himself in that position, he is to be treated, for the purposes of the above provisions<sup>6</sup>, but for no other purpose, as if he were under an obligation to the tenant for that description of maintenance or repair of the premises; but the landlord does not owe the tenant any duty by virtue of this provision in respect of any defect in the state of the premises arising from, or continuing because of, a failure to carry out an obligation expressly imposed on the tenant by the tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

The above provisions apply to a right of occupation given by contract or any enactment and not amounting to a tenancy as if the right were a tenancy<sup>8</sup>; and any duty imposed by those provisions is in addition to any duty a person may owe apart from those provisions<sup>9</sup>. The provisions bind the Crown<sup>10</sup>.

Any term of an agreement which purports to exclude or restrict, or has the effect of excluding or restricting, the operation of any of these provisions, or any liability arising by virtue of any of these provisions, is void<sup>11</sup>.

If the landlord does work on the premises after the commencement of the tenancy, he is under the same duty as any other person who is called in to carry out such work<sup>12</sup>, and is under a general duty to use reasonable care for the safety of those who he knows or ought reasonably to know may be affected by or lawfully in the vicinity of his work<sup>13</sup>. Further, where work of construction, repair, maintenance or demolition or any other work is done on or in relation to premises, any duty of care owed, because of the doing of the work, to persons who might reasonably be expected to be affected by defects in the state of the premises created by the doing of the work is not abated by the subsequent disposal of the premises by the person who owed the duty<sup>14</sup>.

A person taking on work for or in connection with the provision of a dwelling, whether the dwelling is provided by the erection or by the conversion or enlargement of a building, owes a duty:

- 1067 (1) if the dwelling is provided to the order of any person, to that person; and
- 1068 (2) without prejudice to head (1) above, to every person who acquires an interest, whether legal or equitable, in the dwelling, to see that the work which he takes on is done in a workmanlike or, as the case may be, professional manner, with proper materials and so that as regards that work the dwelling will be fit for habitation when completed<sup>15</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means (1) a tenancy created either immediately or derivatively out of the freehold, whether by a lease or underlease, by an agreement for a lease or underlease or by a tenancy agreement, but not including a mortgage term or any interest arising in favour of a mortgagor by his attorning tenant to his mortgagee; or (2) a tenancy at will or a tenancy on sufferance; or (3) a tenancy whether or not constituting a tenancy at common law, created by or in pursuance of any enactment; and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly: Defective Premises Act 1972 s 6(1). See also the text and note 8 infra.

2 For these purposes, 'personal injury' includes any disease and any impairment of a person's physical or mental condition: ibid s 6(1).

3 Ibid s 4(1). For these purposes, 'relevant defect' means a defect in the state of the premises existing at or after the material time and arising from, or continuing because of, an act or omission by the landlord which constitutes or would, if he had notice of the defect, have constituted a failure by him to carry out his obligation to the tenant for the maintenance or repair of the premises (s 4(3)); and 'the material time' means (1) where the tenancy commenced before 1 January 1974, that date; and (2) in all other cases, the earliest of the following times: (a) the time when the tenancy commences; (b) the time when the tenancy agreement is entered into; (c) the time when possession is taken of the premises in contemplation of the letting (ss 4(3), 7(2)).

Failure to carry out remedial works required to remedy defects which pose a danger to health, if such works are not works of repair, does not necessarily give rise to liability under s 4(1); if the works that would be required in order to remedy the inherent defects in design are not within the expression 'any description of maintenance or repair of the premises', the defect is not a 'relevant defect' for the purposes of s 4(3), and there is no duty under s 4(1) to take care to see that persons are reasonably safe from injury caused by that defect: see Lee v Leeds City Council, Ratcliffe v Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council [2002] EWCA Civ 06, [2002] 1 WLR 1488, [2002] LGR 305. Furthermore, the issue of causation must be determined in the normal way in deciding any liability for damage: see Townsend v Achilleas [2001] All ER (D) 221 (Oct) (tenant's property destroyed by fire; there was a faulty electrical installation in the premises but it was held on the evidence that although that installation was dangerously defective, it had not been the cause of the fire). Although a tenant suing under the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4 is under no obligation to show that the landlord had notice of the defect, and merely has to show a failure on the part of the landlord 'to take such care as is reasonable in all the circumstances' to see that the tenant is reasonably safe from personal injury, his damages may be reduced by reason of his contributory negligence if he has not brought the defect to the landlord's attention, since a tenant in occupation, and in immediate control of the premises, is in the best position either to effect the necessary repairs or to bring them to the attention of the landlord: see Sykes v Harry [2001] EWCA Civ 167, [2001] QB 1014, [2001] 1 EGLR 53.

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), references to the landlord in the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4 (apart from the first reference in s 4(1) and (4)) are to the RTM company and the reference to the material time is to the acquisition date: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 2(1)-(3).

4 Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4(2). The statutory protection is geared to the landlord's repairing, or deemed repairing, obligation and goes no wider than the repairing covenant: McNerny v London Borough of Lambeth (1988) 21 HLR 188, [1989] 1 EGLR 81, CA. As to the scope of the duty see McDonagh v Kent Area Health Authority (1981) 134 NLJ 567.

5 Eg of an implied right giving rise to liability under the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4: see Smith v Bradford Metropolitan Council (1982) 44 P & CR 171, 4 HLR 86, CA (entry to repair concreted rear yard); McAuley v Bristol City Council [1992] QB 134, [1992] 1 All ER 749, CA (entry to repair garden step).

6 le for the purposes of the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4(1)-(3): see the text and notes 1-4 supra.

7 Ibid s 4(4). The end of the tenancy extinguishes the landlord's right of entry and imputed obligation under s 4(4): Boldack v East Lindsey District Council (1998) 31 HLR 41, CA (no clause in the tenancy agreement which was operative at the time of the accident from which the obligation under the Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4(4) could be derived; the tenant could not rely on a right of entry which arose at the end of the previous tenant's tenancy).

8 Defective Premises Act 1972 s 4(6). 'Tenancy' and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly: s 4(6). Obligations imposed or rights given by any enactment in virtue of a tenancy are treated as imposed or given by the tenancy: s 4(5).

9 Ibid s 6(2).

10 Ibid s 5. As regards the Crown's liability in tort the Crown is not, however, bound further than it is made liable in tort by the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 (see s 2 (as amended)); and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 382: Defective Premises Act 1972 s 5.

475 Landlord's liability for negligence

NOTE 3--See Alker v Collingwood Housing Association [2007] EWCA Civ 343, [2007] 1 WLR 2230.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/10. REPAIR, FITNESS AND ALTERATION/(6) NUISANCE, NEGLIGENCE ETC/476. Landlord in possession of part of the premises.

476. Landlord in possession of part of the premises.

Where the landlord retains possession of part of the premises, such as the roof or one floor of a building, his liability for injury to persons or property on the demised premises resulting from the non-repair of that part depends, not upon any contractual obligation to repair, but upon negligence, namely, the ordinary duty of an occupier of property to take reasonable care that his property does not become dangerous to adjoining property or to persons lawfully on it<sup>1</sup>. In order that a person injured may recover damages, it is not necessary that the landlord should have had notice of the want of repair<sup>2</sup>.

In the absence of negligence the landlord is not in general liable<sup>3</sup> for the escape of deleterious things from the landlord's part of the premises, as the tenant takes the property as he finds it and impliedly consents to their presence on the landlord's premises<sup>4</sup>; but the tenant's consent cannot be implied to an unusual danger unless he knows of it<sup>5</sup>.

Where the landlord is bound by the terms or conditions governing the tenancy to permit persons to enter or use a part of the premises of which he retains possession, such as a means of access, he owes to such persons the common duty of care imposed on an occupier of premises<sup>6</sup>. As regards persons other than the tenant, the common duty of care may not be excluded or restricted by the terms of the tenancy; while, in so far as the terms of a tenancy which is created or renewed on or after 1 January 1958 impose on the landlord any higher duty to the tenant, he owes this higher duty also to persons other than the tenant, unless the terms of the tenancy provide to the contrary<sup>7</sup>. Where injury is caused on premises, of which he retains possession, by a defect due to the faulty execution of any work of construction, maintenance or repair by an independent contractor employed by the landlord, the landlord is not liable to a visitor, in the absence of knowledge of the defect, if he acted reasonably in entrusting the work to an independent contractor, and took reasonable care to satisfy himself that the contractor was competent and the work had been properly done<sup>8</sup>.

Where the landlord supplies a lift suitably constructed in the first place, he is not liable for accidents due to the nature of the lift itself<sup>9</sup>, nor for accidents due to the management of the lift unless he has retained control of it<sup>10</sup>.

An occupier of premises<sup>11</sup> owes a duty to another, not being his visitor, in respect of any risk of his suffering injury<sup>12</sup> on the premises by reason of any danger due to the state of the premises or to things done or omitted to be done on them if:

- 1069 (1) he is aware of the danger or has reasonable grounds to believe that it exists;
- 1070 (2) he knows or has reasonable grounds to believe that the other is in the vicinity of the danger concerned or that he may come into the vicinity of the danger (in either case, whether the other has lawful authority for being in that vicinity or not); and
- 1071 (3) the risk is one against which, in all the circumstances of the case, he may reasonably be expected to offer the other some protection<sup>13</sup>.

Where an occupier so owes a duty to another in respect of such a risk, the duty is to take such care as is reasonable in all the circumstances of the case to see that he does not suffer injury on the premises by reason of the danger concerned<sup>14</sup>. Any duty so owed in respect of a risk may, in an appropriate case, be discharged by taking such steps as are reasonable in all the circumstances of the case to give warning of the danger concerned or to discourage persons from incurring the risk<sup>15</sup>. No duty is so owed:

- 1072 (a) to any person in respect of risks willingly accepted as his by that person, the question whether a risk was so accepted to be decided on the same principles as in other cases in which one person owes a duty of care to another<sup>16</sup>;
- 1073 (b) to persons using the highway<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1074 (c) at any time when the public right of access<sup>18</sup> is exercisable in relation to land which is access land<sup>19</sup>, to any person in respect of:
128. (i) a risk resulting from the existence of any natural feature of the landscape<sup>20</sup>, or any river, stream, ditch or pond whether or not a natural feature; or

129. (ii) a risk of that person suffering injury when passing over, under or through any wall, fence or gate, except by proper use of the gate or of a stile<sup>21</sup>,

1075 but this does not prevent an occupier from so owing a duty in respect of any risk where the danger concerned is due to anything done by the occupier with the intention of creating that risk, or being reckless as to whether that risk is created<sup>22</sup>.

It was held in Akerib v Booth Ltd [1960] 1 All ER 481, [1960] 1 WLR 454 (revsd on another ground [1961] 1 All ER 380, [1961] 1 WLR 367, CA) that a landlord might exclude his liability for negligence by the terms of the tenancy agreement. A person cannot, however, by reference to any contract term or to a notice given to persons generally or to particular persons exclude or restrict his liability for death or personal injuries resulting from negligence; and in the case of any other loss or damage a person cannot so exclude or restrict his liability for negligence except in so far as the term or notice satisfies the requirements of reasonableness: Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s 2(1), (2). Section 2 does not extend to any contract so far as it relates to the creation or transfer of an interest in land (see s 1(2), Sch 1 para 1(b)) and applies to business liability only (see s 1(3)). See further CONTRACT. The scope of the exemption in Sch 1 para 1(b) is unclear, but in Electricity Supply Nominees Ltd v IAF Group plc [1993] 3 All ER 372, [1993] 1 WLR 1059 it was held that the exemption covered not only the demise itself but all the covenants that were integral to the lease. Akerib v Booth Ltd supra may, therefore, still be good law on this point; sed quaere. For these purposes, the landlord is the occupier of parts of premises retained by him and excluded from the demise, such as a common staircase, an entrance hall, a roof, a balcony or a forecourt: Wheat v E Lacon & Co Ltd [1966] AC 552, [1966] 1 All ER 582, CA; applied in Jordan v Achera (1988) 20 HLR 607, CA.

478. Duty to manage asbestos in non-domestic premises.

For the purposes of the statutory duty to manage asbestos in non-domestic premises<sup>1</sup>, 'the duty holder' means:

- 1076 (1) every person who has, by virtue of a contract or tenancy, an obligation of any extent in relation to the maintenance or repair of non-domestic premises or any means of access thereto or egress therefrom; or
- 1077 (2) in relation to any part of non-domestic premises where there is no such contract or tenancy, every person who has, to any extent, control of that part of those non-domestic premises or any means of access thereto or egress therefrom; and where there is more than one such duty holder, the relative contribution to be made by each such person in complying with the statutory requirements will be determined by the nature and extent of the maintenance and repair obligation owed by that person<sup>2</sup>.

In order to enable him to manage the risk from asbestos in non-domestic premises, the duty holder must ensure:

- 1078 (a) that a suitable and sufficient assessment is carried out as to whether asbestos is or is liable to be present in the premises<sup>3</sup>;
- 1079 (b) that the assessment is reviewed forthwith if there is reason to suspect that it is no longer valid or there has been a significant change in the premises to which it relates<sup>4</sup>;
- 1080 (c) that the conclusions of the assessment and every review are recorded<sup>5</sup>;
- 1081 (d) that, where the assessment shows that asbestos is or is liable to be present in any part of the premises:
- 107
  - 130. (i) a determination of the risk from that asbestos is made;
  - 131. (ii) a written plan identifying those parts of the premises concerned is prepared; and
  - 132. (iii) the measures which are to be taken for managing the risk are specified in the written plan<sup>6</sup>;
  - 1082 (e) that:
  - 109
    - 133. (i) the plan is reviewed and revised at regular intervals, and forthwith if there is reason to suspect that the plan is no longer valid, or if there has been a significant change in the premises to which the plan relates;
    - 134. (ii) the measures specified in the plan are implemented; and
    - 135. (iii) the measures taken to implement the plan are recorded<sup>7</sup>.

Every person must co-operate with the duty holder so far as is necessary to enable the duty holder to comply with his duties under these provisions<sup>8</sup>.

The Health and Safety Executive<sup>9</sup> has power to grant exemptions from these requirements<sup>10</sup>.

Contravention of the above requirements is an offence<sup>11</sup>.

UPDATE

478 Duty to manage asbestos in non-domestic premises

NOTE 10--SI 2006/2739 reg 32 amended: SI 2008/2852.

(7) WAR DAMAGE AND DAMAGE DURING REQUISITIONING

479. War damage.

Where, by virtue of the provisions, whether express or implied, of a disposition<sup>1</sup> or of any contract collateral thereto, an obligation (an 'obligation to repair') is imposed on any person to do any repairs in relation to the land<sup>2</sup> comprised in the disposition, those provisions are to be construed as not extending to the imposition of any liability on that person to make good any war damage<sup>3</sup> occurring to the land so comprised<sup>4</sup>.

Where war damage occurs to land comprised in a disposition, then, in so far as compliance with an obligation to repair as so modified is, having regard to the extent of the war damage:

- 1083 (1) impracticable, or only practicable at a cost which is unreasonable in view of all the circumstances; or 1084 (2) of no substantial advantage to the person who would otherwise be entitled to the benefit of the obligation, the obligation is suspended until the war damage is made good to such an extent that compliance with the obligation is practicable at a reasonable cost and is of substantial advantage to the person entitled to the benefit thereof<sup>5</sup>.

Any disposition or contract collateral thereto containing a provision whereunder an obligation to make good war damage as such is imposed on any person has effect as if that provision were not contained therein<sup>6</sup>.

Where, by virtue of the provisions, whether express or implied, of any lease<sup>7</sup> or any contract collateral thereto, an obligation to repair is imposed on the tenant, the lease has effect as if there were contained therein covenants by the tenant<sup>8</sup> with the landlord<sup>9</sup> that, in the event of war damage occurring to the land comprised in the lease, the tenant will:

- 1085 (a) as soon as practicable after the damage has become known to him, serve a notice on the landlord stating that the damage has occurred and the general nature of the damage so far as it is known to him; and 1086 (b) permit the landlord or any person authorised by him, at such times as may be reasonable in the circumstances, to enter upon the land for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of the damage and making it good either temporarily or permanently<sup>10</sup>.

The statutory provisions relating to war damage<sup>11</sup> have effect in relation to any war damage notwithstanding any contract to the contrary made before that damage occurred<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'disposition' means any instrument, including an enactment, or oral transaction, whether made before, on or after 1 September 1939, creating or transferring any interest in land: Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 s 1(5). Where a disposition is made under or in pursuance of an enactment which imposes an obligation to repair in relation to the land the subject of the disposition, the obligation is deemed for these purposes to have been imposed by virtue of the provisions of the disposition: s 1(6).

2 For these purposes, 'land' means land of any tenure, and includes any buildings or works situated on, over or under land: ibid s 24.

3 For these purposes, 'war damage' has the meaning assigned to it by the War Damage Act 1941 s 80(1), (2) (repealed): Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) (Amendment) Act 1941 s 17(2). The definition of 'war damage' in the War Damage Act 1941 s 80(1), (2) was, however, replaced by the War Damage Act 1943 s 2(1) (repealed); and the War Damage Act 1943 was itself subsequently repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1981 s 1(1), Sch 1 Pt XI.

4 Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 s 1(1). The provisions of s 1 have effect subject to the provisions of Pt II (ss 4-17) (as amended) (see PARA 645 et seq post): s 1(7).

5 Ibid s 1(2).

6 Ibid s 1(3). Where, under s 1(1)-(3) (see the text and notes 1-5 supra) an obligation to repair is modified or suspended or an obligation to make good war damage as such is extinguished, all rights and remedies, whether by way of damages, forfeiture, re-entry, sale, foreclosure or otherwise, arising out of the non-fulfilment of the obligation, including all rights against any person who has guaranteed the fulfilment of the obligation, are modified or extinguished accordingly: s 1(4).

7 For these purposes, 'lease' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 (see PARA 459 note 1 ante): Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 s 24.

8 For these purposes, 'tenant', in relation to a lease, means the person for the time being entitled to the term created by the lease: ibid s 24.

9 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a lease, means the person who under the lease is, as between himself and the tenant, for the time being entitled to the rents and profits of the demised premises payable under the lease: ibid s 24.

10 Ibid s 2(1). Section 2(1) has effect as if references to a lease, tenant and landlord included respectively references to a mortgage, mortgagor and mortgagee; but it is not lawful for a mortgagee without leave of the court to enforce any right or remedy arising out of a breach of the covenant referred to in s 2(1)(a) (see head (a) in the text): s 2(2). For these purposes, 'mortgage' includes charge and debenture: s 24.

11 Ie the Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939.

12 Ibid s 21.

480. Damage during requisitioning.

Where, in the exercise of emergency powers<sup>1</sup>, possession of any land comprised in a lease<sup>2</sup> is taken on behalf of Her Majesty, then, during the period while possession so taken is retained, no remedy for breach of any repairing covenant<sup>3</sup> contained in the lease may be enforced, whether by action or otherwise, in respect of any damage<sup>4</sup> to the land occurring during that period; and, if the lease determines while possession of the land is so retained, or if upon possession of the land being given up, compensation in respect of the taking of possession thereof becomes payable for any such damage to the person entitled to the benefit of the covenant, no remedy for breach of the covenant may at any time be enforced in respect of that damage<sup>5</sup>.

Where possession of any such land so taken at any time after 24 August 1939 is or has at any time since that date been given up during the currency of the lease, and compensation in respect of the taking of possession thereof becomes or has become payable for any such damage to any person other than the tenant, then, if the tenant incurs expenditure in making good any of that damage, he may recover from that person an amount equal to the expenditure so incurred, not exceeding so much of the compensation payable to that person as may be agreed by the tenant and that person or, in default of agreement, as may be determined by the court, to be payable in respect of the damage<sup>6</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'emergency powers' means any power conferred by the Transport Act 2000 ss 93, 94 (as amended) (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 44) or any power exercisable by virtue of the prerogative of the Crown: Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1944 s 5 (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1976; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a)).

2 For these purposes, 'lease' includes an underlease or other tenancy, an assignment operating as a lease or underlease, and an agreement for a lease, underlease or tenancy, or for such an assignment and the expression 'covenant' is to be construed accordingly: Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1944 s 5.

3 For these purposes, 'repairing covenant' means a covenant, whether express or implied, and whether general or specific, to keep in repair any premises comprised in a lease, or to leave or put any such premises in repair, or to pay a sum of money in lieu of leaving or putting the premises in repair, at the termination of the lease, but does not include a covenant to lay out in the reinstatement of any such premises money received under a policy of insurance: ibid s 5. See also note 2 supra.

4 For these purposes, 'damage' includes dilapidations, but does not include war damage within the meaning of the War Damage Act 1943 (repealed: see PARA 479 note 3 ante): Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1944 s 5.

5 Ibid s 1(1). The provisions of s 1 are deemed to have had effect as from 24 August 1939: s 1(2). Where the tenancy ends during the requisition, the liability of the tenant on the repairing covenant is assessed having regard to the state of the premises at the date of requisition: Smiley v Townshend [1950] 2 KB 311, [1950] 1 All ER 530, CA.

6 Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1944 s 2(1). The jurisdiction under s 2 is exercisable by the county court: see s 2(2).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/481. Tenant's right to assign.

11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE

(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION

481. Tenant's right to assign.

In the absence of provision to the contrary, a tenant for years or a tenant from year to year or other term has the right to assign his term or tenancy, or to create underleases or subtenancies<sup>1</sup>. A restraint on assignment or underletting is, however, valid, and may be created either by condition or by covenant. If it is created by a condition, the condition will express the lease to be void upon those events<sup>2</sup>, but it will be construed as making the lease subject to re-entry at the election of the landlord<sup>3</sup>. More usually the restraint will be imposed by the tenant's covenanting not to assign or underlet<sup>4</sup>. An assignment in breach of such a covenant or condition is not void but is effective subject to the landlord's rights to forfeit the lease<sup>5</sup>.

In relation to tenancies beginning on or after 1 January 1996, where a tenant does assign his tenancy, the benefit and burden of all covenants pass on the assignment and the assignee becomes bound by the tenant covenants to the extent that they previously bound the assignor<sup>6</sup>; but assignments that are in breach of covenant cannot release the assigning landlord or tenant from the covenants contained in the assigned tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

1 See Doe d Mitchinson v Carter (1798) 8 Term Rep 57 at 60; Church v Brown (1808) 15 Ves 258 at 264. Similarly an agreement for a lease is assignable in equity: see Tolhurst v Associated Portland Cement Manufacturers (1900) Ltd [1903] AC 414 at 423, HL, per Lord Lindley. An assignment by a tenant at will determines the tenancy, however, so soon as the landlord has notice: see PARA 204 ante. As to the assignment and devolution of leases generally see PARA 547 et seq post; as to the requirement that an assignment must be by deed see PARA 549 post; as to the assignment and subletting of assured tenancies see PARA 1063 post; and as to the assignment and subletting of secure tenancies see PARAS 1323-1328 post. A protected shorthold tenancy was not capable of being assigned except in pursuance of a court order: see PARA 1009 post.

2 See Doe d Henniker v Watt (1828) 8 B & C 308. As forfeiture is a matter of strict construction of law, an assignment which is void does not, however, give cause for forfeiture: Doe d Lloyd v Powell (1826) 5 B & C 308 at 313; but these cases antedate the requirements of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended): see PARA 619 post.

3 As to forfeiture see PARA 603 et seq post.

4 Paul v Nurse (1828) 8 B & C 486; and see Re Johnson, ex p Blackett (1894) 70 LT 381. The covenant may be binding notwithstanding that the landlord has re-entered on part of the land: Collins v Sillye (1651) Sty 265. A covenant not to assign without consent applies to a reassignment to the original tenant: McEacharn v Colton [1902] AC 104, PC.

5 See Williams v Earle (1868) LR 3 QB 739; Old Grovebury Manor Farm Ltd v W Seymour Plant Sales & Hire Ltd (No 2) [1979] 3 All ER 504, [1979] 1 WLR 1397, CA.

6 See the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 3 (as amended), s 5; and PARAS 580, 582 post.

7 See ibid s 11; and PARA 588 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/482. Covenant against assignment or parting with possession.

482. Covenant against assignment or parting with possession.

A covenant 'not to assign'<sup>1</sup>, or 'not to assign or otherwise part with'<sup>2</sup>, the premises is broken only by a legal assignment for the entire residue of the term. Consequently the covenant is not broken by a declaration of trust of the premises in favour of a third person<sup>3</sup>, or by the deposit of the lease as security for an advance<sup>4</sup>, or by the grant of an underlease of part of the premises<sup>5</sup>, or for part of the term<sup>6</sup>. A covenant 'not to assign or part with the possession of the premises' goes further and is broken as, for example, where the tenant makes an equitable assignment of the lease and places the assignee in possession; but a tenant who retains the legal possession of the whole of the premises at all material times does not commit a breach of the covenant by allowing other people to use the premises<sup>7</sup>. The retention of possession by one partner alone on a dissolution of the partnership is not a breach of a covenant against assignment contained in a lease to both<sup>8</sup>; but, if one executes a formal assignment to the other, that is a breach<sup>9</sup>. A covenant not to part with the possession of the premises is not broken by the tenant's parting with part of the premises<sup>10</sup> and, therefore, it is common to find in leases a covenant 'not to assign, underlet or part with possession of all or part of the demised premises'; but a covenant not to assign or underlet any part of the premises would be broken by an assignment or underletting of the whole<sup>11</sup>. The various provisions in such a covenant are not mutually exclusive so that breach of one provision may constitute breach of another<sup>12</sup>.

The fact that an overriding lease granted under the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 to a former tenant or guarantor<sup>13</sup> takes effect subject to the relevant tenancy in respect of which it is created does not constitute a breach of any covenant of the lease against subletting or parting with possession of the premises demised by the lease or any part of them<sup>14</sup>.

1 Gentle v Faulkner [1900] 2 QB 267, CA, applied in Brown & Root Technology Ltd v Sun Alliance & London Assurance Co Ltd [2001] Ch 733, [1997] 1 EGLR 39, CA (in the absence of a context showing an extended meaning, 'assignment' means an assignment of the legal estate, not the beneficial interest). The mortgaging of a greenhouse which the tenant is entitled to remove from the demised premises is not a breach of a covenant against 'any alienation of the premises': Moss v James (1877) 37 LT 715; affd (1878) 38 LT 595, CA. An agreement for a lease which is to be 'non-assignable' means only that the lease is not to be assigned and does not import a covenant against underletting or parting with possession: Sweet and Maxwell Ltd v Universal News Services Ltd [1964] 2 QB 699, [1964] 2 All ER 30, CA.

An assignment in breach of covenant cannot release the assignor from the covenants in the assigned tenancy: see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 11; and PARA 588 post.

2 Doe d Pitt v Hogg (1824) 4 Dow & Ry KB 226 at 229; also reported sub nom Doe d Pitt v Laming (1824) Ry & M 36. In a mining lease it is, however, a breach if the tenant gives to a third person the right to get and carry away part of the minerals: Lord Mostyn v Manger (1901) 17 TLR 199; affd 17 TLR 281, CA.

3 The declaration of trust is not converted into an assignment by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 49(2); Gentle v Faulkner [1900] 2 QB 267, CA (decided under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 s 24(4) (repealed)); applied in Brown & Root Technology Ltd v Sun Alliance & London Assurance Co Ltd [2001] Ch 733, [1997] 1 EGLR 39, CA). Richards v Crawshay (1892) 8 TLR 446, so far as to the contrary, is overruled. The Supreme Court Act 1981 prospectively renamed as the Senior Courts Act 1981 by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1, as from a day to be appointed under s 148(1); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

A covenant against parting with possession may, therefore, not be effective in preventing a tenant from allowing other persons to occupy the premises as licensees. If it is desired to restrict such occupation, the covenant should refer specifically to allowing others to occupy the premises. See also Rainham Chemical Works Ltd v Belvedere Fish Guano Co Ltd [1921] 2 AC 465, HL (occupation by a company as agent of the tenants held not to exclude occupation by the tenants, so as to free them from liability for damage caused by an explosion on the premises); Mean Fiddler Holdings Ltd v Islington London Borough Council [2003] EWCA Civ 160, [2003] 2 P & CR 102, [2003] 2 EGLR 7 (operating a night club through promoters did not amount to sharing occupation but no agreed test to determine the issue); Akici v LR Butlin Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 1296, [2006] 2 All ER 872, [2006] 1 WLR 201 (covenant not to assign, sublet or part with possession of the premises, or to share possession, not breached by a sharing of occupation; on the facts the judge was entitled to conclude the lessee had shared possession). ### 482 Covenant against assignment or parting with possession

NOTE 3--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

NOTE 10--Allowing another party to occupy and use premises does not necessarily amount to a parting with possession in law: Clarence House Ltd v National Westminster Bank plc [2009] EWCA Civ 1311, [2010] 08 EG 106, [2009] All ER (D) 70 (Dec).

483. Involuntary assignments.

A covenant against assignment is restricted in its operation to voluntary assignments<sup>1</sup>. It is, therefore, not broken where the lease is taken in execution<sup>2</sup>, provided the execution is bona fide<sup>3</sup>; nor where it vests in a trustee in bankruptcy<sup>4</sup>; nor where it passes on the death of the tenant, whether as part of his personal estate<sup>5</sup>, or under a specific bequest<sup>6</sup>; nor where it is acquired by a public body under powers of compulsory acquisition<sup>7</sup>; nor where the court makes a vesting order under the Trustee Act 1925<sup>8</sup>; but it is broken by an assignment of a company's leasehold by the liquidator in a voluntary or compulsory liquidation<sup>9</sup>. Involuntary assignments may be prohibited by express words in the lease; and it is common to find stipulations for forfeiture in the event of the tenant's becoming bankrupt or going into liquidation.

1 As to whether a covenant against assignment without consent and a covenant which absolutely prohibits assignment run with the land or are to be binding on the tenant's assigns in cases where the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 does not apply see PARA 564 post.

Such an assignment is the act of the company acting through the liquidator. In Re Birkbeck Permanent Benefit Building Society, Special Receiver v Licences Insurance Corp'n [1913] 2 Ch 34, the society was an unregistered company and, therefore, all its property vested in the liquidator, and there was, moreover, a provision excepting assignments by operation of law, which expressly prevented the assignment in question from being such an assignment as to work a forfeiture. The position of the liquidator is different from that of a trustee in bankruptcy, who does not dispose of the bankrupt's property as such, all the property being vested in him: Re Farrow's Bank Ltd [1921] 2 Ch 164 at 174, CA.

484. Covenant against underletting.

A covenant against underletting is not broken by a letting of lodgings<sup>1</sup> or the grant of a licence; but it is broken whenever the tenant parts with the exclusive possession of the premises or, if the covenant is so worded, any part of the premises to a subtenant<sup>2</sup>. If the covenant is against underletting simply, however, an underletting of part is no breach<sup>3</sup>. A covenant not to underlet is broken by an underletting from year to year<sup>4</sup>. To constitute a covenant against underletting it is not necessary that words appropriate to underletting should be used; it is sufficient if the covenant prohibits a disposition for a part only of the term<sup>5</sup>. The court will be careful not to let a provision for forfeiture go beyond the proper meaning of the words; and, in the absence of reference to a mere change of occupancy, or to a disposition for part of the term, words primarily importing assignment will not include underletting<sup>6</sup>. Words which are appropriate to underletting may, however, have their scope widened, and may extend to assignment, if they are intended to be applicable to an alienation for the entire residue of the term<sup>7</sup>. A forfeiture will be incurred although the underletting is only a mortgage by way of sub-demise<sup>8</sup>.

To constitute a breach there must be a substantial parting with a substantial part of the premises: Mashiter v Smith (1887) 3 TLR 673. A mere advertising for a tenant is not a breach: Gourlay v Duke of Somerset (1812) 1 Ves & B 68. A statutory body in which the term is vested is subject to the restriction of the covenant: Metropolitan Water Board v Solomon [1908] 2 Ch 214. The mere fact that a third person is in occupation who does not claim under the tenant is not evidence of a breach of covenant (Doe v Payne (1815) 1 Stark 86); but, if he appears to be subtenant to the tenant, this is prima facie evidence of underletting (Doe d Hindly v Rickarby (1803) 5 Esp 4).

If, having underlet part of the premises with the landlord's consent, the tenant subsequently underlets the remainder without obtaining the landlord's consent, a covenant against underletting the premises is broken, as the tenant has never obtained the landlord's consent to the underletting of the whole (Chatterton v Terrell [1923] AC 578, HL); but, if the effect of a covenant is such that it amounts to a covenant not to underlet the whole of the premises for a term of more than three years, the covenant is not broken by the tenant's underletting part to one subtenant for a period of less than three years and subsequently underletting the remainder to another subtenant for more than three years (Roberts v Enlayde Ltd [1924] 1 KB 335, CA). COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/485. Conditions of landlord's consent to assignment.

485. Conditions of landlord's consent to assignment.

In all leases<sup>1</sup> containing a covenant, condition or agreement against assigning, underletting or parting with the possession<sup>2</sup>, or disposing of the land<sup>3</sup> or property<sup>4</sup> leased, without licence or consent, unless the lease contains an express provision to the contrary, such covenant, condition or agreement is deemed to be subject to a proviso to the effect that no fine<sup>5</sup> or sum of money in the nature of a fine shall be payable for or in respect of such licence or consent<sup>6</sup>. The proviso so implied does not preclude the right to require payment of a reasonable sum in respect of any legal or other expense incurred in relation to such licence or consent<sup>7</sup>, nor does it prevent the landlord from requiring the assignee to covenant to pay the rent and perform the tenant's covenants during the residue of the term<sup>8</sup>, or, in the case of a lease granted under a building contract, from requiring a deposit as security for the completion of the works<sup>9</sup>; but it does preclude him from demanding an increased rent<sup>10</sup>. If consent is refused except on payment, the tenant is entitled to assign without consent<sup>11</sup>; and, if he enters into a contract to pay a fine, the contract is not enforceable against him<sup>12</sup>. The proviso so implied does not, however, make payment of a fine for consent illegal and, therefore, if the tenant has paid such a fine, he may not require repayment<sup>13</sup>; and, if the assignee has covenanted to pay a sum in the nature of a fine, he is liable on the covenant<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 145 note 1 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'possession' includes receipt of rent and profits or the right to receive the same if any: Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(xix).

3 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'property' includes any interest in real property: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(xx).

5 For these purposes, 'fine' includes a premium or foregift and any payment, consideration or benefit in the nature of a fine, premium or foregift: ibid s 205(1)(xxiii). Thus it includes any valuable consideration given or required in such circumstances that, if it were money, it would be what is commonly known as a fine (Waite v Jennings [1906] 2 KB 11 at 18, CA), and includes a stipulation by a landlord, who is a brewer, that a free public house is to be a tied house for the remainder of the term assigned (Gardner & Co v Cone [1928] Ch 955). To take in advance the whole rent for the duration of a tenancy is to take a fine: see Hughes v Waite [1957] 1 All ER 603, [1957] 1 WLR 713.

486. Unreasonable withholding of consent.

In all leases<sup>1</sup>, whether made before, on or after 1 January 1926, containing a covenant, condition or agreement against assigning, underletting, charging or parting with the possession of the demised premises or any part thereof without licence or consent, such covenant, condition or agreement is deemed, notwithstanding any express provision to the contrary, to be subject to a proviso to the effect that such licence or consent is not to be unreasonably withheld<sup>2</sup>. The proviso so implied does not, however, preclude the right of the landlord<sup>3</sup> to require payment of a reasonable sum for legal or other expenses incurred in connection with such licence or consent<sup>4</sup>. The proviso so implied does not apply if the lease requires pre-conditions to be met so that the circumstances in which the tenant can properly apply for assignment or subletting are restricted<sup>5</sup>. The tenant is bound to ask for the consent before he assigns, even though it could not properly be refused<sup>6</sup>, and to give the landlord a reasonable time in which to consider the matter<sup>7</sup>. If through forgetfulness he omits to do so, he becomes liable to forfeiture<sup>8</sup>. The landlord is entitled to be told the true nature of the transaction to which he is asked to consent, and to withhold his consent until the terms are disclosed<sup>9</sup>. A written consent given 'subject to licence' will be an unconditional consent for the purposes of the covenant<sup>10</sup>.

Where, however, the landlord and the tenant under a qualifying lease<sup>11</sup> have entered into an agreement<sup>12</sup> specifying for these purposes:

- 1087 (1) any circumstances in which the landlord may withhold his licence or consent to an assignment<sup>13</sup> of the demised premises or any part of them; or
- 1088 (2) any conditions subject to which any such licence or consent may be granted, then the landlord:

- 1089 (a) is not to be regarded as unreasonably withholding his licence or consent to any such assignment if he withholds it on the ground, and it is the case, that any such circumstances exist; and
- 1090 (b) if he gives any such licence or consent subject to any such conditions, is not to be regarded as giving it subject to unreasonable conditions<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 459 note 1 ante. Certain leases, are, however, excluded: see note 2 supra.

2 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a). For the grounds for refusal and the test of unreasonableness see PARA 492 post. The proviso so implied has no application where the lease expressly provides that in certain circumstances consent will not be withheld (Moat v Martin [1950] 1 KB 175, [1949] 2 All ER 646, CA); but the parties to the lease may not restrict the operation of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a) by stipulating what is to be deemed unreasonable (Creery v Summersell and Flowerdew & Co Ltd [1949] Ch 751; Re Smith's Lease, Smith v Richards [1951] 1 All ER 346). These decisions must, however, now be viewed in the context of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1A)-(1E) (as added): see the text and notes 11-14 infra. It was held in Adler v Upper Grosvenor Street Investment Ltd [1957] 1 All ER 229, [1957] 1 WLR 227, and in Bocardo SA v S and M Hotels Ltd [1979] 3 All ER 737, [1980] 1 WLR 17, CA, that the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a) does not invalidate a provision that before assigning the tenant must offer to surrender his lease; such a provision is an estate contract registrable under the Land Charges Act 1972: Greene v Church Comrs for England [1974] Ch 467, [1974] 3 All ER 609, CA.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a) does not apply to leases of agricultural holdings within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 which are leases in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323), or to farm business tenancies within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302) (Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(4) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 15; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 6)) or to assured tenancies (see the Housing Act 1988 s 15(2); and PARA 1063 post); nor does it apply to any covenant entered into to give effect to the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 s 30(2) (see PARA 1478 post) (s 30(5)).

Nor does the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a) apply to (1) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre; or (2) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation: see the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 84(1), (3)(c) (substituted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 96); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 532; the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 7(1), (3)(c); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 658; the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 149(3)(c) (amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 66(2)(a), (3)(c)); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 157.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a) also does not apply to absolute prohibitions against assigning, underletting, charging and parting with possession, although there have been dicta casting doubt on this: see Property and Bloodstock Ltd v Emerton [1968] Ch 94 at 119, [1967] 3 All ER 321 at 330, CA, per Danckwerts LJ; cf the observations of Romer LJ in FW Woolworth & Co Ltd v Lambert [1937] Ch 37 at 58, 59, [1936] 2 All ER 1523 at 1540, CA, where it is implicit in the judgment that he accepts the distinction between absolute and conditional covenants and that the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19 (as amended) does not apply to absolute covenants. That distinction is also implicit in the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988: see PARAS 490-491 post.

3 For these purposes, 'landlord' means any person who under the lease is, as between himself and the tenant or other lessee, for the time being entitled to the rents and profits of the demised premises payable under the lease: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 25(1). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), s 19(1) applies as if (1) the reference to the landlord; and (2) the final reference to the lessor, were to the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 1(1), (2).

11 For these purposes, 'qualifying lease' means any lease which is a new tenancy for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 1 (see PARA 578 post) other than a residential lease, namely a lease by which a building or part of a building is let wholly or mainly as a single private residence: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1E)(a) (s 19(1A)-(1E) added by the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 22).

12 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1A) (as added) (see the text and notes 11-12 infra) applies to such an agreement as is mentioned therein (1) whether it is contained in the lease or not; and (2) whether it is made at the time when the lease is granted or at any other time falling before the application for the landlord's licence or consent is made: s 19(1B) (as added: see note 9 supra). It does not, however, apply to any such agreement to the extent that any circumstances or conditions specified in it are framed by reference to any matter falling to be determined by the landlord or by any other person for the purposes of the agreement, unless under the terms of the agreement: (a) that person's power to determine that matter is required to be exercised reasonably; or (b) the tenant is given an unrestricted right to have any such determination reviewed by a person independent of both landlord and tenant whose identity is ascertainable by reference to the agreement; and in the latter case the agreement provides for the determination made by any such independent person on the review to be conclusive as to the matter in question: s 19(1C) (as so added).

13 For these purposes, references to assignment include parting with possession on assignment: ibid s 19(1E)(b) (as added: see note 9 supra).

14 Ibid s 19(1A) (as added: see note 9 supra). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1 (qualified duty to consent to assignment etc: see PARA 490 post) has effect subject to the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1A) (as so added): s 19(1A).

COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/487. Tenant's remedy where consent is unreasonably refused.

487. Tenant's remedy where consent is unreasonably refused.

The implied proviso<sup>1</sup> that consent shall not be unreasonably withheld is not to be construed as implying a covenant on the part of the landlord not to refuse his consent arbitrarily or unreasonably<sup>2</sup>; but, if in fact it is so refused, the tenant is at liberty to assign without the landlord's consent<sup>3</sup> and may obtain a declaration by the court of his right to do so<sup>4</sup>.

Where a landlord withholds his licence or consent to an assignment of the tenancy or a subletting, charging or parting with the possession of the demised property or any part thereof, and the High Court has jurisdiction to make a declaration that the licence or consent was unreasonably withheld, then, without prejudice to the jurisdiction of the High Court, the county court has the like jurisdiction whatever the net annual value for rating<sup>5</sup> of the demised property is to be taken to be for the purposes of the County Courts Act 1984 and notwithstanding that the tenant does not seek any relief other than the declaration<sup>6</sup>.

Where, on the making of an application to a county court for such a declaration, the court is satisfied that consent was unreasonably withheld, it must make a declaration accordingly<sup>7</sup>.

Where the licence or consent of the landlord or of any other person is required for the disposal<sup>1</sup> to any person of premises in Great Britain<sup>2</sup> comprised in a tenancy<sup>3</sup>, then subject to certain statutory exceptions<sup>4</sup> it is unlawful for the landlord or other person to discriminate against a person on grounds of sex, race, or disability by withholding the licence or consent for disposal of the premises to him or her<sup>5</sup>. Unlawful discrimination in the context of landlord and tenant law has already been discussed<sup>6</sup> and is dealt with in more detail elsewhere in this work<sup>7</sup>.

489. Building leases.

In all leases<sup>1</sup>, whether made before, on or after 1 January 1926, containing a covenant, condition or agreement against assigning, underletting, charging or parting with the possession of the demised premises or any part thereof without licence or consent, such covenant, condition or agreement is deemed, notwithstanding any express provision to the contrary, to be subject, if the lease is for more than 40 years and is made in consideration wholly or partially of the erection, or the substantial improvement, addition or alteration, of buildings, and the lessor is not a government department or a local or public authority or a statutory<sup>2</sup> or public utility<sup>3</sup> company, to a proviso to the effect that in the case of any assignment, underletting, charging or parting with the possession, whether by the holders of the lease or any undertenant, whether immediate or not, effected more than seven years before the end of the term, no consent or licence shall be required, if notice in writing of the transaction is given to the lessor within six months after the transaction is effected<sup>4</sup>.

In its application to a qualifying lease<sup>5</sup>, however, the above provisions do not have effect in relation to any assignment<sup>6</sup> of the lease<sup>7</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 459 note 1 ante.

2 For these purposes, the expression 'statutory company' means any company constituted by or under an Act of Parliament to construct, work or carry on any tramway, hydraulic power, dock, canal or railway undertaking: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 25(1) (amended by the Gas Act 1986 s 67(4), Sch 9 Pt I; the Water Act 1989 s 109(3), Sch 27 Pt I; the Electricity Act 1989 s 112(4), Sch 18).

References in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 to a statutory company include references to (1) a gas transporter (see the Gas Act 1995 s 16(1), Sch 4 para 1(4)); (2) the Environment Agency, a water undertaker and a sewerage undertaker (see the Water Act 1989 s 190(1), Sch 25 para 1(3) (amended by the Environment Act 1995 (Consequential Amendments) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/593, reg 3, Sch 2 para 4)); and (3) a holder of a licence under the Electricity Act 1989 s 6 (as substituted and amended) (see s 112(1), Sch 16 para 1(2)).

3 For these purposes, the expression 'public utility company' means any company within the meaning of the Companies Act 1985 (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 1) or a society registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARAS 2395, 2396) carrying on any such undertaking as is described in note 2 supra: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 25(1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a).

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(b). Section 19(1)(b) does not, however, apply to leases of agricultural holdings within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 which are leases in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323), or to farm business tenancies within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302) or to mining leases: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(4) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 15; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 6). For the meaning of 'mining lease' see MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 322.

Nor does the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(b) apply to (1) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre; or (2) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation: see the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 84(1), (3)(c) (substituted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 96); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 532; the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 7(1), (3)(c); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 658; the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 149(3)(c) (amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 66(2)(a), (3)(c)); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 157.

5 For the meaning of 'qualifying lease' see PARA 486 note 11 ante.

6 For the meaning of references to an assignment for these purposes see PARA 486 note 13 ante.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1D) (added by the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 22).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/490. Qualified duty to consent to assignment etc.

490. Qualified duty to consent to assignment etc.

In any case where:

- 1091 (1) a tenancy<sup>1</sup> includes a covenant<sup>2</sup> on the part of the tenant<sup>3</sup> not to enter into one or more of the following transactions, that is to say assigning, underletting, charging or parting with the possession of, the premises comprised in the tenancy or any part of the premises without the consent<sup>4</sup> of the landlord<sup>5</sup> or some other person<sup>6</sup>; but
- 1092 (2) the covenant is subject to the qualification that the consent is not to be unreasonably withheld, whether or not it is also subject to any other qualification, then, where there is served on the person who may consent to a proposed transaction<sup>7</sup> a written application by the tenant for consent to the transaction, he owes a duty to the tenant within a reasonable time<sup>8</sup>:

- 1093 (a) to give consent, except in a case where it is reasonable not to give consent<sup>9</sup>;
- 1094 (b) to serve on the tenant written notice of his decision whether or not to give consent specifying in addition, if the consent is given subject to conditions, the conditions and, if the consent is withheld, the reasons for withholding it<sup>10</sup>.

It is reasonable for a person not to give consent to a proposed transaction only in a case where, if he withheld consent and the tenant completed the transaction, the tenant would be in breach of a covenant<sup>11</sup>.

It is for the person who owed any duty under heads (a) and (b) above:

- 1095 (i) if he gave consent and the question arises whether he gave it within a reasonable time, to show that he did;
- 1096 (ii) if he gave consent subject to any condition and the question arises whether the condition was a reasonable condition, to show that it was;
- 1097 (iii) if he did not give consent and the question arises whether it was reasonable for him not to do so, to show that it was reasonable;

and, if the question arises whether he served notice within a reasonable time, to show that he did<sup>12</sup>.

If, in a case to which the above provisions apply, any person receives a written application by the tenant for consent to a proposed transaction and that person:

- 1098 (A) is a person who may consent to the transaction or, though not such a person, is the landlord; and
- 1099 (B) believes that another person, other than a person who he believes has received the application or a copy of it, is a person who may consent to the transaction, he owes a duty to the tenant, whether or not he owes him any duty under the above provisions, to take such steps as are reasonable to secure the receipt within a reasonable time by the other person of a copy of the application<sup>13</sup>.

A claim that a person has broken any duty under the above provisions may be made the subject of civil proceedings in like manner as any other claim in tort for breach of statutory duty<sup>14</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means any lease or other tenancy, whether made before, on or after 29 September 1988, and includes a subtenancy and an agreement for a tenancy; and references to the landlord and the tenant are to be interpreted accordingly: Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 5(1). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 does not, however, apply to a secure tenancy, defined in the Housing Act 1985 s 79 (see PARA 1300 post), or to an introductory tenancy within the meaning of the Housing Act 1996 Pt V Ch I (ss 124-143) (as amended) (see PARA 1285 et seq post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 5(3) (amended by the Housing Act 1996 (Consequential Amendments) Order 1997, SI 1997/74, art 2, Schedule para 5).

Nor does the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 apply to (1) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre; or (2) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation: see the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 84(1), (3)(c) (substituted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 96); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 532; the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 7(1), (3)(c); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 658; the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 149(3)(c) (amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 66(2)(a), (3)(c)); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 157.

2 For these purposes, 'covenant' includes condition and agreement: Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 5(1). See, however, note 6 infra.

3 For these purposes, 'tenant', where the tenancy is affected by a mortgage, within the meaning of the Law of Property Act 1925 (see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 101), and the mortgagee proposes to exercise his statutory or express power of sale, includes the mortgagee: Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 5(1). As to the interpretation of references to the tenant see note 1 supra.

4 For these purposes, 'consent' includes licence: ibid s 5(1).

5 For these purposes, 'landlord' includes any superior landlord from whom the tenant's immediate landlord directly or indirectly holds: ibid s 5(1). As to the interpretation of references to the landlord see note 1 supra.

6 For these purposes, references to the person who may consent to any assignment, underletting, charging or parting with possession to which the covenant relates are to the person who under the covenant may consent to the tenant entering into the proposed transaction: ibid s 1(2)(b). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the reference in s 1(2)(b) to the covenant is to the covenant as it has effect subject to the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 98 (see PARA 392 ante): s 102(1), Sch 7 para 13(1), (2). For the meaning of references to a proposed transaction see note 7 infra.

7 The reference to the service of an application on a person who may consent to a proposed transaction includes a reference to the receipt by him of an application or a copy of an application, whether it is for his consent or that of another: Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 2(2). For these purposes, references to a proposed transaction are to any assignment, underletting, charging or parting with possession to which the covenant relates: s 1(2)(a).

8 See Midland Bank plc v Chart Enterprises Inc [1990] 2 EGLR 59 (two and a half months' delay held to be unreasonable). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 interlinks with, and does not provide an entirely separate code from, the contractual covenant against alienation between landlord and tenant, and changes aspects of the law by necessary implication. Thus, if a landlord does not within a reasonable time give reasons in writing for refusing consent, it is not open to him subsequently to rely on reasons that have not been so specified, and it follows that reasons communicated orally will not suffice: Footwear Corp'n Ltd v Amplight Properties Ltd [1998] 3 All ER 52, [1999] 1 WLR 551, approved in Go West Ltd v Spigarolo [2003] EWCA Civ 17, [2003] QB 1140, [2003] 2 All ER 141. If the landlord raises no point which is outstanding at the expiry of the reasonable time and which could constitute a reasonable ground for refusing consent, it is his duty to give consent under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1(3): Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v Shopmoor Ltd [1998] 3 All ER 32, [1999] 1 WLR 531. 'Reasonable time' expires on the landlord's service of written notice of his refusal to consent to assignment with reasons under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1(3): Go West Ltd v Spigarolo supra. See also NCR Ltd v Riverland Portfolio No 1 Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 312, [2005] 2 EGLR 42, [2005] All ER (D) 343 (Mar).

9 Giving consent subject to any condition that is not a reasonable condition does not, however, satisfy the duty under this provision: Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1(4). Section 1 has effect subject to the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1A) (as added) (agreements by landlord and tenant under a qualifying lease specifying circumstances in which landlord may withhold his licence or consent to assignment and any conditions subject to which such licence or consent may be granted: see PARA 486 ante): s 19(1A) (added by the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 22). Reasonableness under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 is to be judged by circumstances existing and known at the time of the refusal: CIN Properties Ltd v Gill (1992) 67 P & CR 288, [1993] 2 EGLR 97.

It is not reasonable for a landlord to seek to impose a condition which is designed to increase or enhance his rights under the head lease: Mount Eden Land Ltd v Stradley Investments Ltd (1997) 74 P & CR 306, [1996] NPC 138, CA. See also Storehouse Properties Ltd v Ocobase Ltd (1998) Times, 3 April (ignorance of landlord as to the circumstances surrounding the tenant's application irrelevant, where full disclosure would not have justified refusal); Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v Shopmoor Ltd [1998] 3 All ER 32, [1999] 1 WLR 531 (attempt to obtain a collateral advantage unrelated to the landlord and tenant relationship); Footwear Corp'n Ltd v Amplight Properties Ltd [1998] 3 All ER 52, [1999] 1 WLR 551 (an unreasonable view taken of the proposed assignee's accounts; there is no rule of thumb that a proposed assignee's post-tax profits must be three times the rent before it can be regarded as a satisfactory tenant); Clinton Cards (Essex) Ltd v Sun Alliance & London Assurance Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 1576 (Ch), [2002] 3 EGLR 19 [2002] All ER (D) 92 (Jul) (unreasonable for landlord to withhold consent to underlet at open market rent, albeit amount less than basic rent stipulated in lease); Design Progression Ltd v Thurloe Properties Ltd [2004] EWHC 324 (Ch), [2005] 1 WLR 1, [2004] 1 EGLR 121 (unreasonable for landlord to behave obstructively to prevent an assignment for its own benefit).

Where a landlord required the tenants to be 'fully' responsible for 'all' the landlord's costs, rather than seeking only reasonable costs, before granting consent, this was held to be unreasonable: Dong Bang Minerva (UK) Ltd v Davina Ltd (1996) 73 P & CR 253, [1996] 2 EGLR 31, CA (where, however, it was agreed between the parties and accepted for the purposes of the decision that there is no breach of statutory duty provided the landlord's request for an undertaking as to his costs is limited to his reasonable costs).

A landlord who had failed to give consent was held to have no defence to a claim for breach of statutory duty where the tenant, who sought consent to sublet, had not revealed the proposed rent; although the lease contained a proviso that any subletting was to be at a full rack rent, it was for the landlord to respond requesting details of the rent: see Norwich Union Linked Life Assurance Ltd v Mercantile Credit Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 3064 (Ch), [2004] 04 EG 109 (CS), [2003] All ER (D) 376 (Dec).

10 Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1(1), (3); and see Air India v Balabel [1993] 2 EGLR 66, [1993] 30 EG 90, CA. For these purposes, an application or notice is to be treated as served if (1) served in any manner provided in the tenancy; and (2) in respect of any matter for which the tenancy makes no provision, served in any manner provided by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 (see PARA 703 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 5(2).

Since, by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(1)(a) (see PARA 486 ante), such a qualification or proviso is imported into all covenants against assignment etc without licence or consent, it would appear that, subject to s 19(1A) (as added) (see note 9 supra; and PARA 486 ante), the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1 applies to all such covenants whether or not there is such an express qualification. The Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 has no application, however, and no duty can arise under s 1(3), if a precondition, set out in the lease, which must be satisfied before the tenant can properly apply for consent to assign or sublet has not been met: Allied Dunbar Assurance plc v Homebase Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 666, [2003] 1 P & CR 75, [2002] 2 EGLR 23.

11 Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 1(5). As to when a tenant is in breach of covenant see PARA 492 post.

13 Ibid s 2(1).

14 Ibid s 4. The tenant has the right to seek exemplary damages: Design Progression Ltd v Thurloe Properties Ltd [2004] EWHC 324 (Ch), [2005] 1 WLR 1, [2004] 1 EGLR 121 (£25,000 awarded to mark court's disapproval of landlord's conduct).

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 binds the Crown; but as regards the Crown's liability in tort it does not bind the Crown further than the Crown is made liable in tort by the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 (see CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE): Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 6.

491. Qualified duty to approve consent by another.

In any case where:

- 1100 (1) a tenancy<sup>1</sup> includes a covenant<sup>2</sup> on the part of the tenant<sup>3</sup> not without the approval of the landlord<sup>4</sup> to consent to the subtenant's assigning, underletting, charging or parting with the possession of, the premises comprised in the tenancy or any part of the premises; but
- 1101 (2) the covenant is subject to the qualification that the approval is not to be unreasonably withheld, whether or not it is also subject to any other qualification, then, where there is served on the landlord a written application by the tenant for approval or a copy of a written application to the tenant by the subtenant for consent to a transaction to which the covenant relates, the landlord owes a duty to the subtenant within a reasonable time:

- 1102 (a) to give approval, except in a case where it is reasonable not to give approval<sup>5</sup>;
- 1103 (b) to serve on the tenant and the subtenant written notice of his decision whether or not to give approval specifying in addition, if approval is given subject to conditions, the conditions and, if approval is withheld, the reasons for withholding it<sup>6</sup>.

It is reasonable for the landlord not to give approval only in a case where, if he withheld approval and the tenant gave his consent<sup>7</sup>, the tenant would be in breach of covenant<sup>8</sup>.

It is for a landlord who owed any duty under heads (a) and (b) above:

- 1104 (i) if he gave approval and the question arises whether he gave it within a reasonable time, to show that he did;
- 1105 (ii) if he gave approval subject to any condition and the question arises whether the condition was a reasonable condition, to show that it was;
- 1106 (iii) if he did not give approval and the question arises whether it was reasonable for him not to do so, to show that it was reasonable;

and, if the question arises whether he served notice within a reasonable time, to show that he did<sup>9</sup>.

A claim that a person has broken any duty under the above provisions may be made the subject of civil proceedings in like manner as any other claim in tort for breach of statutory duty<sup>10</sup>.

COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/492. Grounds of refusal of consent; unreasonableness.

492. Grounds of refusal of consent; unreasonableness.

When a difference is to be resolved between landlord and tenant following the withholding of consent to an assignment, three principles may be derived from the authorities<sup>1</sup>:

- 1107 (1) a landlord is not entitled to refuse his consent to an assignment on grounds which have nothing whatever to do with the relationship of landlord and tenant in regard to the subject matter of the lease<sup>2</sup>;
- 1108 (2) in any case where the requirements of the first principle are met, the question of whether the landlord's conduct was reasonable or unreasonable will be one of fact to be decided by the tribunal of fact<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1109 (3) the landlord's obligation is to show that his conduct was reasonable, not that it was right or justifiable<sup>4</sup>.

Thus refusal of consent is unreasonable if the landlord's main object is to obtain some advantage for himself, as for example to obtain a surrender of the lease<sup>5</sup>, or to prevent the proposed assignee from giving up other premises of which he is also landlord<sup>6</sup>. Where a proposed assignee may acquire certain statutory rights, the landlord may have sufficient reason for refusing his consent, so that, for example, where the lease has only a short time to run, the landlord is entitled to refuse consent if the sole object of the assignment is to bring into existence a statutory tenancy<sup>7</sup> or other right<sup>8</sup> which would not otherwise arise<sup>9</sup>. The landlord is also entitled to consider the effect of the proposed assignment on the value of the lease<sup>10</sup> and on other property belonging to him<sup>11</sup>, and to have regard to any collateral contract between himself and the tenant<sup>12</sup>. A limited company is capable of being a 'respectable and responsible person' within the meaning of a covenant, and the landlord is not entitled to withhold his consent to an assignment to a company without some other justification, unless the nature of the lease shows that it is to be held by an individual<sup>13</sup>. A landlord will not be unreasonable in refusing consent to an assignment on grounds of the tenant's breaches of covenant, provided that those breaches are sufficiently serious<sup>14</sup>. It may be reasonable for a landlord to refuse consent on the ground of the purpose for which the proposed assignee intends to use the premises, even though that purpose is not forbidden by the lease<sup>15</sup>.

Whilst a landlord need usually consider only his own relevant interests, there may be instances where there is such a disproportion between the benefit to the landlord and the detriment to the tenant if the landlord withholds his consent that it is unreasonable for the landlord to refuse consent<sup>16</sup>.

It is not unreasonable to withhold consent where the tenant's application for consent is not genuine<sup>17</sup>.

1 The principles set out in heads (1)-(3) in the text were described as 'overriding principles' by Lord Bingham of Cornhill in Ashworth Frazer Ltd v Gloucester City Council [2001] UKHL 59 at [3]-[5], [2002] 1 All ER 377, [2001] 1 WLR 2180. On this point, Lord Bingham of Cornhill's speech was agreed to by Lords Hoffmann, Browne-Wilkinson and Scott of Foscote, although Lord Bingham of Cornhill dissented on another point. For other judgments that seek to distil the main principles see Bickel v Duke of Westminster [1977] QB 517 at 524, [1976] 3 All ER 801 at 805, CA, per Lord Denning MR, adopted by Lord Rodger of Earlsferry in Ashworth Frazer Ltd v Gloucester City Council supra at [67]; and International Drilling Fluids Ltd v Louisville Investments (Uxbridge) Ltd [1986] Ch 513 at 519-520, [1986] 1 All ER 321 at 325, CA, per Balcombe LJ.

2 It will generally be unreasonable for the landlord to refuse consent on grounds unconnected with the personality of the proposed assignee or the nature of the proposed user or occupation of the premises. In Re Gibbs and Houlder Bros & Co Ltd's Lease, Houlder Bros & Co Ltd v Gibbs [1925] Ch 575, CA, these grounds were said to be exhaustive, but this was doubted in Viscount Tredegar v Harwood [1929] AC 72, HL, by Lord Dunedin and Lord Phillimore; but in Bickel v Duke of Westminster [1977] QB 517, [1976] 3 All ER 801, CA, the majority of the Court of Appeal followed Re Gibbs and Houlder Bros & Co Ltd's Lease supra. See also International Drilling Fluids Ltd v Louisville Investments (Uxbridge) Ltd [1986] Ch 513, [1986] 1 All ER 321, CA, applied in Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v Shopmoor Ltd [1998] 3 All ER 32, [1999] 1 WLR 531.

The personality of the proposed assignee was held to constitute a reasonable ground for refusal in Governors of Bridewell Hospital v Fawkner and Rogers (1892) 8 TLR 637 (general of the Salvation Army); Shanly v Ward (1913) 29 TLR 714, CA (references unsatisfactory); Cohen v Popular Restaurants Ltd [1917] 1 KB 480 (no financial standing); Whiteminster Estates Ltd v Hodges Menswear Ltd (1974) 232 Estates Gazette 715 (assignee a business rival); British Bakeries (Midlands) Ltd v Michael Testler & Co Ltd [1986] 1 EGLR 64 (real doubts about financial standing); and Ponderosa International Development Inc v Pengap Securities (Bristol) Ltd [1986] 1 EGLR 66 (financial standing); but not in Mills v Cannon Brewery Co Ltd [1920] 2 Ch 38 (naturalised British subject of German origin); Parker v Boggon [1947] KB 346, [1947] 1 All ER 46 (person entitled to diplomatic privilege); City Hotels Group Ltd v Total Property Investments Ltd [1985] 1 EGLR 253 (tenant had given full financial information on proposed assignee); Kened Ltd v Connie Investments Ltd (1995) 70 P & CR 370, [1997] 1 EGLR 21, CA (proposed surety a company registered abroad; unreasonable to refuse consent if registered in a country that had signed the Convention on Jurisdiction and the Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters (Brussels, 27 September 1968; EC 46 (1976); Cmnd 7395) ('the Brussels Convention')). As to unlawful discrimination against a proposed assignee see PARA 488 ante. In Pimms Ltd v Tallow Chandlers in the City of London [1964] 2 QB 547, [1964] 2 All ER 145, CA, it was held that a landlord was justified in objecting to a proposed assignee who hoped to force his way into a redevelopment scheme by utilising the nuisance value of the lease, and that this was an objection to the assignee's personality. See also Rossi v Hestdrive Ltd [1985] 1 EGLR 50. The proposed user of the premises was held to constitute a reasonable ground for refusal in Harrison, Ainslie & Co v Barrow-in-Furness Corpn (1891) 39 WR 250 (proposed assignee covenanted not to use the premises for the purpose for which they had been let); and in Wilson v Fynn [1948] 2 All ER 40, and Creery v Summersell and Flowerdew & Co Ltd [1949] Ch 751 (tenants had covenanted to use the premises 'as offices for the purpose of their business'). See also Warren v Marketing Exchange for Africa Ltd [1988] 2 EGLR 247. Where a superior landlord unreasonably refused his consent to a subtenant's assignment, it was held to be unreasonable for the sub-landlord to withhold his consent on that ground: Vienit Ltd v W Williams & Son (Bread Street) Ltd [1958] 3 All ER 621, [1958] 1 WLR 1267. See also Rayburn v Wolf (1985) 50 P & CR 463, 18 HLR 1, CA (unreasonable to refuse consent for fear of undesirable sublettings). Where there is a guarantor to the assignment, the guarantor's financial position must be taken into account by the landlord: see Venetian Glass Gallery Ltd v Next Properties Ltd [1989] 2 EGLR 42. See also Olympia & York Canary Wharf Ltd v Oil Property Investment Ltd (1994) 69 P & CR 43, [1994] 2 EGLR 48, CA (a landlord's refusal of consent to assignment for the purpose of enabling the original tenant to exercise its option to determine the lease not regarded as unreasonable)

3 What is or is not 'reasonable' is a question of fact to be decided in the light of the circumstances existing at the date the landlord is asked for his consent, which may have been wholly unforeseen at the date of the grant of the lease: Bickel v Duke of Westminster [1977] QB 517 at 524, [1976] 3 All ER 801 at 805, CA, per Lord Denning MR ('No one decision will be a binding precedent as a strict rule of law. The reasons given by the judges [in deciding such questions of reasonableness] are to be treated as propositions of good sense--in relation to the particular case--rather than propositions of law applicable to all cases'). In Bickel v Duke of Westminster supra at 525-526 and at 806 Orr LJ considered, however, that the court was bound by Re Gibbs and Houlder Bros & Co Ltd's Lease, Houlder Bros & Co Ltd v Gibbs [1925] Ch 575, CA, but that the potential legal entitlement of the tenant to enfranchise was an 'attribute of the personality' of the proposed assignee, which gives that phrase a wide meaning; whilst Waller LJ based his decision on the nature of the proposed transaction, which was 'pregnant with future possibilities' (a phrase borrowed from Lee v K Carter Ltd [1949] 1 KB 85 at 96, [1948] 2 All ER 690 at 695, CA).

4 The landlord will not be held to have acted unreasonably if he acted as a reasonable person might have done in the circumstances: Shanly v Ward (1913) 29 TLR 714, CA; Re Town Investments Ltd, Underlease, McLaughlin v Town Investments Ltd [1954] Ch 301, [1954] 1 All ER 585. Cf Lovelock v Margo [1963] 2 QB 786, [1963] 2 All ER 13, CA. It is sufficient if a landlord has genuine, and not unfounded, concerns on matters relevant to the value of its interest in the property, even if the prospect of those concerns being realised is small (NCR Ltd v Riverland Portfolio No 1 Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 312, [2005] 2 EGLR 42, [2005] All ER (D) 343 (Mar)); but it was not sufficient for a landlord to rely on a surveyor's valuation of the impact of the assignment on the reversionary value where it could be demonstrated that the surveyor's report was 'ill-informed, wrong-headed and unreasonable' (Lumina Leisure Ltd v Apostole [2001] 3 EGLR 23, [2001] All ER (D) 314 (May)). Where the lease imposes a heavy burden on the tenant, as, for example, where the rent is high, the grounds for refusing consent should be substantial: Sheppard v Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp (1872) 20 WR 459.

5 Lehmann v McArthur (1867) LR 3 Eq 746 (on appeal (1868) 3 Ch App 496, where the court did not decide whether or not in the circumstances the refusal was unreasonable); Bates v Donaldson [1896] 2 QB 241, CA; Re Winfrey and Chatterton's Agreement [1921] 2 Ch 7. See, however, Thomas Bookman Ltd v Nathan [1955] 2 All ER 821, [1955] 1 WLR 815, CA (landlord held to be unreasonable in withholding consent to an assignment seven and a half months before the end of the term); Oriel Property Trust v Kidd (1949) 100 L Jo 6 (landlord's practice of withholding consent on the ground that they had a waiting list of applicants for the flats held unreasonable). The cases cited supra are mainly concerned with the proposed assignee's rights under the Rent Acts; different principles may apply, however, where, unlike the tenant, the proposed assignee would be able to enfranchise under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967, and in both Norfolk Capital Group Ltd v Kitway Ltd [1977] QB 506, [1976] 3 All ER 787, CA, and Bickel v Duke of Westminster [1977] QB 517, [1976] 3 All ER 801, CA, the landlords were held to be justified in withholding their consent to assignments in these circumstances, even though they might be described as 'normal assignments'. However, in West Layton Ltd v Ford [1979] QB 593, [1979] 2 All ER 657, CA, where it was held that a landlord had not acted unreasonably in refusing consent to the subletting of the upper floors of a shop which would create a protected tenancy under the Rent Act 1977, the Court of Appeal considered that there were no special and distinct rules applicable to 'Rent Act cases' and 'Leasehold Reform Act cases' and doubted the value of the distinction made in earlier cases between 'normal' and 'abnormal' transactions. See also Welch v Birrane (1974) 29 P & CR 102; Re Cooper's Lease, Cowan v Beaumont Property Trusts Ltd (1968) 19 P & CR 541, where the assignment would have given the assignee protection under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post), which the tenant did not have, and refusal of consent was held not to be unreasonable. As to enfranchisement under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 see PARA 1389 et seq post.

PARAS 1386-2000)/11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/493. Unreasonable conditions attached to consent.

493. Unreasonable conditions attached to consent.

It is not an unreasonable withholding of consent to an assignment to impose reasonable conditions in giving consent<sup>1</sup>; but, if a reasonable condition is imposed without an apparent 'consent', the landlord will be unreasonably withholding his consent. It is unreasonable for the landlord to seek to impose a condition which would in effect alter the terms of the lease for the remainder of the term and diminish the value of the assignee's property<sup>2</sup>, or to require the subtenant to enter into a direct covenant with the landlord to pay the rent reserved by the head lease, even if the rent under the head lease and the sublease are the same<sup>3</sup>. In the case of a proposed reassignment by an assignee, it is unreasonable to require him to covenant to pay the rent and perform the covenants for the residue of the lease<sup>4</sup>.

1 For an example see Orlando Investments Ltd v Grosvenor Estate Belgravia (1989) 59 P & CR 21, [1989] 2 EGLR 74, CA; and see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1988 s 3(5); and PARA 491 ante.

3 Balfour v Kensington Gardens Mansions Ltd (1932) 49 TLR 29 (rent payable under the sublease less than that payable under the head lease, and the rental value of the property had decreased since the granting of the head lease); but see Re Town Investments Ltd, Underlease, McLaughlin v Town Investments Ltd [1954] Ch 301, [1954] 1 All ER 585 (where it was held to be reasonable to refuse consent in similar circumstances).

4 Evans v Levy [1910] 1 Ch 452. It may be reasonable, however, to require such a covenant limited to the time during which the assignee holds the lease: Evans v Levy supra. As to the statutory restriction on liability for rent after assignment see PARA 289 ante.

494. Remedy for breach of the covenant.

Where a covenant against assignment or underletting, with a proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant, is broken, the landlord may either re-enter for the forfeiture or sue for damages for the breach<sup>1</sup>. If he sues on the covenant, the damages will be measured by the loss naturally flowing from the assignment<sup>2</sup> or underletting<sup>3</sup>. Breach of a covenant against assigning or underletting may be restrained by injunction<sup>4</sup>.

1 Silcock v Farmer (1882) 46 LT 404; Works Comrs v Hull [1922] 1 KB 205. Where an assignment takes place in breach of such a covenant, the landlord must serve notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) (see PARA 619 post) on the assignee and not the assignor: Old Grovebury Manor Farm Ltd v W Seymour Plant Sales & Hire Ltd (No 2) [1979] 3 All ER 504, [1979] 1 WLR 1397, CA. As to relief from forfeiture see PARA 622 post. In relation to tenancies beginning on or after 1 January 1996, when part of a property which is let is assigned by a tenant, any right of entry or forfeiture exercised by the landlord as a result of a breach of covenant relating to one part of the property affects only the part of which the defaulter is tenant: see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 21(1); and PARA 611 post.

2 When made by an assignee, the assignment puts an end to his liability on the covenants in the lease; and, if it is made to one of inferior pecuniary liability, the measure of damages will be such a sum as would, as far as money can, put the landlord in the same position as if he still had the original assignee's liability for breaches of covenant, past and future: Williams v Earle (1868) LR 3 QB 739; Cohen v Popular Restaurants Ltd [1917] 1 KB 480.

3 If the premises are destroyed by reason of special risk attaching to the purposes for which they are sublet, the damages will be the loss thus caused: Lepia v Rogers [1893] 1 QB 31; cf Chapman v Mason and Liniline Co (1910) 103 LT 390.

495. Position of unlawful assignee.

While an assignee or subtenant is in possession, he is subject to the stipulations of the lease notwithstanding that the landlord's consent was not given to the assignment<sup>1</sup>. Even if the landlord contends that the assignment was unlawful<sup>2</sup>, it still operates to vest the term in the assignee, who is, therefore, the person to whom any necessary notice has to be given before forfeiture proceedings may be commenced<sup>3</sup> and who must be made a defendant<sup>4</sup>.

1 Silcock v Farmer (1882) 46 LT 404.

2 Ie in breach of covenant.

3 Old Grovebury Manor Farm Ltd v W Seymour Plant Sales and Hire Ltd (No 2) [1979] 3 All ER 504, [1979] 1 WLR 1397, CA. Where an assignment is in breach of covenant, an assigning tenant is not released from the tenant covenants of the tenancy, but may be released on the next assignment that is not excluded; consequently such covenants do not pass to the assignee tenant: see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 11; and PARA 588 post.

4 If the assignee is not sued, there cannot be an effective forfeiture; and, although a claim for breach of covenant against the assignor could be sustained, the measure of damages would be problematical, given that ex hypothesi the term continued.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(1) COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION/496. Acceptance by landlord of assignee as tenant.

496. Acceptance by landlord of assignee as tenant.

The landlord is debarred from insisting on the necessity of consent if he has accepted the assignee as tenant in the place of the assignor, but this acceptance is not to be inferred merely from the fact that possession has been given to the assignee with the knowledge of the landlord and without objection on his part; this, while an important element, is not conclusive where the facts show that the landlord did not intend to accept the assignee<sup>1</sup>. Further, the landlord is not bound to assent to the assignment on the ground that he stood by while the assignee was spending money on the property, unless the circumstances are such as to estop him from setting up the breach of covenant<sup>2</sup>.

(2) USER COVENANTS

497. Covenants restricting the user of premises.

Leases of buildings, whether dwelling houses or trade premises, usually contain a covenant by the tenant restricting their use<sup>1</sup>. This may be a covenant designed either to protect neighbouring occupiers from annoyance, or to confine the use of trade premises to certain trades, or to require that a house shall be used only as a private dwelling house, or only for residential or professional purposes<sup>2</sup>, or for the purposes of a named company or organisation<sup>3</sup>. Whatever the contents of the lease, a tenant generally has to obtain planning permission from the local planning authority before making any material change in the use of the premises; and, in addition to the covenants as to user so mentioned, leases commonly contain a covenant by the tenant to comply with the provisions of the planning legislation<sup>4</sup>. Such covenants may be enforced by injunction<sup>5</sup>, or breaches of them may be compensated by damages<sup>6</sup>, or, if there is a right of re-entry, the landlord may forfeit the lease<sup>7</sup>. Moreover, if land is let for a specified purpose, its use for other purposes will be restrained by injunction<sup>8</sup>; but otherwise the tenant is not prohibited, as between him and his landlord, from using the premises for any lawful purpose, notwithstanding that it is different from the purpose originally contemplated<sup>9</sup>, provided there is no fraud on the landlord in taking the lease in an unrestricted form<sup>10</sup>. A covenant not to carry on any trade other than a particular trade does not imply a positive obligation to carry on that trade<sup>11</sup>; but the lease may impose such a positive obligation on the tenant<sup>12</sup>.

Where the covenant is against permitting or suffering the premises to be used for certain purposes, and the tenant has sublet the premises, the tenant is guilty of a breach of covenant if he either gives leave to the subtenant to commit the breach or abstains from taking reasonable steps to prevent the breach by the subtenant where it is within his power to prevent it<sup>13</sup>; and he is also liable for breach by the subtenant if the covenant is an absolute covenant against the doing of the prohibited act<sup>14</sup>.

If a covenant in a lease is restrictive of the use of the premises and is also one of a series of such covenants in leases of adjoining properties from the same landlord which are absolute and identical in form and constructed to dovetail together, then a letting scheme can be created permitting enforceability of such covenants by the other tenants<sup>15</sup>.

An agreement relating to the lease of any property which comprises or includes a dwelling may not prohibit or restrict its occupation by, or the provision in it of accommodation for, persons with mental disorders<sup>16</sup>.

Where a covenant restrictive of user is ambiguous, a wider rather than a narrower meaning will be favoured<sup>17</sup>.

In considering whether to grant consent a landlord can legitimately take into account considerations relating to adjoining property of his own, whether let or not, and a landlord is not restricted to considering only that property and those uses that existed at the time of the grant of the lease<sup>18</sup>.

1 A tenant may also be liable to observe restrictive covenants which bind the demised premises in equity but are not contained in the lease under which he holds: see PARA 559 et seq post; and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 616 et seq.

2 The restrictions may be even more severe eg the tenant may agree not to sell or distribute goods other than those supplied by the landlord, such a restriction being held to be reasonable in Cleveland Petroleum Co Ltd v Dartstone Ltd [1969] 1 All ER 201, [1969] 1 WLR 116, CA.

It would seem that 'suffer' is wider in meaning than 'permit': Barton v Reed supra at 375 per Luxmore J; and see St Marylebone Property Co Ltd v Tesco Stores Ltd [1988] 2 EGLR 40. Such a breach of covenant by a tenant may be capable of remedy: Glass v Kencakes Ltd [1966] 1 QB 611, [1964] 3 All ER 807.

In relation to a tenancy granted on or after 1 January 1996, a covenant which is restrictive of the user of land is enforceable against an assignee and any other owner or occupier of demised premises to which the covenant relates, even though there is no express provision in the tenancy to that effect: see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 3(5); and PARA 580 post. #### 498. Statutory provisions as to alterations of user.

In all leases<sup>1</sup>, whether made before, on or after 1 January 1926, containing a covenant, condition or agreement against the alteration of the user of the demised premises, without licence or consent, such covenant, condition or agreement is, if the alteration does not involve any structural alteration of the premises, deemed, notwithstanding any express provision to the contrary, to be subject to a proviso that no fine or sum of money in the nature of a fine<sup>2</sup>, whether by way of an increase of rent or otherwise, shall be payable for or in respect of the licence or consent<sup>3</sup>. The proviso so implied does not, however, preclude the right of the landlord<sup>4</sup> to require payment of a reasonable sum in respect of any damage to or diminution in the value of the premises or any neighbouring premises belonging to him, and of any legal or other expenses incurred in connection with such licence or consent<sup>5</sup>.

It is not implied in a covenant against the alteration of the user of the demised premises without consent that consent is not to be unreasonably withheld<sup>6</sup>.

Where a landlord refuses to consent to a change of use save on payment of a fine within the meaning of the statute, the tenant is thereby relieved from obtaining that consent<sup>7</sup>. A landlord may, however, achieve the desired result by refusing consent, subject to any express requirement of reasonableness, and offering to accept a surrender and regrant incorporating not only the required change of use but also the desired more advantageous terms benefiting the landlord<sup>8</sup>.

If the tenant agrees to pay a fine in consideration of the landlord's granting his consent to an alteration of user, that agreement is unenforceable, but it seems that the tenant cannot recover money paid under the agreement<sup>9</sup>. Where the landlord's consent is withheld only by reason of a dispute as to the amount of a reasonable sum payable for damages or expenses, the dispute may be determined by a court of competent jurisdiction<sup>10</sup>, and where such a dispute has been so determined the landlord is bound to grant a licence or consent on payment of the sum so determined to be reasonable<sup>11</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 459 note 1 ante.

2 There is no statutory definition of 'fine or sum of money in the nature of a fine' for these purposes (cf the Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(xxiii); and PARA 485 note 5 ante) but the term is to be given a wide meaning: see Gardner & Co v Cone [1928] Ch 955 at 964 (benefit of beer-tie stipulation was a fine); approved in Barclays Bank plc v Daejan Investments (Grove Hall) Ltd [1995] 1 EGLR 68 (required variation of rent review clause, imposition of full service charge and payment of reasonable legal costs and surveyor's fee all amounted to sums of money in the nature of a fine).

3 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(3). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(3) does not apply to leases of agricultural holdings within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 which are leases in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323), or to farm business tenancies within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302) or to mining leases: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(4) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 15; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 6)). For the meaning of 'mining lease' see MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 322.

Nor does the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(3) apply to (1) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre; or (2) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation: see the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 84(1), (3)(c) (substituted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 96); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 532; the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 7(1), (3)(c); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 658; the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 149(3)(c) (amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 66(2)(a), (3)(c)); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 157.

As to the tenant's remedy where consent is unreasonably refused see PARA 499 post.

4 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 486 note 3 ante. Where, however, the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(3) applies as if (1) the first and final references to the landlord were to the RTM company; and (2) the reference to the right of the landlord to require payment of a reasonable sum in respect of any damage to or diminution in the value of the premises or neighbouring premises belonging to him were omitted: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 1(1), (4).

10 Although the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 53 (as amended) (see PARA 499 post) does not confer jurisdiction on the county court in this case, county courts now have power to make any order which could be made by the High Court if the proceedings were in the High Court, including the granting of a bare declaration: see the County Courts Act 1984 s 38 (as substituted and amended); and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 711.

499. Tenant's remedy where consent is unreasonably refused.

Where a landlord withholds his licence or consent to a change in the use of the demised property or any part thereof, or to the making of a specified use of that property, and the High Court has jurisdiction to make a declaration that the licence or consent was unreasonably withheld, then, without prejudice to the jurisdiction of the High Court, the county court has the like jurisdiction whatever the net annual value for rating<sup>1</sup> of the demised property is to be taken to be for the purposes of the County Courts Act 1984 and notwithstanding that the tenant does not seek any relief other than the declaration<sup>2</sup>.

Where, on the making of an application to a county court for such a declaration, the court is satisfied that the licence or consent was unreasonably withheld, it must make a declaration accordingly<sup>3</sup>.

The court will not grant a declaration with reference to a hypothetical situation<sup>4</sup>.

500. Nuisance or annoyance.

A covenant against causing a 'nuisance' to the landlord or to adjoining<sup>1</sup> occupiers is perhaps broken only by a nuisance in the technical sense<sup>2</sup>. While the exhibition of advertisements in a business neighbourhood is not a breach of such a covenant<sup>3</sup>, such exhibition may in certain circumstances amount to a breach of a covenant not to carry on any offensive trade or calling<sup>4</sup>. Where the covenant is against any act which may lead to 'annoyance, nuisance or damage', it is wider, and is broken by anything which disturbs the reasonable peace of mind of an adjoining occupier. The disturbance need not amount to physical detriment to comfort, nor need the adjoining occupier be a tenant of the same landlord<sup>5</sup>.

Where a covenant refers to 'detriment', the detriment is not necessarily limited to financial considerations<sup>6</sup>. A covenant against the use of the demised premises for illegal purposes may be breached in the absence of a criminal prosecution<sup>7</sup>; and, where the covenant extends to immoral purposes, the use of a flat by an unmarried couple is not immoral<sup>8</sup> but its use for prostitution may be<sup>9</sup>.

1 Premises may be adjoining even though separated from the demised premises by a narrow strip of land: Foster v Lyons & Co [1927] 1 Ch 219. It would seem, however, that they must be next door to or physically adjoining the demised premises (Vale & Sons v Moorgate Street and Broad Street Buildings Ltd and Albert Baker & Co Ltd (1899) 80 LT 487; Derby Motor Cab Co v Crompton and Evans' Union Bank (1913) 57 Sol Jo 701) but this may be too strict a view; and in Cave v Horsell [1912] 3 KB 533, CA, the phrase 'adjoining shops' was held to cover all the six shops in a terrace. See also the observations on the meaning of 'adjoining or contiguous' in Haynes v King [1893] 3 Ch 439 at 448 per North J, which were relied upon in Norton v Charles Deane Productions Ltd (1969) 214 Estates Gazette 559.

2 Harrison v Good (1871) LR 11 Eq 338 (establishment of a school held not to be a breach). This restriction of the word was, however, doubted in Tod-Heatly v Benham (1888) 40 ChD 80, CA. In Errington v Birt (1911) 105 LT 373 it was held that the conduct of a fried fish shop was not sufficient to constitute a nuisance, but sufficient to cause annoyance, and so a breach of covenant. For the technical meaning of 'nuisance' see Walter v Selfe (1851) 4 De G & Sm 315 at 322; and NUISANCE vol 78 (2010) PARA 124.

4 Nussey v Provincial Bill Posting Co and Eddison [1909] 1 Ch 734, CA. To let the ends of a house for bill posting is a breach of a covenant not to permit trade to be carried on on the premises (Tubbs v Esser (1909) 26 TLR 145); and such use of premises constitutes a breach of a covenant not to carry on any other than a specified trade, and may amount to a breach of a covenant not to assign or part with possession (Heard v Stuart (1907) 24 TLR 104). As to the statutory restrictions on the display of advertisements see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(2) (Reissue) PARA 769 et seq.

5 Tod-Heatly v Benham (1888) 40 ChD 80 at 98-99, CA; and see Macher v Foundling Hospital (1813) 1 Ves & B 188; Errington v Birt (1911) 105 LT 373; Collins v Slade (1874) 23 WR 199 (conversion of part of a factory into a place of entertainment held to be breach of a covenant against annoyance or damage); Hampstead and Suburban Properties Ltd v Diomedous [1969] 1 Ch 248, [1968] 3 All ER 545 (interlocutory (interim) injunction granted to restrain the playing of music so as to be a nuisance and annoyance). The establishment of a hospital for outdoor patients is a breach if sensible people feel a reasonable apprehension of risk of infection and interference with the pleasurable enjoyment of their houses for ordinary purposes (Tod-Heatly v Benham supra; Bramwell v Lacy (1879) 10 ChD 691), but the conduct of a properly equipped and well managed hospital is not per se a noisy, noisome or offensive business (Frost v King Edward VII Welsh etc Association [1918] 2 Ch 180, where it was held that there was no risk of infection or danger to neighbours). In Burford Financial Investments Ltd v Chotard [1976] 2 EGLR 53, (1976) 239 Estates Gazette 891 the use of flats in Soho for prostitution was held not of itself to cause a nuisance to neighbours. See also Commercial General Administration Ltd v Thomsett (1979) 250 Estates Gazette 547, CA, where the tenant had done all she reasonably could to abate the nuisance. To sublet parts of the premises to various tenants may amount to a breach of a covenant not to do anything which might in the landlord's judgment be or grow to be to his injury or annoyance or that of his tenants or occupiers: Barton v Keeble [1928] Ch 517; Day v Waldron (1919) 88 LJKB 937 (conversion into flats to the injury of the landlord). Where a landlord takes a covenant from one tenant not to cause nuisance or annoyance, there is not necessarily an implied term that he will enforce such an obligation against other tenants from whom he has taken a similar covenant: see O'Leary v London Borough of Islington (1983) 9 HLR 83, CA.

501. Trade or business.

A covenant not to carry on any 'trade' refers only to a business conducted by buying and selling<sup>1</sup>. The word 'business' extends the covenant to all cases where work, involving the recourse of numerous persons to the premises, is done for payment<sup>2</sup>, or even without payment where the result is in effect the same as if a charge were made<sup>3</sup>. The making of profit is not essential to constitute a business; nor does payment necessarily constitute one<sup>4</sup>. A covenant against affixing any outward mark of business is broken by exhibiting the name of a firm carrying on business on the premises<sup>5</sup>.

A covenant against the exercise of a particular trade forbids the carrying on of any part of that trade<sup>6</sup>, and the trade may not be carried on as an accessory to the tenant's main business, even if this is for the convenience of customers<sup>7</sup>. The covenant is not broken, however, where a tenant who carries on a business of a class different from that which is prohibited merely sells, as incident to his own business, some articles which are sold in the prohibited business<sup>8</sup>. Where the covenant is not to carry on a business similar to the specified business of another person, it is broken if the businesses are sufficiently alike to compete<sup>9</sup>. A covenant to use the premises for showrooms, workrooms and offices means only that the demised premises may not be used as a dwelling house<sup>10</sup>.

A covenant not to use premises for certain specified trades 'but [the tenant] will use the demised premises for the business of high-class retailers of jewellery' and other specified purposes is not broken by the use of only part of the premises for the storage of jewellery for sale elsewhere<sup>11</sup>.

A covenant against carrying on a particular trade may be restricted to the covenantor personally notwithstanding it is entered into in consideration of a periodical payment to him and his executors: Cooke v Colcraft (1773) 2 Wm Bl 856.

2 Eg the business of a school (Doe d Bish v Keeling (1813) 1 M & S 95 at 99; Kemp v Sober (1852) 19 LTOS 308; Wickenden v Webster (1856) 6 E & B 387; Johnstone v Hall (1856) 2 K & J 414; German v Chapman (1877) 7 ChD 271, CA; Hobson v Tulloch [1898] 1 Ch 424; Wauton v Coppard [1899] 1 Ch 92); or a hospital for poor persons who pay according to their means (Bramwell v Lacy (1879) 10 ChD 691); or the taking of friends as paying guests (Thorn v Madden [1925] Ch 847; Tendler v Sproule [1947] 1 All ER 193, CA); or the subletting of premises in apartments (Barton v Reed [1932] 1 Ch 362); cf Lewis v Weldcrest Ltd [1978] 3 All ER 1226, [1978] 1 WLR 1107, CA (tenant who took in lodgers held, as a matter of fact and degree, not to be occupying premises for the purposes of a business within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post)). As to the use of premises for advertising see PARA 500 ante; and as to teaching music see Tritton v Bankart (1887) 56 LT 306. A covenant not to carry on any business except that of a school is broken by the use of the premises as a school of music: Lawrence v South County Freeholds Ltd [1939] Ch 656, [1939] 2 All ER 503.

3 Thus a 'home' where working girls were boarded without payment was held in effect to be the business of a lodging house: Rolls v Miller (1884) 27 ChD 71, CA.

5 Evans v Davis (1878) 10 ChD 747; Wilkinson v Rogers (1863) 12 WR 119. A covenant which prohibits the tenant from placing signs on the landlord's land without consent does not operate as a grant of an easement over that land, even in a case where consent has been given before the grant of lease: William Hill (Southern) Ltd v Cabras Ltd [1987] 1 EGLR 37 at 39, CA, per Nourse LJ. Apparently conversion of a private dwelling house into a shop may be effected by user without structural alteration: Wilkinson v Rogers (1864) 2 De GJ & Sm 62; but see Milch v Coburn (1911) 55 Sol Jo 441, CA. A sale by auction is allowable in a shop if not specially prohibited: Keith v Reid (1870) LR 2 Sc & Div 39, HL.

6 Doe d Gaskell v Spry (1818) 1 B & Ald 617 at 619; Doe d Davis v Elsam (1828) Mood & M 189 at 191. The conduct of a fried fish shop does not, however, constitute a breach of a covenant not to carry on business as a fishmonger, though it may be a breach of a covenant not to use the premises otherwise than as a restaurant (Errington v Birt (1911) 105 LT 373), and a covenant not to use premises as a garage and office is not broken by letting them for the storage only of cars (Derby Motor Car Co v Crompton and Evans' Union Bank Ltd and Guest (1915) 31 TLR 185). Similarly, a covenant not to let for the sale of souvenirs is not broken by letting to a tobacconist, tailor, perfumer or embroiderer (LSG Ltd v TB Lawrence Ltd (1925) 42 TLR 85, CA); a covenant not to carry on business as a draper is not infringed by the sale of furs (Wills v Adams (1908) 25 TLR 85); and a covenant not to carry on any business other than that of a butcher is not broken by the sale of poultry (Hartshorn v Angliss [1951] 1 TLR 1043). A covenant not to use premises except for the business of a hosier or hatter and mercer, including the sale of fancy waistcoats and mackintoshes, was, however, held as a matter of construction to be broken by the sale of overcoats (not being mackintoshes) and sports jackets: Wartski v Meaker (1914) 110 LT 473. Premises which are to be used only for a post office may be used for business ordinarily carried on by Post Office officials in connection with revenue: Wadham v Postmaster General (1871) LR 6 QB 644. Premises may be a 'supermarket' even though not all the goods sold are portable: Calabar (Woolwich) Ltd v Tesco Stores Ltd (1977) 245 Estates Gazette 479, CA. A covenant by the landlord not to use retained land for the operation of a pleasure ground for games and recreation was held not to be breached by the grant of a lease to a company wishing to construct a large public house and restaurant which would include a children's outdoor play area and an enclosed 'Fun Factory': see Harbour Park Ltd v Arun District Council [1998] EGCS 150. A covenant by a landlord not to permit a gift shop to be operated was broken by a 'Football Hall of Fame' that might sell gifts such as football shirts: Oceanic Village Ltd v United Attractions Ltd [2000] Ch 234, [2000] 1 All ER 975.

502. Covenant to keep premises open.

Where a covenant requires a tenant to keep the demised premises open for the permitted uses, damages rather than an injunction or an order for specific performance are usually the appropriate remedy for any breach, since it is the settled practice of the court not to make an order requiring a person to carry on a business<sup>1</sup>.

PARAS 1386-2000)/11. COVENANTS AS TO ALIENATION AND USE/(2) USER COVENANTS/503. Noisome or offensive trades.

503. Noisome or offensive trades.

A covenant against carrying on a noisome or offensive trade or business is not broken by carrying on a dangerous trade which is neither noisome nor offensive<sup>1</sup>. Whether a particular business is prohibited by the covenant depends to some extent upon whether it was carried on upon the premises at the time of the demise<sup>2</sup>.

1 Hickman v Isaacs (1861) 4 LT 285. The carrying on of a dangerous trade which will result in the insurance premium being increased will in certain circumstances be restrained (Teape v Douse (1905) 92 LT 319; Chapman v Mason and Liniline Co (1910) 103 LT 390); and an injunction will be granted where the tenant sublets for such a trade in breach of covenant (see Chapman v Mason and Liniline Co supra).

2 Gutteridge v Munyard (1834) 7 C & P 129. Lime burning may be a noisome business: Wiltshire v Cosslett (1889) 5 TLR 410. A fried fish business (Duke of Devonshire v Brookshaw (1899) 81 LT 83; cf Errington v Birt (1911) 105 LT 373, where such a shop was held not to be a nuisance, but an annoyance), and the carrying on of mock auctions (Moses v Taylor (1862) 11 WR 81), may be offensive; so may a private hospital (Earl of Pembroke v Warren [1896] 1 IR 76 at 104, CA); but not a well conducted and properly managed hospital for tuberculosis (Frost v King Edward VII Welsh etc Association [1918] 2 Ch 180). A boys' school is within the words 'injurious, offensive or disagreeable noise or nuisance' (Wauton v Coppard [1899] 1 Ch 92), but not the mere use of blinds for a business purpose so as to be inconvenient to others (see Gresham Life Assurance Society v Ranger (1899) 15 TLR 454, CA), although the erection of a trellis screen may be an annoyance (Wood v Cooper [1894] 3 Ch 671). The sale of pornographic literature has been held to be an offensive trade (DR Evans & Co Ltd v Chandler (1969) 211 Estates Gazette 1381); and in Canada the use of topless waitresses and nude dancing in a restaurant has been held to be offensive (Re Koumoudouros and Marathon Realty Co Ltd (1978) 89 DLR (3d) 551 (Ont)).

The opening of a public house was held not to be a breach of a covenant against trades that may be offensive or lead to annoyance (Jones v Thorne (1823) 1 B & C 715); but a restriction on carrying on the trade of a public house is good in law and capable of running with the land (Earl of Zetland v Hislop (1882) 7 App Cas 427, HL).

As to enforcing an agreement for an underlease when the intended user may prove to be a violation of a covenant in the head lease against noxious businesses see Reeves v Greenwich Tanning Co Ltd (1864) 2 Hem & M 54; Teape v Douse (1905) 92 LT 319; and as to the exhibition of advertisements see PARA 500 ante.

504. Private dwelling house.

Any user of the premises for trade or business purposes is a breach of a covenant to use them solely as a private dwelling house<sup>1</sup>. The exhibition of a blind bearing a trade name<sup>2</sup>; the addition of a studio<sup>3</sup>; the conversion of the premises into flats<sup>4</sup>; the subletting of part of the premises, even if the subtenant is bound to use the part sublet as a private residence<sup>5</sup>, unless the lease envisages the subletting of a part as distinct from the whole<sup>6</sup>; the carrying on of a guest-house<sup>7</sup>; the provision of supervised housing for former hospital patients who have suffered from mental disability<sup>8</sup>; and the taking in of friends as paying guests<sup>9</sup> may constitute breaches of covenant<sup>10</sup>. In the absence of an express covenant preventing it<sup>11</sup>, the sale by auction of furniture belonging to the premises does not involve a breach<sup>12</sup>. A covenant by the tenant that he will personally reside on the premises is valid<sup>13</sup>; and, where the tenancy becomes vested in trustees, it is not satisfied by the residence of a beneficiary under the trust<sup>14</sup>.

A covenant not to use or occupy a flat otherwise than as a single private residence in one occupation only is breached by the grant of occupational licences to reside in the flat for payment<sup>15</sup> but not by a single tenancy to four persons jointly and severally liable even though the four occupied separate study bedrooms<sup>16</sup>.

1 German v Chapman (1877) 7 ChD 271, CA; Hobson v Tulloch [1898] 1 Ch 424. A covenant to build a house as a private dwelling house requires also that it is to be kept as such: Bray v Fogarty (1870) 4 IR Eq 544.

2 Wilkinson v Rogers (1863) 12 WR 119.

3 Patman v Harland (1881) 17 ChD 353.

4 Day v Waldron (1919) 88 LJB 937. The measure of damages for such a breach of the covenant is such sum as reasonably represents the damage sustained by the landlord: Duke of Westminster v Swinton [1948] 1 KB 524, [1948] 1 All ER 248. Where the landlord has forfeited the lease and intends to reinstate the premises at once, the measure of damages may be the cost of reinstatement: Duke of Westminster v Swinton supra at 534 and at 251; Eyre v Rea [1947] KB 567, [1947] 1 All ER 415. Cf Wrotham Park Settled Estates v Naylor (1990) 62 P & CR 233, [1991] 1 EGLR 274 (conversion of cowshed into cottage for household staff not breach of covenant).

6 Downie v Turner [1951] 2 KB 112, [1951] 1 All ER 416, CA, as explained in Dobbs v Linford [1953] 1 QB 48, [1952] 2 All ER 827, CA.

9 Thorn v Madden [1925] Ch 847; Tendler v Sproule [1947] 1 All ER 193, CA.

10 The question whether there has been a breach of such a covenant by eg the taking in of paying guests is a question of fact and degree. In Segal Securities Ltd v Thoseby [1963] 1 QB 887 at 894, [1963] 1 All ER 500 at 503, Sachs J observed that the mere taking in of a single paying guest who shared the family life as far as possible would not, save in exceptional circumstances, constitute a breach of such a covenant and nothing in a covenant to use the premises 'for the purposes of a private residence in the occupation of one household only' would preclude a true sharing between the tenant and friends. See also Heglibiston Establishment v Heyman (1977) 36 P & CR 351, CA (approach of Sachs J approved). A covenant to use a property as a private dwelling house is distinct from a covenant to reside personally in the property and is not broken by letting to another who uses it as a home: Roberts v Howlett [2002] 1 P & CR 234 (no breach where covenantor let property to group of students who used it as a single private dwelling house, dining communally and sharing use of the lounge). ### 505. Public house or tavern.

A covenant against the use of premises as a 'public house, tavern or beershop' is broken by the sale under an off-licence of beer not to be drunk on the premises<sup>1</sup>; and a covenant against carrying on the trade of an innkeeper, publican or seller by retail of wine, spirits or beer is broken by the sale of those liquors by a grocer in the course of his trade<sup>2</sup>, or by the tenant of a theatre<sup>3</sup>. A covenant against the use of premises as a 'public house or beershop', where the premises are used as a private hotel and no beer is sold, does not, however, prevent the supply of wines and spirits to visitors only<sup>4</sup>; and a covenant against the business of alehouse keeper, beerhouse keeper, tavern keeper or licensed victualler does not prevent the carrying on of a restaurant with a restaurant licence<sup>5</sup>. A covenant against use as a 'victualler' in a commercial lease is not to be read as a covenant against use as a 'licensed victualler' and will be breached by use as a self-service retail outlet offering sandwiches and non-alcoholic drinks<sup>6</sup>.

A sale to members of a members' club for consumption on the premises is not a breach of a covenant against the sale of liquors: Ranken v Hunt (1894) 10 R 249. As to the supply of intoxicating liquor by clubs see LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 85 et seq.

2 Feilden v Slater (1869) LR 7 Eq 523. A covenant not to carry on the trade of a vintner is not restricted to the sale of wine to be consumed on the premises: Wells v Attenborough (1871) 24 LT 312.

3 Buckle v Fredericks (1890) 44 ChD 244, CA. The circumstances may not, however, be such as to call for an injunction: Jones v Bone (1870) LR 9 Eq 674, as explained in Buckle v Fredericks supra at 248.

506. Waiver of covenant restricting user.

A covenant restricting the user of premises is a continuing covenant, and there is a new breach every day while the premises are used in violation of it<sup>1</sup>; but the landlord may waive the covenant partially, so as to allow of the carrying on of a particular trade<sup>2</sup>. The landlord does not waive the benefit of the covenant by permitting other premises held under a similar lease to be used for the prohibited purpose<sup>3</sup>. A release of the covenant need not be express. If the landlord is aware of a continuing breach and acquiesces in it for a long period, as, for example, where, with full knowledge, he receives rent, it will be presumed that he has either released the covenant or granted a licence for the user<sup>4</sup>. If the landlord's conduct is not wholly inconsistent with the continued existence of the covenant, it will not be presumed that he has totally released it<sup>5</sup>. Where a number of houses are held under identical leases containing a covenant against user otherwise than as a private dwelling house without the consent in writing of the landlord having been first obtained, a tenant may not prevent the landlord's authorising another tenant to use his premises for other purposes<sup>6</sup>.

1 Doe d Ambler v Woodbridge (1829) 9 B & C 376 at 378. Therefore, a landlord who accepts rent with knowledge of past breaches waives his right to forfeit the lease on account of those breaches; but his right to forfeit the lease on account of future continuing breaches is unaffected: see PARA 617 post.

2 Macher v Foundling Hospital (1813) 1 Ves & B 188. As to the effect of the tenant entering into the covenant after a licence for a particular trade has been given and not acted upon see Doe d Governors and Guardians of Foundling Hospital v Evans (1825) 4 LJOSKB 231.

3 Kemp v Sober (1851) 1 Sim NS 517 (affd (1852) 19 LTOS 308); Meredith v Wilson (1893) 69 LT 336. If by his acts he leads a reasonable person justifiably to conclude that the covenants are no longer enforced, the landlord will not be permitted to enforce the covenant: Chatsworth Estates Co v Fewell [1931] 1 Ch 224.

4 Gibson v Doeg (1857) 2 H & N 615 (20 years); Re Summerson, Downie v Summerson [1900] 1 Ch 112n (30 years); Hepworth v Pickles [1900] 1 Ch 108 (24 years); Chelsea Estates Ltd v Kadri (1970) 214 Estates Gazette 1356 (nearly 50 years); cf Russell v Archdale (1962) 185 Estates Gazette 913, CA (grant of a revocable licence by the landlord held not to be capable of amounting to acquiescence for these purposes). These are exceptional cases, however; and the mere acceptance of rent with knowledge of the change of user, even if it continues for some time, does not by itself amount to a release: Wolfe v Hogan [1949] 2 KB 194, [1949] 1 All ER 570, CA; City and Westminster Properties (1934) Ltd v Mudd [1959] Ch 129, [1958] 2 All ER 733. ## 507. Discharge and modification of restrictive covenants.

Where the use of land or the right to build on it is restricted by covenant, the Lands Tribunal has power to discharge or modify the restriction under certain conditions<sup>1</sup>; and this power extends to restrictions affecting leasehold land let for more than 40 years after 25 years have expired<sup>2</sup>.

Where the buildings comprised in a ground lease<sup>3</sup> or a multiple lease<sup>4</sup> have been rendered unfit<sup>5</sup> by war damage, the statutory provisions relating to the discharge and modification of restrictive covenants<sup>6</sup> have effect in relation to the land comprised in the lease, subject to the following modifications<sup>7</sup>:

1110 (1) in addition to the statutory grounds for the exercise of the powers of the Lands Tribunal<sup>8</sup>, those powers may be exercised, in relation to restrictions affecting the interest created by the lease, on the tribunal being satisfied that the proposed discharge or modification is desirable in order to permit the economical use or development of the land comprised in the lease, or is otherwise desirable in the national interest<sup>9</sup>;

1111 (2) where any restriction affecting the interest created by the lease is wholly or partially discharged or modified on any of the additional grounds specified in

- head (1) above, the powers of the tribunal may be exercised on any of those additional grounds in relation to any similar restriction affecting the freehold out of which that interest is derived<sup>10</sup>;
- 1112 (3) those provisions<sup>11</sup> apply<sup>12</sup> to restrictions affecting interests created by the lease in like manner as they would have applied to restrictions affecting the land had the land been freehold, whatever the term of the lease and whatever period of the term has expired<sup>13</sup>.

The county court has authority in certain circumstances to vary the terms of a lease or a restrictive covenant so as to permit the conversion of any premises into two or more dwelling houses<sup>14</sup>. Apart from statute, a restrictive covenant ceases to be enforceable if, owing to a change in the character of the neighbourhood, it is no longer possible to attain the object for which the covenant was imposed<sup>15</sup>.

Where the tenant has covenanted not to alter the user of premises without the landlord's consent, and a proposed alteration does not involve any structural alteration of the premises, the landlord is prohibited from taking a fine as a condition of giving his consent<sup>16</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 84 (as amended); and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 630 et seq. In determining whether a covenant is restrictive, the lease must be construed so as to ascertain the parties' intention at the time at which it was entered into and the covenants must be read in context: see Blumenthal v Church Comrs for England [2004] EWCA Civ 1688, [2005] 1 EGLR 78, [2004] All ER (D) 174 (Dec).

2 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 84(12) (as amended); and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 631.

3 For these purposes, 'ground lease' means a lease at a rent or, where the rent varies, at a maximum rent, which does not substantially exceed the rent which a tenant might reasonably have been expected, at the commencement of the term created by the lease, to pay for the land comprised in the lease, excluding any buildings, for a term equal to the term created by the lease: Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 s 24. For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 479 note 8 ante; and for the meaning of 'land' see PARA 479 note 2 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'multiple lease' means a lease comprising buildings which are used or adapted for use as two or more separate tenements: ibid s 24.

5 For these purposes, 'unfit' means (1) in relation to buildings or works, or to land of which three-quarters or more of the value is attributable to buildings or works, unfit for the purpose for which those buildings or works were used or adapted for use immediately before the occurrence of the war damage in question, having regard to the class of tenant likely to occupy similar buildings or works which are not unfit for that purpose, to the standard of accommodation available at the material time, and to all other circumstances; and (2) in relation to other land, unfit for any purpose for which the tenant can be reasonably expected to use the land, having regard to the terms of the lease under which it is held: ibid s 24. For the meaning of 'war damage' see PARA 479 note 3 ante; and for the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 479 note 7 ante.

6 Ie the Law of Property Act 1925 s 84 (as amended).

7 Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 s 18(1). No application which could not have been entertained by the Lands Tribunal if s 18 had not been passed may, however, be made to the tribunal after the buildings have been rendered fit: s 18(1) proviso; Lands Tribunal Act 1949 s 1(4) (amended by the Land Compensation Act 1961 s 40(3), Sch 5).

8 Ie the grounds specified in the Law of Property Act 1925 s 84(1)(a)-(c) (as amended): see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 632.

(1) COVENANT FOR QUIET ENJOYMENT

508. Usual form of covenant.

An express covenant for quiet enjoyment may be a qualified covenant, namely a covenant that the tenant is peaceably to hold and enjoy the demised premises during the term<sup>1</sup> without interruption by the landlord or persons claiming through or under him; or it may be an absolute covenant, in which case it extends also to interruption by persons claiming by title paramount<sup>2</sup>. The qualified form is usually adopted, and under it the landlord is not liable for acts of persons claiming by title paramount<sup>3</sup>, even though those acts are the consequences of his own default. Hence in the case of a sublease, if the superior landlord evicts the subtenant for non-payment of the head rent<sup>4</sup>, or for non-observance by him of a covenant of which he had received no notice from the sub-landlord<sup>5</sup>, this is not a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment; but it is a breach if the sub-landlord submits to judgment in a claim for recovery of possession by a person who has no title to sue, and the subtenant is in consequence evicted<sup>6</sup>. Similarly, where a landlord grants a lease to A with rights over a forecourt and then sells the reversion to B who grants a lease of the forecourt to C, the exercise of A's rights is not a breach of B's qualified covenant to C because A claims his title under the original landlord and not under B<sup>7</sup>; but, where the covenant expressly defines 'landlord' as including superior landlord and the superior landlord obstructs the subtenant's premises, the sub-landlord may be liable for the superior landlord's unlawful as well as lawful acts<sup>8</sup>.

An act occurring prior to the date of the covenant cannot amount to a breach<sup>9</sup>; and, where a landlord takes possession under an order for possession which is subsequently reversed on appeal, there is no breach of covenant<sup>10</sup>.

Where a lessor covenants to allow quiet enjoyment and to keep the building in repair, he must take all reasonable precautions to avoid disturbing the lessee's quiet enjoyment while undertaking repairs<sup>11</sup>.

509. Effect of qualified covenant.

The covenant usually provides for quiet enjoyment 'without interruption by the landlord or any persons rightfully claiming under or in trust for him' or 'without any lawful interruption by the landlord or any persons claiming under or in trust for him'. Whichever of these forms is used, the covenant protects only against the acts of persons claiming under the landlord so far as they are successors in title to the landlord, or actually have authority from him to do the acts<sup>1</sup>; and the effect is the same even if the words 'rightfully' or 'lawful' are not inserted<sup>2</sup>. The covenant does not extend to acts of a stranger, notwithstanding that he purports to claim under the landlord<sup>3</sup>; nor does it extend to unlawful acts of persons who in fact derive title under the landlord<sup>4</sup>. It does, however, extend to all acts of the landlord himself which interrupt the enjoyment whether they are lawful or not<sup>5</sup>. An act may constitute a breach of the covenant even where, apart from the covenant, the landlord has the right to do the act complained of<sup>6</sup>.

Although in general the covenantor is not taken to covenant against the wrongful acts of strangers<sup>7</sup>, it is otherwise if a person is specified in the covenant, as the covenantor then knows against whose acts he covenants<sup>8</sup>.

It follows that it is no breach if the interruption is caused by an adjoining tenant whose lease, although granted by the same landlord, does not authorise the act causing the interruption<sup>9</sup>; and there is no breach, in the case of a lease of sporting rights over a farm with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, if the farm tenant interferes with the sporting rights in breach of the terms of his own lease<sup>10</sup>. Where, however, a landlord grants a lease to a tenant which necessarily involves a nuisance to an adjoining tenant, and the landlord's reversion is acquired by an assignee, the assignee is liable for the nuisance to the adjoining tenant if he purchases with knowledge of the nuisance and allows and authorises its continuance<sup>11</sup>.

Where a lease granted by the Crown contains an express covenant for quiet enjoyment, the covenant must by necessary implication be read so as to exclude those measures affecting the nation as a whole which the Crown takes for the public good<sup>12</sup>.

1 Harrison, Ainslie & Co v Muncaster [1891] 2 QB 680 at 684, CA; and see Sanderson v Berwick-upon-Tweed Corp (1884) 13 QBD 547 at 551, CA; cf Fox v Waters (1840) 12 Ad & El 43. The following persons have been held to 'claim under' the landlord within the meaning of the covenant: a person claiming under a settlement made by the settlor under a power (Carpenter v Parker (1857) 3 CBNS 206); a remainderman under a settlement made by the landlord before the lease (Hurd v Fletcher (1778) 1 Doug KB 43; Evans v Vaughan (1825) 4 B & C 261); the landlord's widow claiming under a fine levied before the lease to the landlord, his wife, and his heirs (Butler v Lady Swinnerton (1623) Cro Jac 656); a person claiming under a prior appointment by the landlord and another (Calvert v Sebright (1852) 15 Beav 156). Where the landlord has been a party to a prior lease as trustee, the prior tenant claims under him (Markham v Paget [1908] 1 Ch 697 at 711); but a tenant under a prior lease to which a landlord of the lease in question was not party does not claim under him (Re Griffiths, Griffiths v Riggs (1917) 61 Sol Jo 268); and an assignee of the reversion, who becomes owner of adjoining land by an independent title, does not claim under the landlord as to such adjoining land so as to be restricted in the use of it by the covenant (Davis v Town Properties Investment Corp Ltd [1903] 1 Ch 797, CA). Where before the assignment of a reversion the assignor grants to A a lease and rights over a forecourt, the assignee is not in breach of covenant if he grants a lease to B of the forecourt and A then seeks to exercise his rights: see Celsteel Ltd v Alton House Holdings Ltd (No 2) [1987] 2 All ER 240, [1987] 1 WLR 291, CA.

2 Williams v Gabriel [1906] 1 KB 155. The statement of claim must exclude the possibility that the disturbance may be by a person deriving title from the tenant himself: see Brookes v Humphreys (1838) 5 Bing NC 55. Where a local authority enters and carries out work necessary to comply with a dangerous structure notice with which the landlord has failed to comply, the landlord is not in breach of his covenant for quiet enjoyment (Popular Catering Association Ltd v Romagnoli [1937] 1 All ER 167); but, where the landlord carried out the work himself, without serving on the tenant a statutory notice of his intention to do so, the tenant recovered damages for breach of the covenant (Trotter v Louth (1931) 47 TLR 335).

3 It is otherwise if the covenant extends to persons 'claiming or pretending to claim': Chaplain v Southgate (1717) 10 Mod Rep 383.

4 Tisdale v Essex (1616) Hob 34; Hayes v Bickerstaff (1675) Vaugh 118; notes to 2 Wms Saund (1871 Edn) 524, 525 note (3); Dudley v Folliott (1790) 3 Term Rep 584; and see Anon (1774) Lofft 460.

5 As against the party himself the court will not consider the word 'lawful' or drive the tenant to proceedings for trespass (Cross v Young (1685) 2 Show 425 at 427; Andrews v Paradise (1724) 8 Mod Rep 318; cf Corus v -- (1597) Cro Eliz 544); but the disturbance must be under a claim of right by the landlord (Lloyd v Tomkies (1787) 1 Term Rep 671).

510. Payment of rent not condition precedent.

The landlord's covenant for quiet enjoyment usually provides that the tenant, paying the rent and performing the covenants, is quietly to enjoy the demised premises; but under such words the payment of the rent is not a condition precedent to the performance of the covenant<sup>1</sup>.

511. Implied covenant for quiet enjoyment.

It has long been established that, if a landlord demises property to a tenant and does not enter into express covenants for title or for quiet enjoyment, certain promises are implied by him by the use of the word 'demise', namely that he is entitled to grant some term in the demised premises and that the tenant is to have quiet enjoyment of the premises<sup>1</sup>. Such promises are also implied by the use of equivalent words of letting<sup>2</sup>.

In a formal lease, and in an oral letting or an agreement for a lease which operates as a present demise<sup>3</sup>, there is implied<sup>4</sup> one single covenant for quiet enjoyment, under which the tenant is entitled to be put into possession of the premises which are leased to him at the outset of his tenancy<sup>5</sup>, and to remain quietly in possession of them throughout the term. This covenant may be broken either by want of title or by the eviction of the tenant<sup>6</sup>. An express covenant for quiet enjoyment excludes an implied covenant to the same effect<sup>7</sup>.

1 Miller v Emcer Products Ltd [1956] Ch 304 at 318, [1956] 1 All ER 237 at 242, CA; Iggulden v May (1804) 9 Ves 325 at 330; Mostyn v West Mostyn Coal and Iron Co (1876) 1 CPD 145. It has been said that the principle applies only where there is an actual demise and not a mere agreement for demise (Brashier v Jackson (1840) 6 M & W 549); but an agreement is now frequently equivalent to a demise (Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 ChD 9, CA; and see PARA 76 ante; and notes 2-3 infra). See also Burnett v Lynch (1826) 5 B & C 589 at 609; Line v Stephenson (1838) 5 Bing NC 183, Ex Ch. The judgments in Baynes & Co v Lloyd & Sons [1895] 2 QB 610, CA, contain dicta to the contrary, but that case is a reliable authority only for the particular point decided. As to implied covenants generally see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 250 et seq.

The dicta to the contrary in Baynes & Co v Lloyd & Sons [1895] 2 QB 610, CA, discussed in Jones v Lavington [1903] 1 KB 253, CA, have not been accepted as correct: see Markham v Paget supra.

Where the erection of machinery by the landlord in parts of the premises below those demised for the purpose of hotel bedrooms is contemplated by the parties, the use of the machinery causing more noise than anticipated does not constitute a breach of the implied covenant for quiet enjoyment, as effect will not be given to the intention to use part of the premises as bedrooms at the expense of the intention to use the machinery in the other part: Lyttleton Times Co Ltd v Warners Ltd [1907] AC 476, PC. As to the extent of the landlord's obligation as to title see also DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 255.

3 See Markham v Paget [1908] 1 Ch 697. The tenant may not, however, sue on an agreement to grant a lease unless it is equivalent to an actual demise: see Drury v Macnamara (1855) 5 E & B 612; and PARA 117 ante.

4 It has been held that, apart from any implied covenant for title, a landlord, by granting a lease, undertakes to put the tenant into possession: see Coe v Clay (1829) 5 Bing 440; Jinks v Edwards (1856) 11 Exch 775; Smart v Jones (1864) 15 CBNS 717 at 724; Milch v Coburn (1911) 27 TLR 372, CA. These cases were decided, however, when it was doubtful whether a covenant for quiet enjoyment could be implied in an informal letting: see Miller v Emcer Products Ltd [1956] Ch 304 at 321, [1956] 1 All ER 237 at 243, CA, per Romer LJ.

5 Ludwell v Newman (1795) 6 Term Rep 458. It seems, however, that the tenant is not entitled to be put into possession of any part of the demised premises of which he is not granted exclusive possession: see Miller v Emcer Products Ltd [1956] Ch 304, [1956] 1 All ER 237, CA.

Even where there is an express covenant, the landlord may still be liable for acts not covered by it on the principle that he may not derogate from his own grant: see PARA 520 post.

512. Scope of implied covenant for quiet enjoyment.

Like the usual express covenant, the implied covenant for quiet enjoyment is restricted to the acts of the landlord and persons claiming under him<sup>1</sup>, and protects the tenant against all disturbance by the landlord whether lawful or not, except under a right of re-entry<sup>2</sup>. As against other persons it protects the tenant only against lawful disturbance<sup>3</sup>.

1 This is clearly the case where the word used is 'let': Jones v Lavington [1903] 1 KB 253, CA; Markham v Paget [1908] 1 Ch 697. Where 'demise' is used, it is doubtful whether the covenant extends to the acts of persons claiming by title paramount. Some earlier cases decided that the covenant was an absolute one (Nokes' Case (1599) 4 Co Rep 80b; Merrill v Frame (1812) 4 Taunt 329) and that a landlord was, therefore, bound to protect the tenant from distress by the superior landlord for rent due under the head lease (Hancock v Caffyn (1832) 8 Bing 358 at 366), unless the subtenant had undertaken to pay such rent (Upton v Fergusson (1833) 3 Moo & S 88); but in Baynes & Co v Lloyd & Sons [1895] 2 QB 610, CA, it was regarded as an open question, and in Markham v Paget supra Swinfen Eady J apparently took the view that the covenant was a qualified one whatever words were used.

2 Andrews' Case (1591) Cro Eliz 214.

3 A 'covenant in law', ie an implied covenant, protects against lawful, not tortious, interruptions; and the reason is that in the case of tortious acts the tenant has a proper remedy against the wrongdoers: Hayes v Bickerstaff (1675) Vaugh 118; Wallis v Hands [1893] 2 Ch 75 at 83. See also Granger v Collins (1840) 6 M & W 458; and TORT vol 45(2) (Reissue) PARA 518 et seq.

Duration of implied covenant.

513. Duration of implied covenant.

The implied covenant for quiet enjoyment does not ensure the possession of the tenant during the whole term. It is operative only during the continuance of the landlord's estate by virtue of which he was able to give possession to the tenant; and, if this estate ceases during the currency of the term, the liability on the covenant, other than for disturbance already suffered, also ceases. Consequently, where a lease is granted by a tenant for life which does not bind the remainderman, and the tenant is evicted after the death of the tenant for life, the tenant has no remedy on the implied covenant<sup>1</sup>; and an undertenant for a term longer than the residue of the head term has no remedy if he is evicted at the expiration of the head term<sup>2</sup>.

Breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment.

514. Breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment.

The covenant for quiet<sup>1</sup> enjoyment operates according to its terms to secure the tenant, not merely in the possession, but in the enjoyment of the premises for all usual purposes; and, where the ordinary and lawful enjoyment of the demised premises is substantially interfered with by the acts or omissions<sup>2</sup> of the landlord or those lawfully claiming under him<sup>3</sup>, the covenant is broken, even if neither the title to, nor the possession of, the land is otherwise affected<sup>4</sup>. Whether this interference has taken place is, in each case, a question of fact<sup>5</sup>. The covenant may be broken by the lawful or unlawful act of the landlord, but in the case of a covenant against interruption by a class of persons, it is broken only by lawful acts of such persons<sup>6</sup>.

It was once considered that for there to be a breach of covenant there had to be some physical interference with the enjoyment of the demised premises<sup>7</sup>. There is, however, modern authority to the effect that the covenant is not confined to direct physical interference but may be broken by any conduct of the landlord or his agents which interferes with the tenant's freedom of action in exercising his rights as tenant; but there must be substantial interference with the tenant's possession, that is, his ability to use the premises in an ordinary lawful way<sup>8</sup>. Noise or disorderly conduct on adjoining premises, even if it amounts to a nuisance, may not constitute a breach of the covenant<sup>9</sup> and the landlord is not liable merely for failing to prevent it, although he may have power to do so under an agreement with the tenant of those premises<sup>10</sup>. Although regular excessive noise is capable of amounting to a substantial interference with the enjoyment of premises, the covenant is prospective in operation and does not extend to interference consequent upon the condition of the property before the grant of the tenancy<sup>11</sup>.

The covenant is not broken by the erection of an outside staircase to adjoining premises which interferes with the privacy of the demised premises, but does not render them materially less fit for occupation<sup>12</sup>, nor by the incorporation into a hotel of the remainder of the building of which the demised premises form part<sup>13</sup>; nor by an invasion of vermin where the landlord has done nothing which might attract them or let them escape onto the demised premises<sup>14</sup>.

In a lease by the Crown the exercise by the Crown of powers for the general public good, such as the power to requisition land, is not a breach of the covenant<sup>15</sup>.

Disturbance of enjoyment which is merely temporary and which does not interfere with the title or possession of the tenant is generally not a breach of the covenant<sup>16</sup>. Even where such a disturbance does constitute a breach, an injunction will not be granted where there is no likelihood of repetition, the tenant being left to his remedy in damages<sup>17</sup>. It is uncertain whether there is a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment where the tenant is deprived of possession by fraud<sup>18</sup>.

Neither the express covenant for quiet enjoyment nor the implied covenant against derogation from grant can impose on the landlord positive obligations to repair which he would not otherwise be obliged to perform<sup>19</sup>.

515. Acts done off the premises.

An act may be a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment notwithstanding that it is done off the premises. Even at the time when actual physical interference with the demised premises was considered to be an essential element of any breach of the covenant<sup>1</sup>, an act done off the premises could be a breach if it caused physical interference with the demised premises; as, for example, where a lower stratum of minerals had been demised, and the landlord worked the upper stratum so as to cause the roof of the lower stratum to fall in and the mine to be flooded<sup>2</sup>; or where, by a heating apparatus off the premises, the premises were overheated so as to become unsuitable for the use contemplated when the lease was granted<sup>3</sup>; or where the landlord cut off the gas and electricity supplies to the premises<sup>4</sup> or erected scaffolding in front of the door and windows of a demised shop in such a way as to interfere with the tenant's trade<sup>5</sup>. If, however, the disturbance is due to an act done off the premises, there is no breach of covenant unless it was either foreseen in fact, or ought by reasonable care to have been foreseen, that the interruption would follow as a consequence of the act<sup>6</sup>.

1 See PARA 514 ante. The modern authorities are against such a restrictive interpretation of the covenant.

6 Thus, where a mine is demised, and an adjoining mine is held under the same landlord, the fact that the working of the demised mine is disturbed by an unforeseen rush of water into the adjoining mine does not constitute a breach of the covenant: Harrison, Ainslie & Co v Muncaster [1891] 2 QB 680 at 689, CA.

516. Covenant does not enlarge grant.

By means of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, the tenant cannot obtain over adjoining property an easement or right which would not otherwise be included in the demise. The covenant does not enlarge what was previously granted, but gives an additional remedy if the tenant cannot get or is deprived of that which has been previously professed to be granted<sup>1</sup>. Consequently, where the tenant has not acquired a right to light or to the access of air, he may not complain of interference with light or air as a breach of the covenant<sup>2</sup>; and the covenant for quiet enjoyment does not prevent the ordinary user of adjoining premises of the landlord unless this is detrimental to the purpose for which the demised premises were let<sup>3</sup>.

2 Davis v Town Properties Investment Corpn Ltd [1903] 1 Ch 797, CA. As to the landlord's obligation not to derogate from his grant see PARA 520 post. In Tebb v Cave [1900] 1 Ch 642, it was held that building by the landlord on adjoining premises so as to deprive the demised premises of a current of air and cause the chimneys to smoke was a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment; but this was disapproved in Davis v Town Properties Investment Corpn Ltd supra. The covenant does not confer a right to light so as to prevent the landlord from building on adjoining premises: see Booth v Alcock (1873) 8 Ch App 663. Where the demised premises form part of a building estate, the circumstances existing at the date of the lease and known to both parties show that the landlord was not to be deprived of the right of building; and this forms a further reason for not construing the covenant so as to deprive him of the right (Potts v Smith (1868) LR 6 Eq 311), especially if the tenant has obtained the premises at a reduced rent on account of the probable erection of adjoining buildings (Robson v Palace Chambers, Westminster Co Ltd (1897) 14 TLR 56).

The fact that such user of adjoining premises increases the expense of the user of the demised premises does not constitute a breach: O'Cedar Ltd v Slough Trading Co Ltd [1927] 2 KB

123. Where a lease of shooting and sporting rights over a farm contains a covenant for quiet enjoyment, this does not prevent the tenant of the farm from using the land in the ordinary way, or from destroying furze and underwood in the ordinary course (Jeffryes v Evans (1865) 19 CBNS 246; and see Newton v Wilmot (1841) 8 M & W 711); nor in the case of a lease of corporate property does the covenant prevent the corporation from exercising a statutory right, such as the establishment of a market (Spurling v Bantoft [1891] 2 QB 384, DC).

517. Acts before demise.

The act or omission which causes the disturbance of enjoyment must be subsequent to the grant of the lease; but, if it is the act or omission of a person claiming under the landlord<sup>1</sup>, the title or authority under which he claims to do the act may have been created or given before the lease<sup>2</sup>. Where the landlord acquires adjoining land after the lease, he is not restricted by the covenant<sup>3</sup> in the user of this land.

518. Claim for breach before entry.

Before 1 January 1926 it was doubtful whether an action<sup>1</sup> could be brought on the covenant for quiet enjoyment before the tenant had entered<sup>2</sup>. The tenant may now bring a claim without actual entry<sup>3</sup> but not before he is entitled to possession<sup>4</sup>.

519. Measure of damages.

The damages in a claim for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment are measured by the loss resulting from the breach and are to be assessed on the basis of the sum that a willing lessee and a willing lessor would have agreed upon for the lease<sup>1</sup>. If the tenant is evicted because of the invalidity of the lease, he may recover the value of the term, and the pecuniary loss he has suffered by the proceedings to evict him, that is to say the costs of defending the proceedings, and any sum recovered against him in the proceedings, as mesne profits<sup>2</sup>. Similarly, if the tenant has been compelled to leave the demised premises, he may recover the expense of removal, since this is loss which normally flows from the breach of covenant<sup>3</sup>. Where subletting was likely to arise naturally and in the ordinary course of events, loss of rental for subletting was recoverable by the tenant<sup>4</sup>.

A claim for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment is a claim in contract; and accordingly damages for breach of contract do not normally comprise or include an element for mental distress<sup>5</sup>. The wrongful conduct of the landlord may also amount to a tort<sup>6</sup>, in which case aggravated damages or even exemplary damages may be awarded in an appropriate case<sup>7</sup>.

Where a landlord is in breach of the statutory provisions protecting residential occupiers from unlawful eviction and harassment<sup>8</sup>, the basis for the assessment of damages is the difference in value between the value of the landlord's interest subject to the residential occupier's right of occupation and its value without such right<sup>9</sup>, such damages replacing those inevitably smaller sums which the tenant would otherwise recover at common law<sup>10</sup>.

520. Obligation not to derogate from grant.

In addition to any obligation to give quiet enjoyment, the landlord is under an obligation not to derogate from his grant; and this obligation is not excluded by an express covenant for quiet enjoyment<sup>1</sup>. Thus, where a lease is made for a particular purpose, the landlord is under an obligation not to use adjoining land retained by him in such a way as to render the demised premises unfit or materially less fit for that purpose<sup>2</sup>. For the court to give relief on this ground the interference must be substantial<sup>3</sup>. User of adjoining land which merely makes the user of the demised premises more expensive is not a breach of the obligation<sup>4</sup>; nor is it a derogation from the demise of a shop to let adjoining premises to a trade rival<sup>5</sup>. Similarly, where a profit à prendre, such as a right of shooting or fishing, is granted for a term of years, the grantor may not fundamentally change the character of the land subject to the profit<sup>6</sup>, although acts done in the ordinary management of the land which interfere with the tenant's rights will not constitute a derogation from the grant<sup>7</sup>.

The obligation binds persons claiming under the landlord<sup>8</sup> but it does not extend to property acquired by him after the date of the lease<sup>9</sup>; nor does it prevent a corporation which has granted a lease from exercising a statutory right for the benefit of the public, such as the establishment of a market<sup>10</sup>.

Where the tenants of a block of flats are required to use their flats for private residential purposes only, a letting scheme (binding in equity as a restrictive covenant) may be implied<sup>11</sup>; and the landlord, and his assigns with notice of the scheme, will be restrained from infringing the scheme by converting part of the block into a club<sup>12</sup>, or a hotel<sup>13</sup>, or government offices<sup>14</sup>, or business premises<sup>15</sup>. The same acts may also amount to a derogation from the grant<sup>16</sup>.

1 Grosvenor Hotel Co v Hamilton [1894] 2 QB 836, CA. The principle is one which applies to all grants and not merely to leases: see generally DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 58. In relation to modern leases, it has been described as a 'rule of common honesty' (see Harmer v Jumbil (Nigeria) Tin Areas Ltd [1921] 1 Ch 200 at 225, CA, per Younger LJ); it involves identifying what obligations can be regarded as implicit, having regard to the particular purpose of the transaction at the time it was entered into: Petra Investments Ltd v Jeffrey Rogers plc (2000) 81 P & CR 267, [2000] 3 EGLR 120 (insufficient evidence to find an enduring obligation to maintain a particular tenant mix).

(2) RATES, TAXES ETC

(i) Liability in the Absence of Agreement

521. General liability for rates, taxes etc.

Rates, taxes, and other burdens on land and buildings imposed by public authority are either taxes imposed directly by Parliament<sup>1</sup>, or rates and charges imposed by local authorities acting under statutory powers.

Until 31 March 1990 a general rate was, subject to certain exemptions and reliefs, leviable under the General Rate Act 1967 on every occupier of (inter alia) land and houses; but in certain cases the owner of property was rated in place of the occupier. From 1 April 1990 to 31 March 1993 a personal, standard or collective community charge was levied, subject to certain exemptions, in respect of domestic properties by the relevant charging authority<sup>2</sup>; but the community charge was itself replaced by the council tax with effect from 1 April 1993<sup>3</sup>. The council tax is payable by a person specified for the purpose of each dwelling<sup>4</sup>; but the owner may be made liable in cases specified by statutory instrument<sup>5</sup>.

From 1 April 1990, in the case of non-domestic properties, the uniform business rate is leviable upon and payable by the occupier<sup>6</sup>. Part 4 of the Local Government Act 2003<sup>7</sup> now provides for the payment of an additional levy by non-domestic ratepayers to fund business improvement district arrangements made by local authorities with respect to business improvement districts comprising all or part of the areas of the authorities concerned<sup>8</sup>. The Environment Agency<sup>9</sup> may raise and levy on occupiers of chargeable land in a local flood defence district a general drainage charge at an amount per hectare of that land<sup>10</sup>.

The grant, assignment or surrender of any interest in or right over land or of any licence<sup>11</sup> to occupy land is, with certain exceptions<sup>12</sup>, an exempt supply for the purposes of VAT<sup>13</sup>, but an election may be made to waive the exemption save in the case of buildings used for residential or charitable purposes, residential caravans or facilities for the mooring of a residential houseboat<sup>14</sup>.

As to the scope of the charge to tax under the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 15(1), Schedule A (as amended), and as to the persons chargeable see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(1) (Reissue) PARA 45 et seq. Land tax was abolished by the Finance Act 1963 s 68. As to the circumstances in which a tenant may deduct tax paid by him from the rent payable see PARA 267 ante.

2 A landlord who granted a periodic tenancy remained liable to the standard community charge. It is apprehended, however, that the case law relating to the rating system in force prior to 31 March 1990 had little or no relevance to the community charge.

522. Net annual value for rating purposes.

In specified enactments<sup>1</sup>, and in any other enactment relating to the jurisdiction of county courts, references to the net annual value for rating or rateable value are to be construed as references to a sum equivalent to the last such value of the property concerned immediately before 1 April 1990<sup>2</sup>.

In enactments to which the above provisions apply, references to the net annual value for rating or rateable value of a property which did not have such a value immediately before 1 April 1990 are to be construed as references to:

- 1113 (1) the rateable value immediately before that date of a hereditament of which the property concerned forms or formed part; or
- 1114 (2) where there is no such hereditament, or where it had no such value, the value by the year of the property concerned at the time when the relevant proceedings are commenced<sup>3</sup>.

523. Certification of rateable value.

Where (1) a tenancy was entered into before 1 April 1990; (2) the house, premises or other property was capable of beneficial occupation immediately before that date; and (3) either:

- 1115 (a) no rateable value was assigned to the property immediately before 1 April 1990 for the purposes of the General Rate Act 1967 and no proposal to enter the property in a valuation list maintained for those purposes was outstanding at that time; or
- 1116 (b) an entry appeared in a valuation list in force immediately before 1 April 1990, structural alterations were completed between the date on which that entry was made and 1 April 1990 and immediately before that date no proposal was outstanding in respect of the alteration of that entry consequent upon the completion of the alterations, then, on the application<sup>1</sup> of the landlord or the tenant of the property, the valuation officer must certify the amount which, but for the repeal of the General Rate Act 1967, he would have proposed<sup>2</sup>:

- 1117 (i) where the requirements of head (a) above are satisfied, as the amount to be entered in a valuation list maintained immediately before 1 April 1990 for the purposes of the General Rate Act 1967 as the rateable value of the property in question; or
- 1118 (ii) where the requirements of head (b) above are satisfied, by way of alteration of the valuation list<sup>3</sup>, and the amount specified in any certificate so issued is to be treated<sup>4</sup> as the amount entered in a valuation list in force immediately before 1 April 1990 as the rateable value of the property in question<sup>5</sup>.

1 Such an application must be accompanied by particulars of the name and address of the person, other than the applicant, who is then the landlord or, as the case may be, the tenant of the property and of any other person who is known to the applicant to have an interest in the property: Local Government Finance (Repeals, Savings and Consequential Amendments) Order 1990, SI 1990/776, art 5(6). For these purposes, 'tenant' includes a statutory tenant within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 post) or the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARAS 1146-1149 post); and 'landlord', in relation to a statutory tenant, means the person who, apart from the statutory tenancy, would be entitled to possession of the property: Local Government Finance (Repeals, Savings and Consequential Amendments) Order 1990, SI 1990/776, art 5(9).

2 ie in accordance with the General Rate Act 1967 s 69(2) (repealed).

3 Local Government Finance (Repeals, Savings and Consequential Amendments) Order 1990, SI 1990/776, art 5(1)-(5). Before providing the certificate so required, the valuation officer must (1) give not less than four weeks' notice in writing to the applicant and to every person whose name and address have been provided as mentioned in art 5(6) (see note 1 supra) of the amount that he proposes to certify; and (2) consider the representations, if any, made to him within the period of four weeks beginning on the date on which the notice was given: art 5(7).

4 ie for the purposes of (1) the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 Pt II (ss 14-25) (as amended) (see PARA 1073 et seq post); (2) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt I (ss 1-22) (as amended) (see PARA 1196 et seq post); (3) the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 (see PARA 1389 et seq post); (4) the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARA 1134 et seq post); (5) the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 808 et seq post); (6) the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45) (as amended) (see PARAS 1011 et seq, 1183-1186 post); and (7) the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 186, Sch 10 (as amended) (see PARA 1237 et seq post).

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/524. Liability may usually be determined by agreement.

(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings

524. Liability may usually be determined by agreement.

In certain cases a landlord may be debarred by statute from shifting a burden which the legislature has imposed upon him to the tenant<sup>1</sup>; but in general, where a tax or rent is prima facie to be borne by one party, it is competent for the parties to agree that it is to be borne by the other<sup>2</sup>. Thus, while certain improvement expenses incurred by local authorities and expenses in connection with the abatement of nuisances<sup>3</sup>, if recovered from the occupier, may be deducted from rent, in each case the right of the occupier to deduct the amount paid by him from his rent is subject to any agreement to the contrary<sup>4</sup>.

An agreement by the tenant to pay outgoing will not extend to rates or taxes of a new kind imposed by virtue of subsequent legislation, unless it is expressly provided that it shall include both present and future outgoing<sup>5</sup>.

Where, after the date a contract, tenancy or lease is made, there is a change in the VAT charged, or an election is made to waive the exemption from the tax, VAT may be added to the contract price, such as rent, unless the contract, tenancy or lease specifically otherwise provides<sup>6</sup>.

1 Eg the former right of the tenant of licensed premises to deduct from his rent a certain proportion of the compensation charge might not be excluded by agreement: see the Licensing Act 1964 s 17(4) (repealed). Where, as in this case, a burden is imposed by statute on the landlord 'notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary', these words include agreements made after the passing of the statute (Wooler v North Eastern Breweries [1910] 1 KB 247, where the dictum of Parke B to the contrary in Re Knight, Gwynne v Knight (1848) 1 Exch 802 was not accepted), but the words of a statute may themselves show that the statute only applies to agreements existing at the date of the Act and not to agreements made after that date (R v Customs and Excise Comrs [1928] AC 402, HL).

2 See PARA 525 et seq post.

3 As to such expenses see PARA 268 ante.

4 As to deducting such expenses from rent see PARA 268 ante.

5 Mile End Old Town Vestry v Whitby (1898) 78 LT 80. The tenant will not, however, be relieved on this ground if the new rates and taxes are in substance the successors of rates and taxes imposed at the date of the commencement of the tenancy: see Smith v Smith [1939] 4 All ER 312 (statutory drainage rates held to be the successors of rates imposed by local Acts). An exemption granted by statute from all taxes, rates and assessments whatsoever has been held to include taxes whether in existence at the time of the grant or not: Pole-Carew v Craddock [1920] 3 KB 109, CA, following Associated Newspapers Ltd v London Corpn [1916] 2 AC 429, HL, which overruled Sion College v London Corpn [1901] 1 KB 617, CA. Cf City of Halifax v Novia Scotia Car Works Ltd [1914] AC 992, PC (the phrase 'total exemption from taxation' was held to cover liability for contributions for the construction of sewers).

6 See the Value Added Tax Act 1994 s 89; and VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 107. Unless there is an agreement, which may be express or implied, that VAT should be paid by the other party, the tax is payable by the person making the taxable supply. See further PARA 125 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/12. OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/525. Meaning of 'tax'.

525. Meaning of 'tax'.

'Tax' in its widest sense includes all money raised by taxation<sup>1</sup>, and it may, therefore, include parliamentary taxes, that is, taxes levied directly by Parliament, usually for the benefit of the whole nation<sup>2</sup>, and also rates and other charges levied by local authorities under statutory powers<sup>3</sup>. As a rule, however, it denotes parliamentary taxes, and an agreement by the tenant to pay taxes will bind him to pay parliamentary taxes which are payable by the landlord, in the absence of agreement to the contrary<sup>4</sup>.

1 Mitchell v Fordham (1827) 6 B & C 274 at 277. The context of the agreement may, however, show that 'tax' refers only to local as opposed to parliamentary taxes: Edinburgh Corp'n v Lord Advocate 1923 SC 112, Ct of Sess.

2 Bedfordshire Union v Bedford Comrs (1852) 7 Exch 777 at 779.

3 Thus, 'parochial taxes' formerly included poor rates (R v Toms (1780) 1 Doug KB 401), and other rates raised out of poor rates (R v Aylesbury with Walton Inhabitants (1846) 9 QB 261); but although 'taxes' by itself might include poor rates (Mitchell v Fordham (1827) 6 B & C 274), poor rates were not included in a covenant by the landlord to pay 'all taxes on the land demised', as the former poor rate was not a tax on the land, but a personal charge on the occupier in respect of the land (Theed v Starkey (1727) 8 Mod Rep 314; Rowls v Gells (1776) 2 Cowp 451 at 452).

4 Count Arran v Crisp (1694) 12 Mod Rep 54; Amfield v White (1825) Ry & M 246; Hopwood v Barefoot (1709) 11 Mod Rep 237. The agreement throwing landlord's taxes on the tenant may be oral: Amfield v White supra. A covenant by the tenant to pay all parliamentary taxes and assessments was held to include a rentcharge representing redeemed land tax: Governors of Christ's Hospital v Harrild (1841) 2 Man & G 707; cf Murray v Parker (1854) 19 Beav 305. Where rent is to be paid free from all taxes, the effect is to relieve the landlord of all burdens which can be legally thrown on the tenant (Giles v Hooper (1690) Carth 135; Parish v Sleeman (1860) 1 De GF & J 326 (rent payable 'free of all outgoing')), except burdens of a wholly new kind imposed after the creation of the tenancy (Mile End Old Town Vestry v Whitby (1898) 78 LT 80; Smith v Smith [1939] 4 All ER 312). A contract by the landlord to pay rates is a contract of indemnity, and may render him liable for damages for imprisonment resulting from his default (Atkins v Hutton (1909) 103 LT 514, CA), or for damages resulting from a distress, even though illegal, suffered by the tenant (Isaacs v Arlidge (1917) 87 LJKB 347, DC).

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/526. Landlord's covenant to pay rates and taxes.

526. Landlord's covenant to pay rates and taxes.

Under an agreement for letting at a specified yearly rent 'including all rates and taxes', the tenant was entitled to deduct from his rent the whole of the general rate paid by him<sup>1</sup>. He would presumably now be entitled to deduct the whole of the uniform business rate, if applicable<sup>2</sup>.

A covenant by the landlord to pay rates included a water rate in respect of water supplied for domestic purposes, at least if the rate as levied extended to other premises belonging to the same landlord<sup>3</sup>. Subject to certain exceptions, and except in so far as provision to the contrary is made by any agreement to which the water undertaker is a party, the occupier of premises, and not the owner, is now liable to pay water charges, and is also liable for the payment of charges for sewerage services<sup>4</sup>.

1 Barcroft v Welland (1883) 12 LR Ir 35; and similarly where a net rent was to be paid (Bennett v Womack (1828) 7 B & C 627 at 629; Bradbury v Wright (1781) 2 Doug KB 624). Where the landlord covenanted to pay rates in respect of the ground demised, and buildings were subsequently erected, so that the subject matter of assessment was changed, and the assessment increased, the landlord was liable to pay rates only in respect of the ground, and not the part attributable to the buildings: Watson v Home (1827) 7 B & C 285. Similarly, where the landlord covenanted to pay all taxes then chargeable on the demised premises, and the tenant covenanted to pay all fresh taxes thereafter charged, the tenant paid fresh taxes, and also any increment in the old taxes which was occasioned by the improved value of the premises: Watson v Atkins (1820) 3 B & Ald 647; Graham v Wade (1812) 16 East 29. Where, however, the landlord's covenant extended to all rates and taxes at the date of the lease, or subsequently, payable in respect of the premises, and the assessment was afterwards increased without any change in the premises, the landlord was liable for the increased rates: Salaman v Holford [1909] 2 Ch 602, CA.

2 As to the uniform business rate see PARA 521 ante; and RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1B) (Reissue) PARA 2. A tenant of residential premises is normally liable to pay council tax: see RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1B) (Reissue) PARA 237.

3 Spanish Telegraph Co v Shepherd (1884) 13 QBD 202; Bourne and Tant v Salmon and Gluckstein Ltd [1907] 1 Ch 616, CA. Where the rate was assessed separately in respect of the demised premises, the result might be different: Badcock v Hunt (1888) 22 QBD 145, CA. The landlord's covenant did not extend to water supplied for trade purposes: Re Floyd, Floyd v J Lyons & Co [1897] 1 Ch 633, CA.

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/527. Usual covenants in lease as to rates, taxes and outgoings.

527. Usual covenants in lease as to rates, taxes and outgoings.

The tenant usually covenants to pay all rates, taxes and assessments payable in respect of the demised premises during the term; and in cases of long leases, and sometimes also in short tenancies, the covenant is extended so as to include liabilities which are described by one or more of the words 'duties', 'outgoings', 'impositions', 'burdens', or 'charges'; and it is expressed so as to include such liabilities 'now or hereafter' imposed, and whether they are imposed 'on the demised premises or on the landlord or tenant in respect thereof'<sup>1</sup>. Where, under such a covenant, the tenant is liable to pay expenses which are charged on the landlord, he may be sued for the amount of the expenses before the landlord has actually paid them<sup>2</sup>. Such a covenant by a subtenant is not subject to an implied condition that his immediate landlord should himself have paid or be liable to pay the rates, but may be enforced even though under the head lease the head landlord agreed to pay them<sup>3</sup>.

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/528. Charges for permanent improvements.

528. Charges for permanent improvements.

In general the tenant should be liable to bear all expenses which are of a regularly recurring nature and which relate to the occupation of the premises; the landlord should be liable for expenses which are incurred for the permanent improvement of the premises, except that in tenancies exceeding three years a share depending on the length of the tenancy should be borne by the tenant; and the covenant will not be construed so as to throw expenses of permanent improvements on the tenant unless there are words clearly requiring such a result. In each case, however, the construction of the covenant depends on the words used, and upon any other provisions in the lease which may properly be regarded as assisting the construction. The usual charges for improvements of a permanent nature are those for drainage and paving expenses and for the abatement of nuisances<sup>1</sup>.

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/529. Covenant to pay 'rates, taxes and assessments'.

529. Covenant to pay 'rates, taxes and assessments'.

If a covenant binds the tenant to pay 'rates, taxes and assessments', it refers only to rates and assessments of a recurring nature, and not to expenses representing the permanent improvement of the premises, whether these are directly assessed in respect of the premises, or are assessed in consequence of the failure of the owner to do the work<sup>1</sup>. Consequently, it does not include expenses incurred<sup>2</sup> in connection with the abatement of a nuisance<sup>3</sup>. The covenant does not refer only to sums payable by the landlord; and, if the tenant omitted to pay the poor rate, this was a breach of the covenant<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Wilkinson v Collyer (1884) 13 QBD 1; Aldridge v Ferne (1886) 17 QBD 212 at 214, DC. Inhabited house duty was held to amount to an assessment charged upon the premises and to be covered by a covenant by the tenant to pay all assessments charged on the premises: Eastwood v McNab [1914] 2 KB 361, DC. A covenant to pay main drainage and sewers rates did not include drainage expenses incurred under the Metropolis Management Acts 1855 and 1862 (repealed); nor were such expenses payable by the tenant because the rent was payable 'without deduction': Home and Colonial Stores v Todd (1891) 63 LT 829; and see Skinner v Hunt [1904] 2 KB 452 at 459, CA. A covenant by the tenant to pay the rates imposed upon the demised premises might include the water rate even though the water facilities used by the tenant were on adjoining premises: King v Cave-Brown-Cave [1960] 2 QB 222, [1960] 2 All ER 751; but as to water charges see now para 526 the text and note 4 ante.

<sup>4</sup> Hurst v Hurst (1849) 4 Exch 571. The poor rate became part of the general rate made under the General Rate Act 1967 (repealed). It seems that demand by the collector is not necessary to constitute a breach of the covenant; the publication of the rate creates the obligation to pay it: Hooper v Woolmer (1850) 10 CB 370; Davis v Burrell and Lane (1851) 10 CB 821 at 826. As to the recovery by the landlord of taxes which the tenant has undertaken to pay see Spencer v Parry (1835) 3 Ad & El 331.

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/530. Construction of particular words.

530. Construction of particular words.

If the covenant on the part of the tenant to pay rates and taxes includes any of the words 'duties', 'outgoings', 'impositions' or 'burdens', the effect is to carry the tenant's liability beyond annual assessments, and to make him liable to pay all sums of money payable in respect of the demised premises notwithstanding that they are expenses of permanent improvements<sup>1</sup>. Thus a covenant by the tenant to pay duties binds him to pay drainage expenses incurred under statutory public health provisions<sup>2</sup>, and also to pay the expenses incurred in abating a nuisance<sup>3</sup> whether the landlord does the work or the local authority does it on his default<sup>4</sup>.

'Outgoings' is as wide as 'duties'<sup>5</sup>, and applies equally to charges incurred by direct and indirect assessment<sup>6</sup>. It binds the tenant to pay street works expenses under the highways legislation<sup>7</sup>, drainage expenses and the expenses of remedying sanitary defects under the legislation relating to public health<sup>8</sup>.

Under many modern statutes a county court has power to apportion between the landlord and the tenant the expense of works required to be executed by the statute in question<sup>9</sup>. This power may be exercised even though the lease contains a general covenant to pay all outgoings<sup>10</sup>, but the court must have regard to the terms of any contract between the parties, and, if the parties clearly contemplated that the particular expense should fall upon the tenant, no apportionment will be made<sup>11</sup>.

In this connection no distinction can be drawn between a 'duty' and an imposition. A 'duty imposed' means a sum of money payable in respect of a duty imposed, and 'imposition' has a similar meaning<sup>12</sup>. 'Burdens' is equivalent to 'impositions'.

'Charges' has the same effect as 'impositions'<sup>13</sup>; but, where the covenant binds the tenant to pay impositions 'charged upon the premises', he is not liable unless a charge is actually created<sup>14</sup>. Further, the charge must be created after the commencement of the tenancy, as the covenant contemplates only subsequent burdens. Consequently, if the work has been completed before this date, the tenant is not liable, notwithstanding that the apportionment of the charge is made afterwards<sup>15</sup>.

In all the above cases, whether the covenant is in the restricted form 'rates, taxes and assessments', or whether it is extended by the use of one or more of the words 'duties', 'outgoings', 'impositions', 'burdens' or 'charges', if it defines these as existing 'in respect of the demised premises', this is enough to determine the scope of the covenant, and it is immaterial whether the words 'or on the landlord or tenant in respect thereof' are also inserted<sup>16</sup>.

OTHER COVENANTS/(2) RATES, TAXES ETC/(ii) Covenants for Payment of Rates, Taxes and Outgoings/531. Covenant construed by reference to circumstances.

531. Covenant construed by reference to circumstances.

'Impositions', and other similar words which may be used in a covenant by the tenant to pay rates and taxes<sup>1</sup>, will not be construed so widely as to include obligations which cannot reasonably be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties<sup>2</sup>; and their effect may be restricted by other provisions of the lease which specifically throw upon the landlord expenses which they would otherwise include. Thus, an agreement by the landlord to do outside repairs may relieve a tenant who has agreed to pay 'impositions' from liability for the expenses of the abatement of a nuisance arising from outside drains<sup>3</sup>; and similarly a covenant by a tenant to pay a fair share of statutory charges may relieve him from liability to pay the whole under a covenant to pay outgoing<sup>4</sup>. The fact, however, that the tenant has not covenanted to repair<sup>5</sup>, or has entered into a restricted covenant to repair<sup>6</sup>, does not relieve him from liability under his covenant to pay outgoing<sup>7</sup>; nor is his liability under such a covenant restricted because in the reddendum the rent is reserved clear of all 'rates, taxes and deductions' without mention of outgoing<sup>7</sup>. Moreover, the full effect will be given to a covenant expressed in the usual general terms in a three years' agreement, or in respect of a yearly tenancy created by a tenant holding over<sup>8</sup>, notwithstanding the shortness of the tenancy<sup>9</sup>. On the other hand, where the covenant is to pay 'rates, taxes and assessments', a further covenant by the tenant to make and repair drains will not render him liable for the local authority's expenses of making a drain in order to abate a nuisance<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the construction of such words generally see PARA 530 ante.

2 Foulger v Arding [1902] 1 KB 700 at 707, 711, CA. The obligations referred to are those which are quite outside the relation of landlord and tenant, such as an obligation to pull down premises and rebuild them in conformity with a building line: Foulger v Arding supra. See also Anglo-American Telegraph Co Ltd v Western Union Telegraph Co [1950] WN 172, HL, where it was held that 'debts, obligations and liabilities' in a lease had in their context to be limited to civil obligations as distinct from fiscal (ie taxation) burdens.

(3) COVENANT TO INSURE

532. Usual covenants for insurance and tenant's statutory rights.

In most modern leases of whatever duration the liability for insurance is expressly defined; and a covenant to insure is entered into either by the landlord or the tenant. If the covenant is by the landlord, the insurance will in the first instance be at his own expense; but provision may be made for transferring the expense to the tenant, the most effectual way of doing this being to reserve the amount of the insurance as an additional rent<sup>1</sup>. It has been held that there will not generally be implied a term that the landlord will place the insurance so as not to impose an unnecessarily heavy burden on the tenant<sup>2</sup>; but it may be that the general principle that service charges and similar impositions are not to be inflated by unreasonable expenditure by the landlord applies<sup>3</sup>. In construing a covenant to insure 'for the full cost of reinstatement against loss or damage by fire', it is proper to have regard to the fact that there will be a delay between the occurrence of the damage and the completion of the reinstatement and that building costs are likely to rise in that period<sup>4</sup>. If the covenant is by the tenant, the insurance will be at his expense<sup>5</sup>.

Any express obligation to insure land against war damage is void; and any obligation to insure land against fire or other risks is construed as not including an obligation to insure against war damage<sup>6</sup>.

Any party to a long lease of a dwelling other than a flat may apply to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order varying the insurance provisions of the lease on the grounds that the lease fails to make satisfactory provision in that respect<sup>7</sup>.

Where a tenant covenants in a tenancy of a dwelling to indemnify the landlord in respect of insurance premiums, the landlord may not recover such expenditure unless the cost was reasonably incurred<sup>8</sup>.

A tenant of a dwelling has statutory rights to request certain details of the insurance cover from his landlord and to inspect the policy<sup>9</sup>. A tenant of a house under a long lease also has a statutory right to effect the insurance of the house with any authorised insurer, provided that certain conditions are satisfied<sup>10</sup>.

1 Although described as an additional rent, such amounts may not be strictly rent: see Marquis of Breadalbane v Robertson (1914) 51 SLR 156; and PARA 243 note 5 ante.

2 Bandar Property Holdings Ltd v JS Darwen (Successors) Ltd [1968] 2 All ER 305, 19 P & CR 785 (landlords held entitled to recover the whole amount of premium from the tenants, even though the identical cover could be obtained at a lower premium).

3 See Finchbourne Ltd v Rodrigues [1976] 3 All ER 581, CA. The general principle has to be applied, if at all, to insurance covenants in the light of the decisions referred to in the notes to para 533 post, notably Viscount Tredegar v Harwood [1929] AC 72, HL (cited in PARA 533 note 3 post).

4 Gleniffer Finance Corpn Ltd v Bamar Wood and Products Ltd (1978) 37 P & CR 208, 122 Sol Jo 110. A lease granted under the mandatory leaseback provisions of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 must contain a covenant by the lessor to insure for full reinstatement value: see s 36(1), Sch 9 para 14(2); and PARA 1666 post.

5 Breach of the covenant is usually a cause of forfeiture; but this may not be so if the landlord is entitled to insure on default, and if the amount of the premium is reserved as additional rent so that he may distrain for it: Doe d Pittman v Sutton (1841) 9 C & P 706. If the landlord pays the premium, this is a waiver of the forfeiture: Mills v Griffiths (1876) 45 LJQB 771. As to the mode of proof of non-insurance see Chaplin v Reid (1858) 1 F & F 315. Undisturbed possession by the tenant is evidence that there has been no breach: Montresor v Williams (1823) 1 LJOS Ch 151. Formerly there was no relief against forfeiture for non-insurance (Green v Bridges (1830) 4 Sim 96), but some relief is now allowed (see PARA 619 post).

6 Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) (Amendment) Act 1941 s 11 (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1995). Failure to insure against war damage might otherwise have been a breach of the covenant even if no such insurance was obtainable: see Moorgate Estates Ltd v Trower [1940] Ch 206, [1940] 1 All ER 195. ### 533. Stipulations as to office and names.

A covenant by the tenant to insure may require that the insurance is to be in an office or with insurers either specified or to be approved by the landlord<sup>1</sup>, and in particular names; but it is not necessary that the office or insurers should be specified<sup>2</sup>. In the absence of such special requirements the covenant is performed by an insurance for a proper sum by the tenant in his own name with an office or insurers selected by him. If the covenant is to insure in a specified office or other office approved by the landlord, the landlord is entitled without giving any reasons to refuse his approval of insurance with any office other than that specified<sup>3</sup>. If under such a covenant the tenant insuring with the specified office obtains a policy excepting damage by a foreign enemy, military or usurped power, the landlord may not complain of a breach of covenant through failure to insure against those risks, if it is shown that such is the usual policy issued by the specified office, because the covenant will not in such a case be to insure against loss or damage however occasioned, but such loss or damage as is covered by the normal policy issued by the office<sup>4</sup>. A covenant to insure in the joint names of the landlord and tenant is broken by an insurance in the name of the tenant only<sup>5</sup>; and a covenant to insure in the name of the landlord is broken if the tenant adds his own name<sup>6</sup>; but an insurance in the name of the landlord only, when it should be in the joint names of the landlord and tenant, is a substantial performance of the covenant, as the addition of the tenant's name is only for his own benefit<sup>7</sup>. A landlord who covenants to effect an adequate insurance discharges his obligation if he takes proper advice from the insurance company (or, it would seem, from reputable professional advisers) and follows that advice<sup>8</sup>.

There may be a covenant by the tenant not to do anything whereby the premium for insurance may be increased; and, if he uses the premises in such a way that the premium will be increased, or the policy not renewed, he will be in breach of covenant, which may be restrained by injunction<sup>9</sup>. The fact that such a covenant is made by a tenant who pays the insurance premium casts no obligation, however, upon the landlord not to let adjoining premises for purposes which may result in the tenant's having to pay an increased premium; and, if an increase in premium results from the landlord's letting adjoining premises for particular purposes, the tenant and not the landlord will be liable for the increase<sup>10</sup>.

Where a tenant is required to insure with an insurer nominated by the landlord, he may nevertheless apply to a county court or leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination as to whether the insurance available from the nominated insurer is unsatisfactory or the premiums payable in respect of the insurance are excessive; and on such an application the court or tribunal may make an order requiring the landlord to nominate or approve a different insurer<sup>11</sup>. A tenant of a house under a long lease also has a statutory right to effect the insurance of the house with any authorised insurer, provided that certain conditions are satisfied<sup>12</sup>.

1 Where the office or insurers are to be named by the landlord, there is probably no breach of covenant by non-insurance unless the landlord has named an office: Lillie v Legh (1858) 3 De G & J 204. Often the particular office is named in the lease: Doe d Flower v Peck (1830) 1 B & Ad 428; Chaplin v Reid (1858) 1 F & F 315.

534. Breach of covenant to insure.

Where a tenant covenants to insure and keep insured the demised premises, he must effect the insurance within a reasonable time. If the effecting of the insurance is delayed, the onus of showing that the delay is reasonable is on the tenant<sup>1</sup>.

It is a breach of covenant if any part of the premises is uninsured<sup>2</sup>, and if the insurance is not subsisting at any time during the term<sup>3</sup>. So long as there is a failure to keep the premises insured in accordance with the terms of the covenant, there is a continuing breach; and receipt of rent by the landlord operates as a waiver of the forfeiture only until the receipt<sup>4</sup>. Even if no fire has occurred during the period that the premises were uninsured, it is possible that the landlord is entitled to recover more than nominal damages by reason of the risk which he has run<sup>5</sup>; but, on remedying the breach, the tenant may obtain relief against the forfeiture, and relief may be given without requiring payment by the tenant of any sum by way of compensation<sup>6</sup>. Where the premises are destroyed or damaged, the measure of damages for breach of the covenant to insure is the cost of their restoration<sup>7</sup>.

Where a tenant makes good damage following a fire at the expense of an insurance company and then brings a claim for breach of covenant to insure against the landlord, the tenant is entitled to more than nominal damages because the arrangement with the insurance company is purely collateral<sup>8</sup>.

1 Doe d Darlington v Ulph (1849) 13 QB 204. If the delay is short, and the landlord has led the tenant to believe that there was already an existing insurance on the premises, he may not treat the breach of covenant as a cause of forfeiture: Doe d Pittman v Sutton (1841) 9 C & P 706.

If the tenant has insured in accordance with his covenant, and the landlord effects a separate insurance, the loss will be apportioned by the insurers between the two policies<sup>1</sup>. The landlord may not in this way deprive the tenant of the benefit of his performance of the covenant, and he must account to the tenant for the moneys received under the policy effected by himself<sup>2</sup>.

PARAS 1386-2000)/12. OTHER COVENANTS/(3) COVENANT TO INSURE/536. Application of insurance moneys.

536. Application of insurance moneys.

An express covenant to insure, whether by the landlord or the tenant, usually provides that the insurance moneys are to be applied in reinstating the premises<sup>1</sup>. Where the landlord insures on his own account, without being under express liability to do so, and receives the insurance moneys, he is not bound to apply them in rebuilding<sup>2</sup>. Where the landlord covenants to insure the premises and the tenant is obliged to repay to the landlord the amount of the premiums, the correct inference is that the insurance is intended to enure for the benefit of both parties; and the landlord is obliged to use the insurance moneys received in reinstating the property if the tenant so requires<sup>3</sup>. In any event, the tenant is entitled, at any time before the insurers have paid the moneys in respect of damage by fire to the landlord<sup>4</sup>, to require that the moneys are to be spent in restoring the premises<sup>5</sup>. This does not, however, extend to trade fixtures affixed by the tenant<sup>6</sup>. Where it becomes impossible to apply the insurance moneys in reinstatement, for example because the premises were compulsorily acquired after the event which gave rise to the payment of the insurance moneys but before any work could be done<sup>7</sup>, the insurance moneys belong to the party who paid the premiums, even if the insurance was placed in the joint names of the landlord and the tenant<sup>8</sup>. Accordingly, it is always desirable that the lease should contain specific provision as to the ownership or apportionment of the insurance moneys in the event of reinstatement becoming impossible.

A policy of insurance<sup>9</sup> is a contract of indemnity, and, therefore, if the tenant restores the property under his covenant to repair, the landlord is not entitled to claim payment under the policy or to retain a payment which has been made<sup>10</sup>.

Where under the terms of the lease the landlord is entitled to be indemnified in respect of the insurance premiums by the tenant and in the event of damage by fire the landlord recoups his loss from the insurance moneys, he may not further claim against the tenant for damages in negligence<sup>11</sup>.

1 'Cost of reinstatement' means the cost when reinstatement is likely to be completed, notwithstanding reasonable delay: see Gleniffer Finance Corp'n Ltd v Bamar Wood and Products Ltd (1978) 37 P & CR 208, 122 Sol Jo 110; and PARA 532 ante.

537. VAT on payments made by tenant in respect of insurance.

Insurance transactions are exempt from VAT<sup>1</sup>. Where, however, a landlord takes out insurance on a building he is renting out that covers damage to the building which he is liable to repair under the terms of the rental agreement and passes on the cost of the insurance to his tenants, the additional amount charged in respect of insurance will follow the VAT liability of the property rental services and will not be exempt as insurance because it is the landlord's risk that is covered by the insurance and not the tenant's<sup>2</sup>. But there will be an exempt supply of insurance to the tenant where the landlord arranges insurance for the tenants covering their risks and naming them as insured parties on the contract, for example, household insurance, so that the supply of insurance is passing from the insurer via the landlord to the tenant<sup>3</sup>.

(4) COVENANTS FOR RENEWAL

538. Effect of covenant for renewal.

A lease may contain a covenant on the part of the landlord<sup>1</sup> that he will, at the end of the term, or at some stated period within the term<sup>2</sup>, grant a renewal of the lease if so required by the tenant<sup>3</sup>. Such a lease confers on the tenant an immediate term with a right to the further term, and in the event of his death within the term this right devolves upon his personal representatives<sup>4</sup>, and will run with the land and the reversion<sup>5</sup>. If, however, the lease is granted in the exercise of a power, the covenant cannot be enforced unless, at the date of renewal, the renewed lease is one authorised by the power<sup>6</sup>.

Any contract entered into on or after 1 January 1926 for the renewal of a lease or underlease for a term exceeding 60 years from the termination of the lease or underlease is void<sup>7</sup>.

If the covenant requires that the lease to be granted is to contain so far as possible clauses identical with those in the lease, the landlord is not bound to grant a renewal of the lease, if, owing to a change of circumstances, it becomes impossible to renew on the same terms as the original lease<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to options to renew see PARAS 139-140 ante. The notice exercising an option need not comply with the formalities required by the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended): see PARA 79 ante; and Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch 537, [1991] 1 All ER 600. The landlord may not deal with the property in prejudice of the tenant's rights under the covenant for renewal: see A-G of the Straits Settlement v Wemyss (1888) 13 App Cas 192, PC.

2 Where the lease is renewable at the end of any of certain periods, as at the end of every 14 years of the term, the tenant may require renewal at the end of any such period notwithstanding that he has missed previous periods (Bogg v Midland Rly Co (1867) LR 4 Eq 310; cf Swinburne v Milburn (1884) 9 App Cas 844, HL (lease renewable on the dropping of lives)), unless on the terms of the covenant he is bound to renew, if at all, at the end of the various periods in order (Rubery v Jervoise (1786) 1 Term Rep 229; Hussey v Domville (No 2) [1903] 1 IR 265, Ir CA; Domville v Callwell [1907] 2 IR 617; and see Reid v Blagrove (1831) 9 LJOS Ch 245; Maxwell v Ward (1824) 13 Price 674).

3 On notice to renew being given, the contract for renewal becomes binding on the tenant: Dawson v Lepper (1892) 29 LR Ir 211. As to the consideration for an agreement to renew see Richardson v Sydenham (1703) 2 Vern 447; Robertson v St John (1786) 2 Bro CC 140; Redshaw v Governor of Bedford Level Co (1759) 1 Eden 346; Dowling v Mill (1816) 1 Madd 541; Crofton v Ormsby (1806) 2 Sch & Lef 583. Where the tenant is bound to renew under a penalty, this does not give him the option to pay the penalty and not renew: Reid v Blagrove (1831) 9 LJOS Ch 245. As to a penalty on failure to renew in time see Lord Doneraile v Chartres (1784) 1 Ridg Parl Rep 122. Where the covenant for renewal stated that the landlord would grant a lease 'for a rent and containing the like covenants and provisions as are herein contained with the exception of the present covenant for renewal', it was held as a matter of construction that the rent in the new lease would be the same as that in the old lease: Rothwell v Wakeling (1974) 29 P & CR 234. As to the position where it may be impossible for the landlord to recover the full rent to be reserved in the new lease because of the effect of Rent Act restrictions see Mauray v Durley Chine (Investments) Ltd [1953] 2 QB 433, [1953] 2 All ER 458, CA; cf Newman v Dorrington Developments Ltd [1975] 3 All ER 928, [1975] 1 WLR 1642.

539. Observance of conditions by tenant.

A covenant for renewal usually requires that the tenant shall give notice of his intention to take a renewal before the determination of the term; and under such a requirement he loses his right if he fails to give the notice in time<sup>1</sup>. A notice given an unreasonable time in advance may be ineffective<sup>2</sup>. An option agreement must be strictly complied with<sup>3</sup>; thus if the renewal is made conditional on the observance of his covenants by the tenant, that observance is a condition precedent to the right of renewal; and the right of renewal is not enforceable if at the time for renewal there is a subsisting breach of covenant<sup>4</sup>, even though it is not a serious breach<sup>5</sup>. The condition applies to subsisting breaches only and not spent breaches of covenant<sup>6</sup>. The condition will, however, be less strictly construed in the case of a building lease than in the case of a lease of an existing house<sup>7</sup>. If the new lease is to be granted on payment of a sum of money, and it is not stipulated that this is to be paid before the expiration of the old lease, it is sufficient if it is paid on the granting of the new lease notwithstanding that this is after the expiration of the old term<sup>8</sup>. If the renewed lease is not conditional on the observance of covenants, the court will not refuse to enforce the renewal on the ground of breach of covenant unless the breach is serious and wilful, or unless the landlord could immediately put an end to the renewed lease under a proviso for re-entry<sup>9</sup>.

Where notice to renew a lease for lives had to be given within six months after the dropping of any life, relief was not given on the ground of ignorance of the death if the tenant might with reasonable diligence have discovered it (Harries v Bryant (1827) 4 Russ 89); and generally accident does not entitle the tenant to time for renewal unless it could not by reasonable diligence have been avoided (see Reid v Blagrove (1831) 9 LJOS Ch 245; Maxwell v Ward (1824) 13 Price 674; cf Firman v Lord Ormonde (1829) Beat 347). PARAS 1386-2000)/12. OTHER COVENANTS/(4) COVENANTS FOR RENEWAL/540. Perpetual renewal.

540. Perpetual renewal.

The covenant may be a covenant for perpetual renewal<sup>1</sup>, but the court will not treat it as such unless the intention in that behalf is clearly shown<sup>2</sup>, as, for example, where the covenant expressly states that the lease is to be renewable for ever<sup>3</sup>. If the intention to renew perpetually is clear, the court will give effect to it notwithstanding that certain other terms of the lease appear to be inconsistent with such an intention<sup>4</sup>. A provision that the new lease is to contain the same covenants as the old lease does not entitle the tenant to have the covenant for perpetual renewal inserted<sup>5</sup>, unless the provision expressly includes 'this present covenant' or some other plain indication of the parties' intention that the covenant for renewal should be inserted<sup>6</sup>. The intention to renew perpetually must be clear from the language of the lease; and the fact that several renewals have been granted is not admissible to explain the intention of the parties to the lease<sup>7</sup>. A covenant for perpetual renewal will not be construed as a contract to grant a succession of reversionary terms, so as to render void all such terms commencing more than 21 years after the date of the lease<sup>8</sup>.

1 The covenant is not open to objection on the ground of perpetuity (Bridges v Hitchcock (1715) 5 Bro Parl Cas 6, HL), unless the persons entitled to renewal are an unascertained class (*Hope v Gloucester Corp*n (1855) 7 De GM & G 647); and see London and South Western Rly Co v Gomm (1882) 20 ChD 562 at 572, CA, per Jessel MR; Muller v Trafford [1901] 1 Ch 54 at 61; and PERPETUITIES AND ACCUMULATIONS vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 1039. #### 541. Effect of covenant for perpetual renewal.

Since 31 December 1925 perpetually renewable leases and underleases<sup>1</sup> have been abolished<sup>2</sup>, and, if a lease contains a covenant which entitles the tenant to enforce perpetual renewal<sup>3</sup>, the lease takes effect as a demise for a term of 2,000 years<sup>4</sup>, and any contract for the grant of a lease with a covenant for perpetual renewal operates as an agreement for a demise for a term of 2,000 years<sup>5</sup>. In the case of subsisting leases, the term is calculated from the date at which the existing lease commenced; in all other cases the term commences from the date fixed for the commencement of the perpetually renewable lease<sup>6</sup>. Every term so created is subject to all the same trusts, powers, executory limitations over, rights and equities, if any, and to all the same incumbrances and obligations of every kind, as the perpetually renewable lease which it replaces would have been subject to<sup>7</sup>, and is deemed to contain:

- 1119 (1) a power, exercisable only with the consent of the persons, if any, interested in any derivative interest which might be prejudicially affected, for the lessee<sup>8</sup>, by giving at least ten days' notice in writing to the lessor<sup>9</sup>, to determine the lease at any date upon which the original lease would have expired if it had not been renewed<sup>10</sup>;
- 1120 (2) a covenant by the lessee to register every assignment or devolution of the term, including all probates or letters of administration affecting the same, with the lessor or his solicitor<sup>11</sup> or agent, within six months from the date of the assignment, devolution or grant of probate or letters of administration<sup>12</sup>.

Any power of re-entry contained in the lease applies and extends to the breach of every such covenant<sup>13</sup>.

Where a perpetually renewable lease or an agreement to grant such a lease, containing a provision for payment of a fine on renewal, was made before 1926, the fines were converted into an additional rent payable throughout the term<sup>14</sup>. Where such a lease or agreement is made after 1925, the lessee takes free from any obligation for payment in respect of renewal<sup>15</sup>.

1 'A perpetually renewable lease or underlease' means a lease or underlease the holder of which is entitled to enforce, whether or not subject to the fulfilment of any condition, the perpetual renewal thereof, and includes a lease or underlease for a life or lives or for a term of years, whether determinable with life or lives or not, which is perpetually renewable as aforesaid, but does not include copyhold land held for a life or lives or for years, whether or not determinable with life, whether the tenant had before 1 January 1926 a right of perpetual renewal subject or not to the fulfilment of any condition: Law of Property Act 1922 s 190(iii). 'Underlease' includes a sub-term created out of a derivative leasehold interest: s 190(iv). As to underleases see PARA 542 post. As to the deposit of perpetually renewable leases and underleases at the Central Office, and as to the power to search the file of such instruments and obtain copies of them see s 145, Sch 15 para 20 (prospectively amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 2 para 4(1), (3), as from a day to be appointed under s 148(1); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed); the Filing of Leases Rules 1925, SR & O 1925/1128; the Filing of Leases Fee Order 1925, SR & O 1925/1149.

2 Law of Property Act 1922 s 145, Sch 15 paras 1(1), 5(1) (Sch 15 para 5(1) numbered as such, and Sch 15 para 5(2), (3) added, by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 68, Sch 5 para 1). Where a grant (1) relates to commonhold land; and (2) would take effect by virtue of the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 para 5(1) (as so amended) as a demise for a term of 2,000 years or a sub-demise for a fixed term, the grant is to be treated as if it purported to be a grant of the term so referred to and the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 ss 17, 18 (residential and non-residential leases: see PARA 18 ante) apply accordingly: Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 para 5(2), (3) (as so added).

The 1922 Act came into operation on 1 January 1926: Law of Property Act (Postponement) Act 1924 s 1 (repealed); Law of Property (Amendment) Act 1924 s 12 (repealed).

3 As to when a covenant for renewal is a covenant for perpetual renewal see PARA 540 ante.

4 The conversion of perpetually renewable leases subsisting on 1 January 1926 into long terms was effected by the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 para 1(1), and the Law of Property Act 1925 s 202; and the creation of such leasehold interests is prevented by the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 para 5 (as amended: see note 2 supra). In the case of subsisting leases, the term vested in the person entitled to such lease on 1 January 1926 (see Sch 15 para 1(1) (cited in note 2 supra)); if such person was a minor, then the term vested in the person of full age who became entitled by statute to the minor's legal estate (see Sch 15 para 3(1)).

5 Existing contracts to grant perpetually renewable interests were converted into contracts to grant long terms (see ibid Sch 15 para 6(1)); and contracts for renewal entered into since 31 December 1925 operate as agreements to grant long terms (see Sch 15 para 7(1)). Accordingly, an oral lease for a term not exceeding three years, containing a covenant for perpetual renewal, does not confer a legal estate, but operates only as an agreement to grant a term of 2,000 years. As to oral leases see PARA 101 ante.

6 See ibid Sch 15 paras 1(1), 5, 7(1) (Sch 15 para 5 as amended: see note 2 supra).

7 See ibid Sch 15 para 3(1).

8 For these purposes, 'lessee' includes the persons deriving title under him: ibid s 190(ii).

9 For these purposes, 'lessor' means the person for the time being entitled in reversion expectant on the interest demised or, where the reversion is incumbered, the person having power to accept a surrender of the lease or underlease: ibid s 190(i).

10 See ibid Sch 15 para 10(1)(i).

11 For these purposes, any reference to a solicitor is to be construed as including a reference to a body corporate recognised by the Council of the Law Society under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 (as amended): Solicitors' Incorporated Practices Order 1991, SI 1991/2684, arts 2(1), 3, 4(a), Sch 1.

12 See the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 para 10(1)(ii). A fee of £1.05, which is to be in satisfaction of all costs, is to be paid in respect of each registration: Sch 15 para 10(1)(ii). This covenant is in substitution for any express covenant to register with the lessor or his solicitor or agent assignments and devolutions of the term and to pay fees or costs in respect of such registration: Sch 15 para 10(1)(ii).

13 See ibid Sch 15 para 10(1).

14 See ibid Sch 15 paras 6, 12 (amended by the Law of Property (Amendment) Act 1924 s 2, Sch 2 para 5; and by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (Dissolution) Order 2002, SI 2002/794, art 5(1), Sch 1 para 1).

15 See the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 paras 5(1), 7(1) (Sch 15 para 5(1) as amended: see note 2 supra).

542. Underlease with covenant for renewal.

A lessee holding for a term or for lives with a covenant for renewal may underlet upon similar conditions<sup>1</sup>; but since 31 December 1925 perpetually renewable underleases have been abolished<sup>2</sup>. If an underlease contains a covenant for perpetual renewal<sup>3</sup>, it takes effect in the same manner as a perpetually renewable lease<sup>4</sup>, except that the term of the substituted underlease is one day less in duration than the term out of which it is derived<sup>5</sup>.

1 The right of the undertenant to renewal (Morgan v Gurley (1851) 1 I Ch R 482), and of the underlandlord to compel acceptance of renewal (Curry v Stanley (1833) Hayes & Jo 487; Pilson v Spratt (1889) 25 LR Ir 5), may be lost by their conduct; thus the undertenant may forfeit his right of renewal by non-payment of fines (Hunt v Sayers (1832) Hayes 590; Cullen v Leonard (1842) 5 I Eq R 134; Chesterman v Mann (1851) 9 Hare 206); but the notice requiring payment must be distinctly proved (Lawless v Grogan (1837) 1 Dr & Wal 53; cf John v Armstrong (1834) L & G temp Plunk 392; Statham v Trustees of Liverpool Docks (1830) 3 Y & J 565). As to the person entitled to arrears of fines see Re Brinkley's Estate (1868) 16 WR 356; and as to the apportionment of liability for fines among beneficiaries see Re Baring, Jeune v Baring [1893] 1 Ch 61.

5 See the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 paras 2, 5 (Sch 15 para 5 amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 68, Sch 5 para 1). Similarly, a contract for the grant of an underlease with a covenant for perpetual renewal operates as an agreement for a sub-demise for a term less in duration by one day than the term out of which it is derived: see the Law of Property Act 1922 Sch 15 paras 6(1), 7(1).

(5) COVENANTS RELATING TO LICENSED PREMISES

543. Usual covenants.

Leases of licensed premises may contain covenants on the tenant's part which are intended to protect the premises licence<sup>1</sup>. If the landlord is a brewer and the premises are to be 'tied' to his business, the lease will contain covenants to create the 'tie' and ensure that the benefit of it is assignable<sup>2</sup>. Such arrangements are now uncommon and have largely been superseded by arrangements where the landlord supplying beer under a 'beer tie' agreement is not a brewer but a company owning a number of public houses and supplying its tenants with a range of beers from different brewers<sup>3</sup>. Alternatively, the beer tie may require beers to be purchased from a nominated supplier other than the landlord. Even if a nominated supplier has a dominant position in the market, and even if the prices it charges the tenant are higher than those available from other suppliers, that is not enough to establish abuse of its dominant position for the purposes of the Competition Act 1998<sup>4</sup>.

1 See PARAS 544-545 post. As to usual covenants in leases generally see PARA 83 ante.

2 See PARA 546 post. The restrictions formerly contained in the Supply of Beer (Tied Estate) Order 1989, SI 1989/2390 (as amended; now revoked) have been removed: see the Supply of Beer (Tied Estate) (Revocation) Order 2002, SI 2002/3204, art 2. As to the enforceability of tied house covenants see PARA 546 post.

<sup>3</sup> See PARA 546 post. For a case where a 'traditional' tied house lease was surrendered in exchange for a new lease from such a company see Plummer v Tibsco Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 102, [2002] 1 EGLR 29, [2002] All ER (D) 303 (Jan).

544. Covenant not to endanger premises licence.

If the tenant covenants that he will not do or suffer to be done anything whereby the premises licence may be revoked or the renewal of it withheld, this will render him and his assigns liable in respect of their own conduct of the premises; but it will not render them liable if the licence is revoked, or if renewal is withheld, by reason of offences committed by a subtenant or his employee<sup>1</sup>. To render the tenant and his assigns liable in that event, the covenant must either extend specifically to the conduct of a subtenant or other occupier or be an absolute covenant that the premises are to be so conducted that the premises licence shall not be revoked nor the renewal refused<sup>2</sup>.

On an oral letting of a public house there is no implied agreement that the tenant is to do no act whereby the premises licence may be revoked<sup>3</sup>.

545. Other usual covenants as to licence.

In a lease of licensed premises the tenant usually covenants to keep open the premises at all lawful hours<sup>1</sup>, and to apply for and use his best endeavours to obtain a grant or renewal of any certificates and licences necessary for keeping the premises open as a public house<sup>2</sup>. He commits a breach of the covenant as to renewal if, on a renewal being refused, he makes no attempt to have the decision reversed<sup>3</sup>. Where the renewal of the licence is refused, this does not put an end to the lease, and the rent continues to be payable<sup>4</sup>. Where a reversionary lease is granted and the licence is forfeited during the continuance of the prior lease, the rent under the reversionary lease is payable in full when it falls into possession<sup>5</sup>.

Covenants relating to the management of the premises run with the reversion; and the assignee of the reversion is, therefore, entitled to take advantage of them<sup>6</sup>.

1 On breach of this covenant the landlord may be entitled to the appointment of a receiver of the licence to secure its preservation: Charrington & Co Ltd v Camp [1902] 1 Ch 386; Whitbread & Co v Grain (1907) 23 TLR 462; Leney & Sons Ltd v Callingham and Thompson [1908] 1 KB 79, CA; and see RECEIVERS. There is no implied obligation that the tenant is to reside on the premises or conduct the business personally: Re Lander and Bagley's Contract [1892] 3 Ch 41; Moore v Robinson (1878) 48 LJQB 156. Any attempt by the tenant to reduce sales of liquor on the premises may be restrained by injunction (Dartford Brewery Co Ltd v Till and Godfrey (1906) 95 LT 636, CA); but the covenant in its entirety will not be enforced in that way (see Hooper v Brodrick (1840) 11 Sim 47; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 462).

2 See Bryant v Hancock & Co [1899] AC 442, HL. An executor, if he is willing to transfer the licence, and if he delivers up possession which is accepted by the landlord, is not liable for loss of the licence due to his omission to obtain an interim transfer: Brown v Watson [1904] 2 IR 218, CA. #### 546. Tied house covenants.

A covenant by the tenant of licensed premises to obtain all liquor required for his business from the landlord is valid at common law<sup>1</sup>, but it is subject to an implied condition that the landlord is ready to supply to the tenant liquor such as he reasonably requires in kind and quality<sup>2</sup>; and, if this condition is not fulfilled, the tenant may obtain his supplies elsewhere<sup>3</sup>. The covenant is sometimes enforced by reserving an additional rent while it is broken or by allowing a reduction of rent while it is observed. This does not, however, prevent the covenant from being imperative, at any rate where there is a proviso for re-entry on non-performance; and a tenant does not have the option of paying the additional or the unreduced rent and of dealing with another brewer or supplier<sup>4</sup>.

An exclusive supply clause may be unenforceable under European Union law (and under the Competition Act 1998) as an agreement, decision or concerted practice which has as its object or effect the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition<sup>5</sup> if:

- 1121 (1) having regard to the economic and legal context of the agreement at issue, it is difficult for competitors who could enter the market or increase their market share to gain access to the national market for the distribution of beer in premises for the sale and consumption of drinks<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1122 (2) the agreement in question makes a significant contribution to the sealing-off effect brought about by the totality of those agreements in their economic and legal context<sup>7</sup>.

However, any agreement or category of agreements between undertakings, any decision or category of decisions by associations of undertakings and any concerted practice or category of concerted practices which contributes to improving the production or distribution of goods or to promoting technical or economic progress, while allowing consumers a fair share of the resulting benefit, and which does not impose on the undertakings concerned restrictions which are not indispensable to the attainment of these objectives or afford such undertakings the possibility of eliminating competition in respect of a substantial part of the products in question is not caught by the prohibition on anti-competitive agreements, decisions and practices<sup>8</sup>; and no prior decision to that effect by the European Commission is now required<sup>9</sup>. The undertaking or association of undertakings claiming the benefit of this exemption bears the burden of proving that the conditions of the exemption are fulfilled<sup>10</sup>. The Commission has previously made a block exemption for vertical agreements or concerted practices entered into between two or more undertakings each of which operates, for the purposes of the agreement, at a different level of the production or distribution chain; these are permitted provided that they satisfy the requirements of the relevant Commission regulation<sup>11</sup>. A beer tie which does not require the tenant to purchase the beers brewed by the landlord alone or from a single nominated brewer, but requires him to purchase only beers supplied by the landlord from a range of brewers, national and international, enabling those brewers to penetrate the market, is thus enforceable<sup>12</sup>; and standard tenancy agreements to that effect have been specifically approved by the European Commission<sup>13</sup>. Nor is a beer tie requiring the tenant to purchase beers from a supplier nominated by the landlord necessarily an abuse of a dominant position in the market for the purposes of European Union law<sup>14</sup> or of the Competition Act 1998<sup>15</sup>.

A domestic court is not obliged to treat the European Commission's factual assessment of the United Kingdom beer tie market in one of its decisions<sup>16</sup> as effectively binding when considering an issue arising between different parties with respect to a different beer tie arrangement; the Commission's decision is simply evidence properly admissible before the court which, given the expertise of the Commission, may well be regarded as highly persuasive but is, as a matter of law, only part of the evidence which the court will take into account<sup>17</sup>. Where, however, national courts rule on agreements, decisions or practices under the relevant European Union provisions<sup>18</sup> which are already the subject of a Commission decision, they cannot take decisions running counter to the decision adopted by the Commission and must also avoid giving decisions which would conflict with a decision contemplated by the Commission in proceedings it has initiated; and to that effect the national court may assess whether it is necessary to stay its proceedings<sup>19</sup>. Similarly, when competition authorities of the member states rule on agreements, decisions or practices under those provisions<sup>20</sup> which are already the subject of a Commission decision, they cannot take decisions which would run counter to the decision adopted by the Commission<sup>21</sup>.

1 Such covenants were at first viewed with disfavour, as being prejudicial to the public welfare (Cooper v Twibill (1808) 3 Camp 286 note (a); Thornton v Sherratt (1818) 8 Taunt 529), but their validity is well established, subject to their not infringing the EC Treaty arts 81, 82 (see the text and notes 5-14 infra); and see eg P & S Amusements Ltd v Valley House Leisure Ltd [2006] EWHC 99 (Ch), [2006] All ER (D) 25 (Feb); P & S Amusements Ltd v Valley House Leisure Ltd [2006] EWHC 1510 (Ch), [2006] All ER (D) 285 (Jun). Cf a 'solus agreement in gross' which is not a term of the lease and, as an agreement in restraint of trade, may be invalid unless reasonable: see Petrofina (Great Britain) Ltd v Martin [1966] Ch 146, [1966] 1 All ER 126, CA; see also Cleveland Petroleum Co Ltd v Dartstone Ltd [1969] 1 All ER 201, [1969] 1 WLR 116, CA; Total Oil Great Britain Ltd v Thompson Garages (Biggin Hill) Ltd [1972] 1 QB 318, [1971] 3 All ER 1226, CA. Such a covenant was capable of running with the land (Clegg v Hands (1890) 44 ChD 503, CA) and the benefit and burden may now be transmitted on assignment (see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 3 (as amended); and PARA 580 post).

2 Noakes & Co Ltd v Day [1910] 1 Ch 270n, CA; Courage & Co Ltd v Carpenter [1910] 1 Ch 262. A provision in a tied house covenant that the landlord will supply liquor at the 'fair market price' must be construed in the light of the context and the surrounding circumstances; the words 'fair market price' have no fixed legal significance: Charrington & Co Ltd v Wooller [1914] AC 71, HL (where it was held to mean the price applying to tenants of tied houses). As to evidence of quality see Holcombe v Hewson (1810) 2 Camp 391; Manchester Brewery Co v Coombs (1900) as reported in 82 LT 347. The court will not, however, now imply into a beer tie agreement terms requiring that beer be sold to a tenant at a reasonable price, or preventing a supplier selling beer to non-tied houses at a lower price: Courage Ltd v Crehan, Byrne v Innentrepreneur Beer Supply Co Ltd (formerly known as Courage Ltd), Innentrepreneur Beer Supply Co Ltd v Langton, Greenalls Management Ltd v Smith, Walker Cain v McCaughey [1999] 2 EGLR 145, CA.

Sometimes an express proviso to the same effect is inserted: see Doe d Calvert v Reid (1830) 10 B & C 849 at 851; Clegg v Hands (1890) 44 ChD 503 at 516, CA.

Agreements, decisions and concerted practices caught by the EC Treaty art 81(1) which do not satisfy the conditions of art 81(3) (see the text and note 8 infra) are prohibited, no prior decision to that effect being required: EC Council Regulation 1/2003 (OJ L01, 04.01.2003, p 01) art 1(1). The abuse of a dominant position referred to in the EC Treaty art 82 is likewise prohibited, no prior decision to that effect being required: EC Council Regulation 1/2003 (OJ L01, 04.01.2003, p 01) art 1(3). As to the abuse of a dominant position under domestic law see the Competition Act 1998 s 18; and COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 125. A party to a contract that is liable to restrict or distort competition within the meaning of the EC Treaty art 81 can rely upon the breach of art 81 to obtain relief from the other contracting party: Case C-453/99 Courage Ltd v Crehan [2002] QB 507, [2001] All ER (EC) 886, ECJ.

6 The fact that, in that market, the agreement in issue is one of a number of similar agreements having a cumulative effect on competition constitutes only one factor amongst others in assessing whether access to that market is indeed difficult: see Case C-234/89 Delimitis v Henninger Brau [1991] ECR I-935, [1992] 5 CMLR 210, ECJ.

7 Case C-234/89 Delimitis v Henninger Brau [1991] ECR I-935, [1992] 5 CMLR 210, ECJ. The extent of the contribution made by the individual agreement depends on the position of the contracting parties in the relevant market and on the duration of the agreement: Delimitis v Henninger Brau supra.

8 See the EC Treaty art 81(3); and EC Council Regulation 1/2003 (OJ L01, 04.01.2003, p 01) art 1(2). See also the Competition Act 1998 s 9(1) (amended by the Competition Act 1998 and other enactments (Amendment) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1261, reg 4, Sch 1 para 6); and COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 122. The application of national competition law may not lead to the prohibition of agreements, decisions by associations of undertakings or concerted practices which may affect trade between member states but which do not restrict competition within the meaning of the EC Treaty art 81(1), or which fulfil the conditions of art 81(3) or which are covered by a regulation for the application of art 81(3); but member states are not thereby precluded from adopting and applying on their territory stricter national laws which prohibit or sanction unilateral conduct engaged in by undertakings: EC Council Regulation 1/2003 (OJ L01, 04.01.2003, p 01) art 3(2).

Vertical agreements are also excluded from the Chapter I prohibition in the Competition Act 1998 (ie the prohibition imposed by s 2: see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 116) provided that they are land agreements (ie an agreement between undertakings which creates, alters, transfers or terminates an interest in land, or an agreement to enter into such an agreement, together with any obligation and restriction to which the Competition Act 1998 (Land Agreements Exclusion and Revocation) Order 2004, SI 2004/1260, art 5 applies: see art 3); art 4. ## 13. ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES

(1) AGREEMENT TO ASSIGN

547. Licence to assign.

Where a lease requires the licence or consent of the landlord to be obtained to an assignment<sup>1</sup>, it is the duty of the vendor who agrees to assign the lease to obtain the necessary licence<sup>2</sup>. If the vendor fails to carry out this duty, he is liable to pay damages to the purchaser<sup>3</sup>. If the vendor fails to obtain a licence, the agreement to assign is not enforceable<sup>4</sup>; but, if the purchaser causes the landlord to refuse his consent, the purchaser may be liable to make any payment due under the agreement<sup>5</sup>. If the assignment is made without obtaining the required licence, the assignment is not void; it is effectual to vest the term in the assignee, but the landlord may treat the assignment as a cause of forfeiture provided, in the case of a covenant against assignment, that the lease contains a proviso for re-entry<sup>6</sup>. The purchaser cannot compel the vendor to assign the lease where the landlord's licence is required and cannot be obtained so that the assignment would amount to a breach of covenant<sup>7</sup>. If the licence to assign is required to be in writing, an oral licence is insufficient<sup>8</sup>, unless the necessity for written consent is waived by the landlord<sup>9</sup>. Unless the lease expressly so provides, no particular form of licence is required<sup>10</sup>. The licence extends only to the actual assignment or underlease which it authorises<sup>11</sup>, although it is usual expressly so to provide in the licence. If it is intended that the assignee is not to be let into possession until the assignment is complete, this also should be expressly stated<sup>12</sup>. A provision that the licence shall be void on certain conditions may not be relied upon by the person in breach<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to covenants requiring the landlord's consent to an assignment, and as to the withholding of that consent and the mutual position of the landlord and the tenant under the lease, see PARA 485 et seq ante. As to the questions whether and how the term devolves and the position as between the tenant and third parties, eg potential purchasers of the residue of the term, see the text and notes 2-13 infra; and PARA 548 et seq post.

2 Lloyd v Crispe (1813) 5 Taunt 249; Mason v Corder (1816) 7 Taunt 9. The Standard Conditions of Sale (4th Edn) conditions 8.3.1, 8.3.2 provide that, if a consent to let, assign or sublet is required to complete the contract for sale, the seller is to apply for the consent at his expense and to use all reasonable endeavours to obtain it and the buyer is to provide all information and references reasonably required. If the landlord unreasonably withholds his consent, the vendor is not bound to take legal proceedings to force the landlord to consent (Lehmann v McArthur (1868) 3 Ch App 496); nor, where met with a ground of refusal that is not wholly unreasonable, is the vendor bound to try to make the landlord change his mind, or to approach the freeholder where the landlord holds an intermediate interest, or to give an opportunity to the proposed assignee himself to approach the freeholder (Lipmans Wallpaper Ltd v Mason and Hodgkinton Ltd [1969] 1 Ch 20, [1968] 1 All ER 1123).

The Standard Conditions of Sale (4th Edn) condition 8.3.3 provides that, unless he is in breach of his obligations under condition 8.3.2, either party may rescind the contract by notice to the other party if, three working days before the completion date (or before a later date on which the parties have agreed to complete the contract), the consent has not been given or has been given subject to a condition to which a party reasonably objects. Any necessary consent must be in the form which satisfies the requirement to obtain it: see condition 8.3.1(b); and Aubergine Enterprises Ltd v Lakewood International Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 177, [2002] 1 WLR 2149, [2002] NLJR 364. The fact that the landlord's licence is needed does not of itself make the contract of sale conditional: Property and Bloodstock Ltd v Emerton [1968] Ch 94, [1967] 3 All ER 321, CA; Aubergine Enterprises Ltd v Lakewood International Ltd supra. Where the landlord's licence cannot be so obtained, the purchaser may recover any deposit he has paid even though he has negotiated unsuccessfully with the landlord for a new lease to be granted to him: Winter v Dumerque (1866) 14 WR 699. Cf Pincott v Moorstons Ltd [1937] 1 All ER 513, CA (deposit held not to be recoverable).

It may be an implied term of the Standard Conditions of Sale (4th Edn) that the purchaser will not do any act which would cause the landlord to withhold licence to assign: see Jebco Properties Ltd v Mastforce Ltd [1992] NPC 42 (such a term implied into a contract incorporating the National Conditions of Sale).

As to consent to assignment see PARA 485 et seq ante; and as to the right to recover damages for breach of contract for sale and the measure of damages see DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 1059; SALE OF LAND vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 254 et seq.

547 Licence to assign

NOTE 2--A party will lose its right to rescind under the Standard Conditions of Sale (4th Edn) condition 8.3.3 if it not exercised promptly: Alchemy Estates Ltd v Astor [2008] EWHC 2675 (Ch), [2009] 1 WLR 940, [2008] All ER (D) 35 (Nov).

548. Agreement to assign must be in writing.

The sale of leasehold premises is, in general, governed by the same principles as the sale of freehold property<sup>1</sup>. Thus, the agreement must satisfy the statutory provisions relating to contracts for the sale or other dispositions of land<sup>2</sup>. This rule applies whenever there is in effect an agreement for the transfer of the premises for the residue of the term; where, for example, the tenant agrees to give possession to another who is to be tenant for the residue of the term<sup>3</sup> or merely to give up possession of a house to another<sup>4</sup>. Even though the assignment has been completed by transfer of the premises in pursuance of an oral agreement, the vendor cannot recover the price on the contract, but, if the purchaser has admitted the amount to be due, it will be recoverable on an account stated<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to the conveyancing aspect see SALE OF LAND; as to investigation of title see PARA 89 et seq ante; and SALE OF LAND vol 42 (Reissue) PARAS 138, 140; as to recitals in assurances of leaseholds see SALE OF LAND vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 300; and as to the restrictions on requiring premiums on assignment see PARA 485 ante, PARA 925 et seq post.

A contract for the assignment of a lease is an estate contract which must be registered as such if it is to be binding on subsequent purchasers for value: see the Land Charges Act 1972 s 2(4), Class C(iv); and LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARAS 632, 643. Where the title to the lease is registered, the contract should be protected by notice on the register: see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 995 et seq.

2 The agreement must satisfy the requirements of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended): see PARA 79 ante. The contract must be in writing even though the unexpired residue of the term is less than three years (Poultny v Holmes (1720) 1 Stra 405; Barrett v Rolph (1845) 14 M & W 348), or the tenancy to be assigned is a yearly tenancy granted orally (Botting v Martin (1808) 1 Camp 317).

Under a contract to take over from the tenant a farm held under an expired lease if the landlord should accept the new tenant on the covenants in the lease, the lease itself must be handed over by the tenant to the proposed new tenant: Burton v Banks (1860) 2 F & F 213.

5 Cocking v Ward (1845) 1 CB 858; Pulbrook v Lawes (1876) 1 QBD 284; and see also CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 1051.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(2) ASSIGNMENT OF LEASES/549. Assignment of legal estate must normally be by deed.

(2) ASSIGNMENT OF LEASES

549. Assignment of legal estate must normally be by deed.

An assignment is ineffective to pass the legal estate in leasehold premises unless it is made by deed<sup>1</sup>, even if that estate arises under an oral grant of a yearly tenancy<sup>2</sup>. However, if made for value, an assignment under hand operates as an agreement to assign and vests an equitable interest in the assignee<sup>3</sup>. The assignor may assign the premises direct to himself and another<sup>4</sup> or assign them to or vest them in himself<sup>5</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 52(1); DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 14; and see Crago v Julian [1992] 1 All ER 744, [1992] 1 WLR 372, CA, applied in Camden London Borough Council v Alexandrou (1997) 30 HLR 534, 74 P & CR D33, CA (assignment of periodic tenancy must be by deed); but cf Parc (Battersea) Ltd (in administrative receivership) v Hutchinson [1999] 2 EGLR 33, [1999] All ER (D) 297 (assignment taking effect by operation of law; see PARA 107 ante). See also City Permanent Building Society v Miller [1952] Ch 840, [1952] 2 All ER 621, CA. As to the conveyances to which the Law of Property Act 1925 s 52 (as amended) does not apply see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 15. At common law an assignment of a chattel interest in corporeal hereditaments might be made by word of mouth: see Littleton's Tenures s 59; Co Litt 48a note (1), 49a, 85a note (2), 338a; 3 Preston's Abstracts of Title (2nd Edn) 115-117. The requirement of writing was introduced by the Statute of Frauds (1677) s 3 (repealed) and a deed was made necessary by the Real Property Act 1845 s 3 (repealed). As to assignment by the sheriff on sale under an execution see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1317; and as to registration of title on the assignment of leaseholds and transfers of registered leaseholds see LAND REGISTRATION.

550. VAT and stamp duty land tax on assignments.

Where the residue of the term of a lease or the reversion to the lease is assigned or conveyed, a charge to VAT arises in certain circumstances<sup>1</sup>. An apportionment of rent between the assignee and the assignor does not, however, give rise to a charge to VAT<sup>2</sup>.

For the purposes of stamp duty land tax, in the case of an assignment of a lease<sup>3</sup> the assumption by the assignee of the obligation to pay rent<sup>4</sup>, or to perform or observe any other undertaking of the tenant under the lease, does not count as chargeable consideration for the assignment<sup>5</sup>. Nor does a reverse premium<sup>6</sup> on an assignment count as chargeable consideration<sup>7</sup>. Where, under arrangements made in connection with the assignment of a lease:

- 1123 (1) the assignee, or any person connected with him or acting on his behalf, pays a deposit, or makes a loan, to any person; and
- 1124 (2) the repayment of all or part of the deposit or loan is contingent on anything done or omitted to be done by the assignee or on the death of the assignee, the amount of the deposit or loan (disregarding any repayment) is, however, to be taken<sup>8</sup> to be consideration other than rent given for the assignment of the lease<sup>9</sup>; but this does not apply in relation to a deposit if the amount that would otherwise fall to be so treated in relation to the assignment of the lease is not more than twice the relevant maximum rent<sup>10</sup>.

Where the grant of a lease is exempt from charge by virtue of any of the specified statutory provisions<sup>11</sup>, the first assignment of the lease that is not exempt from charge by virtue of any of those provisions, and in relation to which the assignee does not acquire the lease as a bare trustee of the assignor, is treated for the purposes of stamp duty land tax as if it were the grant of a lease by the assignor:

- 1125 (a) for a term equal to the unexpired term of the lease referred to above; and
- 1126 (b) on the same terms as those on which the assignee holds that lease after the assignment<sup>12</sup>;

but this does not apply where the relief in question is group relief, reconstruction or acquisition relief or charities relief and is withdrawn as a result of a disqualifying event<sup>13</sup> occurring before the effective date of the assignment<sup>14</sup>. Except where the first assignment is so treated as a grant of a lease, where a lease is assigned, anything that but for the assignment would be required or authorised to be done by or in relation to the assignor under or by virtue of the statutory provisions relating to certain adjustments and returns<sup>15</sup> must, if the event giving rise to the adjustment or return occurs after the effective date of the assignment, be done instead by or in relation to the assignee<sup>16</sup>.

551. Assignment of part of land comprised in a lease.

Where in a conveyance for valuable consideration, other than a mortgage, made on or after 1 January 1926, of part of the land<sup>1</sup> comprised in a lease<sup>2</sup>, for the residue of the term or interest created by the lease, the rent<sup>3</sup> reserved by such a lease or a part thereof is, without the consent of the lessor<sup>4</sup>, expressed to be:

- 1127 (1) charged exclusively on the land conveyed or any part thereof in exoneration of the land retained by the assignor or other land; or
- 1128 (2) charged exclusively on the land retained by the assignor or any part thereof in exoneration of the land conveyed or other land; or
- 1129 (3) apportioned between the land conveyed or any part thereof and the land retained by the assignor or any part thereof, then, without prejudice to the rights of the lessor, such charge or apportionment is binding as between the assignor and the assignee under the conveyance and their respective successors in title<sup>5</sup>.

Where:

- 1130 (a) any default is made in payment of the whole or part of a rent by the person who, by reason of such charge or apportionment, is liable to pay the same; or
- 1131 (b) any breach occurs of any of the leases's<sup>6</sup> covenants, other than, in the case of an apportionment, the covenant to pay the entire rent, or conditions contained in the lease, so far as the same relate to land retained or conveyed, as the case may be, the lessee for the time being of any other land comprised in the lease, in whom, as respects that land, the residue of the term or interest created by the lease is vested, and who pays or is required to pay the whole or part of the rent which ought to have been paid by the defaulter or who incurs any costs, damages or expenses by reason of the breach of covenant or condition, may enter into and distrain on the land comprised in the lease in respect of which the default or breach is made or occurs, or any part of that land, and dispose according to law of any distress found. He may also take possession of the income of that land until, so long as the term or interest created by the lease is subsisting, by means of such distress and receipt of income or otherwise the whole or part of the rent, charged or apportioned as aforesaid, so unpaid, and all costs, damages and expenses incurred by reason of the non-payment thereof or of the breach of those covenants and conditions, are fully paid or satisfied<sup>7</sup>.

The remedies so conferred take effect so far only as they might have been conferred by the conveyance whereby the rent or any part of it is expressed to be so charged or apportioned; but a trustee, personal representative, mortgagee or other person in a fiduciary position has, and is deemed always to have had, power to confer the same or like remedies<sup>8</sup>; and those remedies apply only where the conveyance whereby the rent or any part thereof is expressly to be charged or apportioned is made after 31 December 1925 and do not apply where the rent is charged exclusively or legally apportioned with the consent of the owner or lessor<sup>9</sup>.

Assignment of part of the land comprised in the lease without the landlord's consent does not create two separate holdings with separate tenants for each holding<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

2 'Lease' includes an underlease or other tenancy: Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(xxiii).

3 For these purposes, 'rent' includes a rent service or a rentcharge, or other rent, toll, duty, royalty, or annual or periodical payment in money or money's worth, reserved or issuing out of or charged upon land, but does not include mortgage interest: ibid s 205(1)(xxiii).

4 For the meaning of 'lessor' see PARA 240 note 6 ante.

5 Law of Property Act 1925 s 190(3). Section 190(3) does not create a contract between the subsequent owners of the two parts: Whitham v Bullock [1939] 2 KB 81, [1939] 2 All ER 310, CA.

The Law of Property Act 1925 s 190 applies only if and in so far as a contrary intention is not expressed in the conveyance whereby the rent or any part thereof is expressed to be so charged or apportioned and takes effect subject to the terms of that conveyance and to the provisions therein contained: s 190(6).

The rule of law relating to perpetuities (see PERPETUITIES AND ACCUMULATIONS) does not affect the powers or remedies conferred by s 190 or any like powers or remedies expressly conferred, before, on or after 1 January 1926, by an instrument: s 190(8).

(3) ASSIGNMENT OF REVERSION

552. Form of transfer.

An assignment of the reversion on a lease must be by deed<sup>1</sup>. Under statute<sup>2</sup> where land<sup>3</sup> is subject to a lease the conveyance of a reversion in the land expectant on the determination of the lease is valid without any attornment<sup>4</sup> of the lessee<sup>5</sup>; but nothing in this provision:

- 1132 (1) affects the validity of any payment of rent by the lessee to the person making the conveyance before notice of the conveyance is given to him by the person entitled thereunder; or
- 1133 (2) renders the lessee liable for any breach of covenant to pay rent, on account of his failure to pay rent to the person entitled under the conveyance before such notice is given to the lessee<sup>6</sup>.

An attornment by the lessee in respect of any land to a person claiming to be entitled to the interest in the land of the lessor<sup>7</sup>, if made without the consent of the lessor, is void<sup>8</sup>.

1 See DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 14. This applies to the assignment of a reversion on a yearly tenancy: Brawley v Wade (1824) M'Cle 664.

2 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 151(1): see the text and notes 3-6 infra. Section 151 replaces the Administration of Justice Act 1705 ss 9, 10 (as amended by the Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 11). At common law attornment was necessary for a grant but not for a devise: see Shep Touch (8th Edn) 255-257; Littleton's Tenures s 586; Doe d Wright v Smith (1838) 8 Ad & El 255 at 260; Vigers v Dean and Chapter of St Paul's (1849) 14 QB 909 at 928, Ex Ch. The statute applies to all tenancies even though not created by deed: see the definition of 'lease' in the Law of Property Act 1925 s 154 (cited in PARA 145 note 1 ante).

3 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

4 'Attornment' means an acknowledgment by a person in occupation of land that some other person is his landlord: see PARA 3 ante.

It was held in Allcock v Moorhouse (1882) 9 QBD 366, CA (decided under the Administration of Justice Act 1705 s 9 (repealed)) that the statute did not give to the assignee of the reversion a right of action for rent against a yearly tenant by an oral grant who had parted with his estate in the premises. Notice of the grant was not necessary before ejectment for breach of covenant other than a covenant for payment of rent: Scaltock v Harston (1875) 1 CPD 106. Section 151(2) does not, however, apply to an attornment (1) made pursuant to a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction; or (2) to a mortgagee by a lessee holding under a lease from the mortgagor where the right of redemption is barred; or (3) to any other person rightfully deriving title under the lessor: s 151(2).

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(3) ASSIGNMENT OF REVERSION/553. Duty to notify tenant of assignment of reversion.

553. Duty to notify tenant of assignment of reversion.

If the interest of the landlord<sup>1</sup> under a tenancy<sup>2</sup> of premises which consist of or include a dwelling<sup>3</sup> is assigned<sup>4</sup>, the new landlord must give notice in writing of the assignment, and of his name and address<sup>5</sup>, to the tenant not later than the next day on which rent is payable under the tenancy or, if that is within two months of the assignment, the end of that period of two months<sup>6</sup>. A person who is the new landlord under such a tenancy and who fails without reasonable excuse to give the notice so required commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>7</sup>.

Where a new landlord is so required to give notice to a tenant of an assignment to him, then if:

- 1134 (1) the tenant is a qualifying tenant<sup>8</sup> within the meaning of the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 which confer a collective right of first refusal on the tenants of certain flats<sup>9</sup>; and
- 1135 (2) the assignment was a relevant disposal<sup>10</sup> within the meaning of those provisions affecting premises to which at the time of the disposal those provisions applied<sup>11</sup>, the landlord must also give notice in writing to the tenant to the following effect<sup>12</sup>. The notice must state:

- 1136 (a) that the disposal to the landlord was one to which the provisions referred to in head (1) above applied;
- 1137 (b) that the tenant, together with other qualifying tenants, may have the right under those provisions to obtain information about the disposal, and to acquire the landlord's interest in the whole or part of the premises in which the tenant's flat is situated; and
- 1138 (c) the time within which any such right must be exercised, and the fact that the time would run from the date of receipt of notice<sup>13</sup> by the requisite majority of qualifying tenants<sup>14</sup>.

A person who is so required to give notice and who fails, without reasonable excuse, to do so within the time allowed<sup>15</sup> commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>16</sup>.

The person who was the landlord under the tenancy immediately before the assignment ('the old landlord') is liable to the tenant in respect of any breach of any covenant, condition or agreement under the tenancy occurring before the end of the relevant period<sup>17</sup> in like manner as if the interest assigned were still vested in him; and, where the new landlord is also liable to the tenant in respect of any such breach occurring within that period, he and the old landlord are jointly and severally liable in respect of it<sup>18</sup>.

No duty is imposed by statute in respect of landlords who assign reversions on leases of premises not consisting of or including a dwelling; but, for the purposes of the provisions applying to business tenancies<sup>19</sup> and certain other tenancies<sup>20</sup>, service of notice by the tenant on the last person known by him to be the landlord is effective against the actual landlord if no notice has been given to the tenant of the assignment of the reversion<sup>21</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'tenancy' includes a statutory tenancy: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 3(4)(a). For the meanings of 'tenancy' generally, and 'statutory tenancy', see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

4 For these purposes, references to the assignment of the landlord's interest include any conveyance other than a mortgage or charge: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 3(4)(b).

5 For the meaning of 'address' see PARA 52 note 4 ante.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 3(1). If trustees constitute the new landlord, a collective description of the trustees as trustees of the trust in question may be given as the name of the landlord; and, where such a collective description is given (1) the address of the new landlord may be given as the address from which the affairs of the trust are conducted; and (2) a change in the persons who are for the time being the trustees of the trust is not to be treated as an assignment of the landlord's interest: s 3(2).

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(i) Introduction/554. Passing of benefit and burden; in general.

(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS

(i) Introduction

554. Passing of benefit and burden; in general.

It is a general principle of the law of contract that a contract cannot confer rights or impose obligations on persons who are not parties to the contract<sup>1</sup>, although the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 now enables a third party to enforce a term of certain contracts<sup>2</sup> in his own right if the contract expressly provides that he may or the term purports to confer a benefit on him<sup>3</sup>. A lease of land may, however, last for many years and the reversion and the term are normally freely transferable<sup>4</sup>. Consequently, it was necessary that covenants in leases should be enforceable between the successors in title of the original landlord and the tenant and this was achieved either under the doctrine of privity of estate<sup>5</sup>, by virtue of statute<sup>6</sup>, by express assignment<sup>7</sup> or by the rule that in equity the burden of a restrictive covenant may run with the land<sup>8</sup>.

The original parties to the lease might, however, remain liable to each other, even though their interest had passed to a successor in title, by virtue of the doctrine of privity of contract<sup>9</sup>. In particular, a former tenant might remain liable for breaches of the terms of a lease which he had assigned many years earlier. In 1988, the Law Commission recommended radical reform of the law in this area<sup>10</sup> and the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 now embodies many of the commission's proposals<sup>11</sup>. The 1995 Act distinguishes between 'new tenancies', which are tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>12</sup>, and other tenancies. The majority of its provisions<sup>13</sup> apply only to new tenancies<sup>14</sup>; but the provisions restricting the liability of the former tenant or his guarantor for rent or service charge on assignment or subsequent variation of the lease<sup>15</sup> apply to both new and other tenancies<sup>16</sup>. Those provisions with regard to rent or service charge have already been discussed<sup>17</sup> and the provisions of the 1995 Act with regard to the benefits and burdens of other landlord and tenant covenants are discussed below<sup>18</sup>. In relation to tenancies granted before 1 January 1996, or granted on or after that date in pursuance of an agreement entered into, or an order of a court made, before that date<sup>19</sup>, the relevant rules contained in the Law of Property Act 1925 with regard to the benefits and burdens of other landlord and tenant covenants<sup>20</sup> and the common law rules so far as not superseded by the 1925 Act, continue to apply as discussed in the following paragraphs<sup>21</sup>.

1 See CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 748; and see eg Scruttons Ltd v Midland Silicones Ltd [1962] AC 446, [1962] 1 All ER 1, HL; Beswick v Beswick [1968] AC 58, [1967] 2 All ER 1197, HL.

2 For exceptions see the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 s 6 (as amended); and CONTRACT.

3 See ibid s 1(1). As to the conditions to which this right is subject see s 1(2)-(6); and CONTRACT.

4 The term is freely transferable unless the tenant has bargained away his freedom of alienation, whereas a licensee has a purely personal right: see PARA 6 et seq ante.

5 The resolutions in Spencer's Case (1583) 5 Co Rep 16a (see PARA 559 post) are the basis of the common law doctrine. 'Privity of estate' simply means that at the relevant time the parties stand in the relation of landlord and tenant. Thus, before any assignment of the lease or of the reversion there is privity of contract and privity of estate between the original landlord and the original tenant. If the reversion is assigned to A and the lease to B, there is privity of estate between A and B as long as the two interests are vested in them. If B assigns the lease to C, privity of estate ends between A and B and commences between A and C. There is, however, no privity of estate as between the assignor and assignee of a lease: see Whitham v Bullock [1939] 2 KB 81, [1939] 2 All ER 310, CA.

6 Ie by virtue of the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 141, 142: see PARAS 567, 571 post.

7 An example is a tenant's option to purchase the freehold reversion, which is collateral in the above sense and thus does not automatically pass to an assignee of the lease: Woodall v Clifton [1905] 2 Ch 257. The benefit of the option may be expressly assigned to the assignee; and the circumstances may be such that an assignment of the lease operates as an assignment of the benefit of the option even without express mention: see eg Griffith v Pelton [1958] Ch 205, [1957] 3 All ER 75, CA. See also PARA 135 ante.

8 See Tulk v Moxhay (1848) 2 Ph 774; EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 615; and PARA 565 post. At common law the general rule is that the burden of covenants never runs with the land: Austerberry v Oldham Corpn (1885) 29 ChD 750, CA. The relationship of landlord and tenant may be regarded as an exception to this rule: see Austerberry v Oldham Corpn supra at 781. ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(i) Introduction/555. Passing on severance of the reversion.

555. Passing on severance of the reversion.

The reversion may be divided as regards either the estate or the land. The reversion is divided as regards the estate where the reversioner grants a new lease which is subject to the existing lease, that is a lease of the reversion; and is divided as regards the land where the reversion in a part of the land becomes vested in one person and the reversion in another part becomes vested in another person. Severance of the reversion and of the incidents attached to the reversion does not sever the tenancy into two tenancies; there remains one single tenancy after the severance<sup>1</sup>. An assignment of the reversion to a bare trustee or nominee for the landlord does not, however, effect a severance<sup>2</sup>.

Where the reversion is divided as regards the estate, different statutory rules apply depending on whether or not the tenancy is a 'new tenancy' for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>3</sup>.

Where the reversion is divided as regards the land, at common law rent was apportionable between the two reversioners in proportion to the value of the respective areas of land<sup>4</sup> and the benefit and burden of covenants passed so far as they concerned the part of the reversion transferred<sup>5</sup>. The benefit of a condition, as opposed to a covenant, was not severable and did not pass to an assignee of a part<sup>6</sup>; but that rule has now been changed by statute.

Notwithstanding the severance by conveyance, surrender or otherwise of the reversionary estate in any land<sup>7</sup> comprised in a lease<sup>8</sup> (so that the reversion in one part vests in one person and the reversion in another part vests in another person) and notwithstanding the avoidance or cesser in any other manner of the term granted by a lease as to part only of the land comprised therein, every condition or right of re-entry<sup>9</sup>, and every other condition contained in the lease<sup>10</sup>, is apportioned and remains annexed to the severed parts of the reversionary estate as severed and is in force with respect to the term whereon each severed part is reversionary, or the term in the part of the land as to which the term has not been surrendered or has not been avoided or has not otherwise ceased, in like manner as if the land comprised in each severed part, or the land as to which the term remains subsisting, as the case may be, had alone originally been comprised in the lease<sup>11</sup>.

7 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

8 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 145 note 1 ante.

9 For these purposes, 'right of re-entry' includes a right to determine the lease by notice to quit or otherwise; but, where the notice is served by a person entitled to a severed part of the reversion so that it extends to part only of the land demised, the lessee may within one month determine the lease in regard to the rest of the land by giving to the owner of the reversionary estate therein a counter-notice expiring at the same time as the original notice: Law of Property Act 1925 s 140(2) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1948 ss 98, 100(1), Sch 8), overruling on this matter Re Bebington's Tenancy, Bebington v Wildman [1921] 1 Ch 559. For the meaning of 'lessee' see PARA 145 note 3 ante.

10 The right to give a notice determining a tenancy of business premises under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 716 post) is not a condition or right of re-entry contained in the lease and thus cannot be apportioned under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 140 (as amended): Dodson Bull Carpet Co Ltd v City of London Corpn [1975] 2 All ER 497, [1975] 1 WLR 781.

11 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 140(1). Section 140 (as amended) applies to leases made before, on or after 1 January 1926 and whether the severance of the reversionary estate or the partial avoidance or cesser of the term was effected before, on or after that date; but, where the lease was made before 1 January 1882, nothing in s 140 affects the operation of a severance of the reversionary estate or partial avoidance or cesser of the term which was effected before 1 January 1926: s 140(3). Section 140 (as amended) applies whether or not the tenancy is a new tenancy for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995. For the meaning of 'new tenancy' for those purposes see PARA 578 post.

(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996

A. RIGHTS OF THE ORIGINAL PARTIES TO THE LEASE

556. Rights and obligations of the landlord; the position at common law.

Privity of contract remains between the original landlord and the original tenant even after the assignment of the lease. Consequently, the liability of the original tenant to the original landlord continues notwithstanding that the lease has been assigned and notwithstanding that the original landlord has a remedy against the assignee for the rent and on the covenants running with the land and notwithstanding a surrender of part of the demised premises or a variation in the terms of the lease agreed between the landlord and the assignee<sup>1</sup> in respect of the period for which the assignee holds the term<sup>2</sup>. Where a lease had been assigned and the liquidator or trustee in bankruptcy of the assignee disclaims the lease, the original lessee remained liable to pay the rent throughout the term<sup>3</sup>. The remedy as against the original lessee is founded on privity of contract, the remedy as against the assignee on privity of estate. Where a lease contains an option to renew the lease, the exercise of the option ordinarily involves the creation of a new lease<sup>4</sup>, and as regards the new lease there is no privity of contract between the landlord and the original tenant under the old lease which contained the option to renew; but the right given to a tenant may be simply to extend the term, in which case privity of contract endures between the original parties, even during the extended term<sup>5</sup>. The original landlord may sue either the original tenant or the assignee or both at the same time; but he may obtain only one satisfaction<sup>6</sup>. Furthermore, if by an accord and satisfaction<sup>7</sup> the landlord releases the assignee, the original tenant is also released, at least where the landlord does not expressly reserve his rights against the original tenant and make it clear that it is only the assignee whom he intends to release<sup>8</sup>. The release of a surety does not, however, operate to release the tenant<sup>9</sup>. Once the original landlord has transferred the reversion, the right to recover rent and to enforce covenants which refer to the subject matter of the lease passes to the transferee<sup>10</sup>, even as against the original tenant, and the transferee alone may then sue on the covenants in the lease<sup>11</sup>.

Where there have been successive assignments of a lease and the landlord sues the original tenant under his covenant to pay the rent for the remainder of the term because the present tenant is insolvent, the original tenant may not compel an intermediate tenant to sue his successor who is solvent forcing him to pay the rent to the landlord. Nor may the intermediate tenant be compelled to assign the benefit of his covenant to the original tenant<sup>12</sup>.

The operation of these common law rules is now tempered by statute<sup>13</sup>.

OF COVENANTS/(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996/A. RIGHTS OF THE ORIGINAL PARTIES TO THE LEASE/557. Rights of the original tenant.

557. Rights of the original tenant.

The transfer of the reversion does not affect the privity of contract between the original landlord and the original tenant. Consequently, the original tenant may enforce the covenants in the lease against the original landlord, even though the reversion has been transferred and even though he may also be able to enforce the covenants against the transferee<sup>1</sup>. If the lease is assigned, the contractual rights pass to the assignee, and it is the assignee and not the original tenant who may then sue the original landlord<sup>2</sup>. Even after the assignment of the term, however, the original tenant may sue the landlord for loss suffered as a result of breaches of the landlord's covenants before the assignment<sup>3</sup>.

558. Statutory restriction on former tenant's liability for rent or service charge etc.

In the case of a tenancy granted before 1 January 1996<sup>1</sup>, the former tenant is now only liable to pay rent after an assignment<sup>2</sup>, or to pay any service charge or any amount payable in the event of failure to comply with a tenant covenant<sup>3</sup> after an assignment, if the landlord satisfies the statutory notice conditions<sup>4</sup>. Where the former tenant then makes full payment he has the right to be granted an overriding lease<sup>5</sup>.

The former tenant's liability is also restricted by statute where the tenant covenants of the tenancy are varied after assignment<sup>6</sup>.

1 I.e. a tenancy which is not a 'new tenancy' for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995. For the meaning of 'new tenancy' see PARA 578 post.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996/B. ASSIGNMENT OF THE LEASE/559. Burden of tenant's covenants: in general.

B. ASSIGNMENT OF THE LEASE

559. Burden of tenant's covenants: in general.

Whether the burden of a covenant by the tenant runs with the land depends partly upon the nature and partly upon the form of the covenant. As regards its nature, the covenant may concern the land itself or something already in existence on the land, in either of which cases it concerns a thing in being; or, although directly relating to the land, it may concern something only contemplated to be brought into existence; or it may not in strictness concern the land at all, in which case it is said to be collateral.

In order to ascertain whether a covenant has reference to the subject matter of the lease<sup>1</sup> a satisfactory working test is that the relevant covenant will be so regarded if:

- 1139 (1) the covenant benefits only the reversioner for the time being and, if separated from the reversion, ceases to be of benefit to the covenantee;
- 1140 (2) the covenant affects the nature, quality, mode of user or value of the land of the reversioner;
- 1141 (3) the covenant is not expressed to be personal, that is to say neither being given only to a specific reversioner nor in respect of the obligations only of a specific tenant.

The fact that a covenant is to pay a sum of money does not prevent it from touching and concerning the land so long as the conditions in heads (1) to (3) above are satisfied and the covenant is connected with something to be done on, to or in relation to the land<sup>2</sup>.

As regards the form of the covenant, it may be entered into by the tenant for himself, or for himself and his personal representatives only; or it may purport expressly to bind his assigns. The following rules, which apply also to leases of incorporeal hereditaments<sup>3</sup>, govern these cases<sup>4</sup>:

- 1142 (a) where the covenant relates to a thing in being, and directly concerns the land, it binds the assigns, whether named or not<sup>5</sup>;
- 1143 (b) a covenant made before 1 January 1926, where it relates to a thing not yet in being and directly concerns the land, binds the assigns if they are named, but not otherwise<sup>6</sup>; a covenant made on or after that date binds the assigns unless a contrary intention is expressed<sup>7</sup>;
- 1144 (c) where the covenant does not touch or concern the land, but is merely collateral, it does not bind the assigns but is a personal covenant only; it cannot, therefore, be made to run with the land<sup>8</sup>.

If, in accordance with the above rules, the burden of a covenant has not passed to the assignee, the landlord may not enforce the covenant by proceedings for an injunction or damages against the assignee. It is possible that the landlord may still be able to forfeit the lease on a breach of the covenant by the assignee<sup>9</sup>.

1 The words 'has reference to the subject matter of the lease' are the modern phraseology used by statute (see the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 141, 142) in place of the traditional phrase 'touch and concern the land' (Spencer's Case (1583) 5 Co Rep 16a). The two expressions have the same meaning and effect: see Davis v Town Properties Investment Corp'n Ltd [1903] 1 Ch 797 at 805, CA, per Cozens-Hardy LJ (referring to the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 11 (repealed) and the words 'with reference to the subject matter of the lease').

5 First resolution in Spencer's Case (1583) 5 Co Rep 16a. According to the words of the resolution the thing must be parcel of the demise, but it is sufficient if it directly concerns the land: see Lyle v Smith [1909] 2 IR 58. Of this nature are covenants to pay rent (Parker v Webb (1693) 3 Salk 5; Stevenson v Lambard (1802) 2 East 575 at 580; Williams v Bosanquet (1819) 1 Brod & Bing 238), to render services in the nature of rent (Vyvyan v Arthur (1823) 1 B & C 410; and see Keppell v Bailey (1834) 2 My & K 517 at 541), to allow deductions out of rent (Baylye v Hughes (1628) Cro Car 137), to repair or to leave in repair houses already built (Matures v Westwood (1598) Cro Eliz 599; Dean and Chapter of Windsor v Hyde (1601) 5 Co Rep 24a; Wakefield v Brown (1846) 9 QB 209 at 223; Martyn v Clue (1852) 18 QB 661), to spend a certain sum annually on repairs, or pay the difference between that sum and the sum actually spent (Moss' Empires Ltd v Olympia (Liverpool) Ltd [1939] AC 544, [1939] 3 All ER 460, HL), to pay a fixed sum towards redecoration in lieu of damages for fair wear and tear (Boyer v Warbey [1953] 1 QB 234, [1953] 1 All ER 269, CA), to repair and renew fixtures already affixed to the premises (Williams v Earle (1868) LR 3 QB 739), to insure against fire (Vernon v Smith (1821) 5 B & Ald 1; and see PARA 532 ante), to use the premises as a private dwelling house only (Wilkinson v Rogers (1864) 2 De GJ & Sm 62), to reside upon them during the demise (Tatem v Chaplin (1793) 2 Hy Bl 133), to pay a sum as liquidated damages for breach of a covenant which ran with the land (Lord Howard de Walden v Barber (1903) 19 TLR 183), not to assign without the consent of the landlord (see PARA 564 post), that a named person should not be concerned in the business carried on from the demised premises (Lewin v American and Colonial Distributors Ltd [1945] Ch 225, [1945] 1 All ER 592; affd on appeal [1945] Ch 225 at 236, [1945] 2 All ER 271n, CA), in a lease of a public house, a covenant to conduct the house properly (Fleetwood v Hull (1889) 23 QBD 35), and to buy liquor from the landlord (Clegg v Hands (1890) 44 ChD 503, CA; White v Southend Hotel Co [1897] 1 Ch 767, CA; and see PARAS 544, 546 ante), in a lease of a petrol filling station created by an attornment clause, to take all oil and petrol supplies from the landlord (Regent Oil Co Ltd v JA Gregory (Hatch End) Ltd [1966] Ch 402, [1965] 3 All ER 673, CA), in an agricultural lease, to manure (Sale v Kitchingham (1713) 10 Mod Rep 158), and not to plough more than a certain quantity of land (Cockson v Cock (1607) Cro Jac 125), in a mining lease, to pay compensation for damage done to the surface (Norval v Pascoe (1864) 34 LJ Ch 82; Dyson v Forster, Dyson v Seed, Quinn, Morgan etc [1909] AC 98, HL; and see MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 198), in a sporting lease, to leave the land well stocked with game (Hooper v Clark (1867) LR 2 QB 200), and in a lease of land near the sea, to maintain a sea wall though not parcel of the demised premises (Lyle v Smith supra).

6 Second resolution in Spencer's Case (1583) 5 Co Rep 16a. For this rule to apply, the tenant must have expressly covenanted for himself and for his assigns, and the covenant, while relating to a thing in the future, must directly touch or concern the thing demised: Spencer's Case supra; Congleton Corp'n v Pattison (1808) 10 East 130 at 135; Doughty v Bowman (1848) 11 QB 444 at 454; Thomas v Hayward (1869) LR 4 Exch 311. The distinction between covenants relating to a thing in being and a thing in the future rests on no intelligible basis and was questioned in Minshull v Oakes (1858) 2 H & N 793. The substance of the distinction between things in being and things in the future is that things in being comprise things that are in existence at the date of the lease, eg existing buildings, and things in the future comprise things not then in existence, eg buildings which are to be erected by the lessee. Covenants relating to things in the future are: a covenant to erect new buildings (Spencer's Case supra; Doughty v Bowman supra), at the end of the term to deliver up at valuation fruit trees then growing (Grey v Cuthbertson (1785) 2 Chit 482), and in a colliery lease, to convey, upon a railway to be made on the demised land, all coal got from a certain colliery (Hemingway v Fernandes (1842) 13 Sim 228). Although the thing in the future is to be done off the land, the covenant is treated as directly concerning the land if the thing to be done tends to the maintenance of the demised premises, such as a covenant in a mining lease to build a smelting mill on adjacent waste land not included in the demise: Sampson v Easterby (1829) 9 B & C 505 at 516 (affd sub nom Easterby v Sampson (1830) 6 Bing 644, Ex Ch); Bally v Wells (1769) 3 Wils 25; Lyle v Smith [1909] 2 IR 58; cf Dewar v Goodman [1909] AC 72 at 77, HL. As to covenants not to assign without the consent of the landlord see PARA 564 post.

Of this nature are the following covenants: to pay to the landlord or a stranger a collateral sum, that is, a sum not reserved as rent (Mayho v Buckhurst (1617) Cro Jac 438; Earl Inchiquin v Burnell (1795) 3 Ridg Parl Rep 376; Lambert v Norris (1837) 2 M & W 333; Flight v Glossopp (1835) 2 Bing NC 125); to pay taxes on premises not included in the demise (Gower v Postmaster General (1887) 57 LT 527); to build a house upon other land of the landlord (Spencer's Case supra), the house not being immediately required for the purposes of the demised premises (Sampson v Easterby (1829) 9 B & C 505 at 516); to repair and renew chattels (Williams v Earle (1868) LR 3 QB 739; Gorton v Gregory (1862) 3 B & S 90); not to employ a certain class of persons on the premises (Congleton Corp v Pattison (1808) 10 East 130; Walsh v Fussell (1829) 6 Bing 163); a condition of re-entry on conviction of the tenant for an offence against the game laws (Stevens v Copp (1868) LR 4 Exch 20); and, in a lease of a public house, not to keep a public house within half a mile of the demised premises (Thomas v Hayward (1869) 38 LJ Ex 175 at 176).

9 Most leases contain a right of re-entry exercisable by the landlord on breach of covenant. A right of re-entry is an interest in land (see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 1(2)(e); and REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 45) and the owner of it may exercise the right even though he is not entitled to enforce the covenant on the breach of which the right becomes exercisable: Shiloh Spinners Ltd v Harding [1973] AC 691, [1973] 1 All ER 90, HL; cf Horsey Estate Ltd v Steiger [1899] 2 QB 79 at 88-89, CA, per Lord Russell CJ (where, however, the covenant in issue was one of which the burden did pass to the assignee). If the landlord can indeed obtain forfeiture of the lease for breaches by an assignee of even collateral covenants, then in practice such covenants become in reality enforceable as the alternative of losing his lease will generally persuade the assignee to comply with the covenant. Somewhat similar questions arise with regard to the exercise of rights of re-entry by transferees of the reversion: see PARA 567 note 7 post; and see Stevens v Copp (1868) LR 4 Exch 20. As to forfeiture generally see PARA 603 et seq post.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996/B. ASSIGNMENT OF THE LEASE/560. Form of lease.

560. Form of lease.

The ordinary principles relating to the transfer of the burden of the tenant's covenants to an assignee apply to leases by deed and to leases in writing but not by deed<sup>1</sup>. The same principles probably apply to mere oral leases<sup>2</sup>. The assignment of the benefit of a specifically enforceable agreement for a lease does not transfer the burden of the tenant's covenants to the assignee<sup>3</sup>. Even where the burden of covenants is not enforceable against an assignee by reason of privity of estate, then, if the assignee goes into possession and rent is paid and accepted, a new agreement or new lease generally arises by implication in his favour, and the covenants may be enforced against him by reason of privity of contract under this new relationship<sup>4</sup>.

1 It was at one time said that, for these principles to apply, the lease had to be by deed: see Elliott v Johnson (1866) LR 2 QB 120 at 127. It is now settled that the same principles apply to a lease under hand: Boyer v Warbey [1953] 1 QB 234, [1953] 1 All ER 269, CA (lease for three years in writing). As to when leases may validly be granted otherwise than by deed see PARA 101 ante.

2 Elliott v Johnson (1866) LR 2 QB 120 was a decision concerning an oral agreement, and is now to be regarded as overruled by Boyer v Warbey [1953] 1 QB 234, [1953] 1 All ER 269, CA. In practice oral leases are rarely assigned. The practical difficulty is that there is no written record of the terms of the lease.

3 Marquis of Camden v Batterbury (1860) 7 CBNS 864; Purchase v Lichfield Brewery Co [1915] 1 KB 184. There is no privity of estate between the landlord and the assignee. This rule is one of the instances in which an agreement for a lease is not as satisfactory as an actual lease notwithstanding the equitable doctrine of Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 ChD 9, CA (see PARA 76 ante). There are dicta of Denning LJ in Boyer v Warbey [1953] 1 QB 234 at 246, [1953] 1 All ER 269 at 274, CA, to the effect that since the fusion of law and equity the burden of covenants does pass to an assignee, even though there is only an agreement for a lease. It is possible that the burden may pass to an assignee of the agreement who has taken possession: see Purchase v Lichfield Brewery Co supra at 188 per Lush J, expressly leaving open this point.

561. Persons liable as assignees.

The liability of an assignee arises on the mere assignment of the legal estate in the demised premises, even though the assignee has not entered<sup>1</sup>. The assignee is liable, however, on the covenants only where he has taken a legal assignment of the entire residue of the term<sup>2</sup>, or where he has estopped himself from denying such an assignment, as, for example, where he has gone into possession and paid the rent reserved by the lease<sup>3</sup>. An equitable assignee, therefore, whether under an agreement for an assignment<sup>4</sup> or as equitable mortgagee<sup>5</sup>, is not liable, notwithstanding that he has entered into possession. A person who gains a title by adverse possession as against the tenant under the Limitation Act 1980 is not an assignee so as to be liable at law on the covenants in the lease<sup>6</sup>. A person who takes the legal estate by assignment is, however, liable on the covenants, even though he takes as trustee and has not entered into possession<sup>7</sup>; and the person equitably interested is not liable<sup>8</sup>. A trustee under a creditor's deed which contains a general assignment of personal estate is liable on the covenants incident to the debtor's leasehold property<sup>9</sup>, unless the leaseholds are expressly excluded<sup>10</sup>, or unless the general words of assignment are not suitable to include leaseholds<sup>11</sup>. An assignment of the demised premises to co-owners renders each co-owner fully liable for the rent and the covenants of the lease<sup>12</sup>.

562. Assignment of part.

An assignee of a part of the premises comprised in the lease is liable to the landlord for a proportion only of the rent reserved<sup>1</sup>. Nevertheless, the landlord may distrain on any part of the demised premises for the rent of the whole<sup>2</sup>. If the assignee of part pays the whole of the rent in order to avoid distress, he is entitled to recover from the tenant of the remainder of the demised premises the latter's due proportion of the rent<sup>3</sup>. The assignee of part is also liable on every other covenant running with the land and affecting the part of the premises assigned to him<sup>4</sup>.

The assignment of part of the premises comprised in the lease without the landlord's consent does not create two separate holdings with separate tenants for each holding<sup>5</sup>.

The point was left open in Whitham v Bullock [1939] 2 KB 81, [1939] 2 All ER 310, CA. The apportionment may be made (1) by the agreement of the parties, although a person not a party to the agreement will not be bound by it (see Bliss v Collins (1822) 5 B & Ald 876); (2) by the court (see Bliss v Collins supra; Whitham v Bullock supra at 86 and at 315); (3) by the Secretary of State or the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister on an application under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 20 (as amended) (see PARA 281 ante).

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996/B. ASSIGNMENT OF THE LEASE/563. Liability of assignee after further assignment.

563. Liability of assignee after further assignment.

Since the liability of the assignee of a lease depends on privity of estate, such liability ceases as soon as the assignee further assigns the land except as regards rent accrued due and breaches of covenant committed prior to the assignment and while the lease was vested in him<sup>1</sup>; and the assignee is entitled to avail himself of this principle in order to escape liability even though the new assignee is a person of no substance<sup>2</sup>. An assignee is also not liable for breaches of covenant which occurred before the assignment to him<sup>3</sup>. No notice to, or consent of, the landlord is required<sup>4</sup>; and the assignee's liability is terminated by the assignment even if the new assignee does not take possession<sup>5</sup>. A further assignment of this nature may be made by a trustee in bankruptcy<sup>6</sup>. The assignment must, however, be a real assignment<sup>7</sup>, and is ineffectual to terminate the liability of the assignee if the new assignee is merely his agent<sup>8</sup>; but the assignee remains liable throughout the term if he enters into a direct covenant with the landlord to pay the rent and observe the covenants during the remainder of the term<sup>9</sup>, or if he enters into a similar covenant with the tenant and the tenant assigns the benefit of it to the landlord<sup>10</sup>.

564. Covenant against assignment without consent.

A covenant against assignment without the landlord's consent<sup>1</sup> is a covenant which runs with the land and binds assigns whether mentioned<sup>2</sup> or not<sup>3</sup>, unless the parties indicate a contrary intention<sup>4</sup>. The covenant binds personal representatives<sup>5</sup> and voluntary assigns inter vivos. Whether or not the covenant binds the tenant's trustee in bankruptcy depends on the words of the covenant. A trustee in bankruptcy is not an assignee of the tenant<sup>6</sup> and, therefore, is not bound by a covenant which applies only to assigns; but a trustee in bankruptcy is a successor in title of the tenant and is bound by any covenant which is expressed to be binding on such a successor in title<sup>7</sup>. An execution creditor is in the same position as a trustee in bankruptcy<sup>8</sup>. The covenant does not bind an undertenant<sup>9</sup>; but the head landlord may enforce a covenant in an underlease against assignment without the head landlord's consent<sup>10</sup>. An absolute covenant against assignment is also a covenant which runs with the land and binds assigns<sup>11</sup>.

Liability to observe restrictive covenants binding in equity.

565. Liability to observe restrictive covenants binding in equity.

Where the lease was made before 1 January 1926, a tenant and his successors in title and assigns are bound by a restrictive covenant which binds the reversion and was imposed before the date of the lease, provided that the tenant would have had notice of the covenant if he had investigated the reversioner's title<sup>1</sup>. Where the lease was made after 31 December 1925, a restrictive covenant imposed before 1 January 1926 and binding on the reversion at the date of the lease is binding on the tenant only if at the date of the lease he had actual notice of the covenant<sup>2</sup>. Where the lease was made after 31 December 1925, a restrictive covenant imposed after that date and binding on the reversion at the date of the lease is binding on the tenant only if, before the execution of the lease, the covenant was registered as a land charge in the case of unregistered land<sup>3</sup>, or noted on the register in the case of registered land<sup>4</sup>.

A subtenant is bound by restrictive covenants contained in a superior lease which would have been disclosed if he had investigated his landlord's title<sup>5</sup>; but he is not bound by restrictions affecting any leasehold reversion if he had no right to call for the title to that reversion, unless he had actual notice of such restrictions<sup>6</sup>.

A tenant may enter into a restrictive covenant with some person other than the landlord, and the covenant will be enforced in equity in the same way as a covenant between freeholders<sup>7</sup>.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996/B. ASSIGNMENT OF THE LEASE/566. Benefit of landlord's covenants.

566. Benefit of landlord's covenants.

The benefit of a covenant by the landlord runs with the land in favour of the tenant's assigns, provided that the covenant is one which touches and concerns the land<sup>1</sup>. Most of the principles which govern the passing of the burden of covenants apply also to the passing of the benefit<sup>2</sup>. Even if the benefit of a covenant does not pass automatically under the doctrine of privity of estate, it may be transferred to an assignee by express assignment<sup>3</sup>.

1 See Spencer's Case (1583) 5 Co Rep 16a, resolution 4 (covenant for quiet enjoyment), resolution 6 (covenant to repair house during the term). For examples of covenants which do and which do not touch and concern the land see PARA 571 note 2 post. A covenant relating to any land of the covenantee is deemed to be made with the covenantee and his successors in title and the persons deriving title under him or them, and has effect as if those successors and other persons were expressed: Law of Property Act 1925 s 78(1); and see Federated Homes Ltd v Mill Lodge Properties Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 371, [1980] 1 WLR 594, CA; and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 618. Even after assignment of the term, however, the original tenant may sue the landlord for loss suffered as a result of breaches of the landlord's covenants before the assignment: City and Metropolitan Properties Ltd v Greycroft Ltd [1987] 3 All ER 839, [1987] 1 WLR 1085. A covenant by the landlord to return to the tenant at the end of the term a security deposit does not touch and concern the land: Hua Chiao Commercial Bank Ltd v Chiaphua Industries Ltd [1987] AC 99, [1987] 1 All ER 1110, PC.

2 As to these principles see PARA 559 et seq ante. For example, a squatter may not sue on the covenants in a lease: see Tichbourne v Weir (1892) 67 LT 735, CA; and PARA 561 ante. An assignee of a part of the land is entitled to the benefit of a covenant in so far as it affects the part assigned: see Simpson v Clayton (1838) 4 Bing NC 758 at 781; and PARA 562 ante. The assignee is entitled to enforce the covenants only while the lease is vested in him: see PARA 563 ante. Just as the burden of obligations now passes to the assignee of a lease under hand and not by deed, and perhaps to the assignee of an oral lease (see Boyer v Warbey [1953] 1 QB 234, [1953] 1 All ER 269, CA; and PARA 560 ante), so presumably the benefit of obligations passes to an assignee of a lease not by deed. As regards the benefit of agreements for leases, this may pass to assignees on the general principle that the benefit of a contract may be assigned: see note 3 infra.

3 In this respect there is an important distinction between the burden and the benefit of tenant's covenants. The burden may not be transferred by ordinary assignment and so its passing to an assignee is dependent upon privity of estate. The benefit may be so transferred: see PARA 554 note 7 ante. For an example of the benefit of an option to purchase passing by an assignment of a lease without any express mention in the assignment see Griffith v Pelton [1958] Ch 205, [1957] 3 All ER 75, CA; and see Re Button's Lease, Inman v Button [1964] Ch 263, [1963] 3 All ER 708.

Benefit of tenant's covenants runs with reversion.

C. TRANSFER OF THE REVERSION

567. Benefit of tenant's covenants runs with reversion.

At common law the benefit of the tenant's covenants did not run with the reversion, except in the case of covenants for payment of rent, or the rendering of services in the nature of rent<sup>1</sup>; but under statute<sup>2</sup> rent<sup>3</sup> reserved by a lease<sup>4</sup>, and the benefit of every covenant or provision therein contained having reference to the subject matter thereof<sup>5</sup> and on the lessee's<sup>6</sup> part to be observed or performed, and every condition of re-entry<sup>7</sup> and other condition therein contained, is annexed and incident to and goes with the reversionary estate in the land<sup>8</sup>, or in any part thereof, immediately expectant on the term granted by the lease, notwithstanding severance of that reversionary estate and without prejudice to any liability affecting a covenantor or his estate<sup>9</sup>. Any such rent, covenant or provision<sup>10</sup> is capable of being recovered, received, enforced and taken advantage of by the person from time to time entitled, subject to the term, to the income of the whole or any part, as the case may require, of the land leased<sup>11</sup>. Where that person becomes entitled by conveyance or otherwise, such rent, covenant or provision may be recovered, received, enforced or taken advantage of by him notwithstanding that he becomes so entitled after the condition of re-entry or forfeiture has become enforceable<sup>12</sup>. Notwithstanding the above provisions a beneficiary may not distrain or sue for rent under a lease where the legal estate in the reversion is held by trustees<sup>13</sup>.

1 Vyvyan v Arthur (1823) 1 B & C 410; Bickford v Parson (1848) 5 CB 920 at 931; Harper v Burgh (1677) 2 Lev 206. Such covenants were said to be implied or an inherent incident of the relationship of landlord and tenant.

2 The Law of Property Act 1925 s 141, which replaces 32 Hen 8 c 34 (Grantees of Reversions) (1540) s 1; the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 10 and the Conveyancing Act 1911 s 2, all of which are repealed. The 1540 Act was passed on the dissolution of the monasteries in order to preserve the remedies on leases of their forfeited land but, although primarily designed for the benefit of grantees from the Crown, it was made to apply to grantees of reversions generally: see Co Litt 215a, resolutions. The rule as to covenants running with the reversion therefore preceded the common law rule that covenants ran with the lease which arose under Spencer's Case (1583) 5 Co Rep 16a: see PARA 559 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'rent' see PARA 551 note 3 ante.

4 Where the owner in fee demised to a railway company for a term of years a wayleave with the right to make and use a railway reserving to himself, his heirs and assigns a periodical payment on goods carried over the land and certain other parts of the company's railway, it was held that the assignee of the owner in fee could recover amounts payable in respect of goods carried over such parts of the company's railway: Lord Hastings v North Eastern Rly Co [1898] 2 Ch 674; affd sub nom North Eastern Rly Co v Lord Hastings [1900] AC 260, HL; cf Earl of Portmore v Bunn (1823) 1 B & C 694. For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 145 note 1 ante.

5 These words are equivalent to 'which touch and concern the land', within the rules stated in PARA 556 et seq ante, and do not alter the class of covenants which run with the reversion: Davis v Town Properties Investment Corp Ltd [1903] 1 Ch 797, CA; Barnes v City of London Real Property Co [1918] 2 Ch 18 at 33; Breams Property Investment Co Ltd v Stroulger [1948] 2 KB 1, [1948] 1 All ER 758, CA. The requirement that the covenant should touch and concern the land was not stated in 32 Hen 8 c 34 (Grantees of Reversions) (1540) s 1 (repealed) but arose from the application of that statute by the courts. A covenant by the tenant of a public house to take liquor from the landlord is of this nature (Fleetwood v Hull (1889) 23 QBD 35); and also a covenant in an agricultural lease against selling hay and manure off the farm (Chapman v Smith [1907] 2 Ch 97); and apparently a provision for resumption of possession (Kennedy v Liddy (1867) 15 WR 431); so also is a covenant in a lease of mines not to let down the surface and to pay compensation for damage done (Westhoughton UDC v Wigan Coal and Iron Co Ltd [1919] 1 Ch 159, CA). See also Wagstaff v Clinton (1883) Cab & El 45 (covenant by agricultural tenant to a valuation of tenant right on quitting equal to incoming valuations; enures for benefit of subsequent landlord). A covenant to pay a premium for the grant of a lease is a personal obligation and not a covenant or provision having reference to the land. Thus, where the freehold reversion was sold by the mortgagee under his power of sale to the tenant, the obligation to pay the premium was held not to have been destroyed: Hill v Booth [1930] 1 KB 381, CA.

6 For the meaning of 'lessee' see PARA 145 note 3 ante.

7 It is not clear whether, under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(1), an assignee of the reversion may enforce a right of re-entry even in respect of a breach of covenant which does not touch and concern the land. The wording of the statute appears to confine the requirement of having reference to the subject matter of the lease to covenants as opposed to rights of re-entry. There is now the general authority of the House of Lords for the proposition that a person may exercise a right of re-entry arising on a breach of covenant even though he cannot otherwise enforce the covenant (see Shiloh Spinners Ltd v Harding [1973] AC 691, [1973] 1 All ER 90, HL), so that the fact that the benefit of the covenant does not pass is not decisive of the question. There is authority for the view that the right of re-entry is exercisable only where the covenant broken touched and concerned the land: see Stevens v Copp (1868) LR 4 Exch 20 (decided on the wording of 32 Hen 8 c 34 (Grantees of Reversions) (1540)). For a discussion of a similar question relating to the assignment of the lease see PARA 559 note 9 ante; and as to forfeiture clauses see also PARA 555 ante.

8 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

9 Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(1). As to the liability of the covenantor see PARA 557 ante. Section 141 applies to leases made before, on or after 1 January 1926 (s 141(4)); but does not affect the operation of any severance of the reversionary estate effected before 1 January 1926 (s 141(4)(a)). As to severance of the reversion see PARA 555 ante, PARA 572 post. After a purchase of the reversion of the tenant holds of the purchaser on the same terms as he previously held of the vendor until the tenancy is regularly determined: Greenwood v Bairstow (1836) 5 LJ Ch 179.

10 In the Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(2), (3), 'provision' is to be construed as including a condition of re-entry or other condition, although there is no express reference to such conditions as there is in s 141(1). It is clear from the previous legislation (the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 10 (amended by the Conveyancing Act 1911 s 2) and now repealed) that such was intended.

11 Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(2). Thus, a mortgagor in possession whose mortgagee has neither taken possession nor given notice of his intention to take possession is entitled to enforce the covenants in a lease of the mortgaged land: Turner v Walsh [1909] 2 KB 484, CA. On going into possession, the mortgagee may enforce the covenants in a lease made by the mortgagor under his statutory power (Municipal Permanent Investment Building Society v Smith (1888) 22 QBD 70, CA); and he is also entitled to arrears of rent (Re Ind, Coope & Co Ltd, Fisher v Ind, Coope & Co Ltd [1911] 2 Ch 223). See further MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 297, 345. A person in whom the reversion is vested by a private Act may enforce the covenants in the lease: Sunderland Orphan Asylum v River Wear Comrs [1912] 1 Ch 191. A claimant claiming as an assignee of the reversion should show in his pleading how and by what steps the reversion became vested in him: Davis v James (1884) 26 ChD 778; cf Darbyshire v Leigh [1896] 1 QB 554 at 561, CA, per Rigby LJ; Harris v Beavan (1828) 4 Bing 646. The Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(2) applies to a person holding an equitable interest in the reversionary interest to a lease and is not restricted to persons holding only a legal interest: Scribes West Ltd v Relsa Anstalt [2004] EWCA Civ 1744, [2005] 2 All ER 690, [2005] 1 WLR 1847.

12 Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(3). Section 141(3) does not, however, render enforceable any condition of re-entry or other condition waived or released before such person becomes so entitled (s 141(3)); and s 141 does not affect the operation of any acquisition by conveyance or otherwise of the right to receive or enforce any rent, covenant or provision effected before 1 January 1926 (s 141(4)). As to waiver of forfeiture see PARA 615 post. As to purported forfeiture by the purchaser prior to registration of its title as proprietor see Rother District Investments Ltd v Corke [2004] EWHC 14 (Ch), [2004] 2 P & CR 311, [2004] 1 EGLR 47.

568. Benefit of surety's covenants may run with reversion.

The same tests are to be applied to ascertain whether the benefit of a surety's covenant runs with the reversion as are to be applied to the tenant's covenants<sup>1</sup> so that a covenant which runs with the reversion against the tenant runs with the reversion against the surety<sup>2</sup>. Thus, covenants by a surety guaranteeing payment of the rent and performance by the tenant of his covenants<sup>3</sup> and to take a new lease if the existing lease is disclaimed<sup>4</sup> may be enforced by an assignee of the reversion without any express assignment of the benefit of the surety's covenants.

569. Form of lease.

The transfer<sup>1</sup> to the assignee of the reversion of the benefit of the tenant's covenants is permitted<sup>2</sup> whether the lease under which the tenant holds is by deed, in writing or oral<sup>3</sup>. The same principle applies where the tenant holds under a specifically enforceable agreement for a lease<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the form of any concurrent lease which effects the transfer see PARAS 104-105 ante.

2 le by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 141: see PARA 567 ante.

3 Under 32 Hen 8 c 34 (Grantees of Reversions) (1540) the lease had to be by deed: Standen v Christmas (1847) 10 QB 135; Bickford v Parson (1848) 5 CB 920; Smith v Errington (1874) LR 9 CP 145. Under the Conveyancing Act 1881 a written lease was sufficient even though not by deed (Rye v Purcell [1926] 1 KB 446), but an oral tenancy was not (Blane v Francis [1917] 1 KB 252, CA). Even in cases under the old legislation the benefit of covenants inherent to the relationship of landlord and tenant passed to the assignee of the reversion whatever the form of lease under the common law rule: see Wedd v Porter [1916] 2 KB 91 at 100, CA; and PARA 567 ante. If the benefit of the covenant was not transferred, the original landlord continued to be entitled to enforce it: Bickford v Parson supra. In the Law of Property Act 1925 'lease' includes an underlease or other tenancy (see s 154 cited in PARA 145 note 1 ante) and thus extends to an oral tenancy (see Re King, Robinson v Gray [1963] Ch 459, [1963] 1 All ER 781, CA per Upjohn LJ). 'Covenant' is not confined to promises by deed: Weg Motors Ltd v Hales [1962] Ch 49, [1961] 3 All ER 181, CA. As to the transfer of the burden and benefit of covenants on the assignment of written and oral leases see PARA 560 ante; and see Boyer v Warbey [1953] 1 QB 234, [1953] 1 All ER 269, CA.

570. Persons who may enforce tenant's covenants.

An assignee of the reversion is entitled to sue in respect not only of rent due and breaches of covenant which occur after the assignment to him, but also in respect of rent due<sup>1</sup> and breaches of covenant which have occurred prior to the assignment to him<sup>2</sup>. After an assignment of the reversion it is accordingly the assignee who alone may sue for rent and for breaches of covenant whenever they have occurred, at any rate unless the assignee and the assignor have agreed to the contrary<sup>3</sup>. The principles which govern the transfer of the benefit of the tenant's covenants are entirely derived from statute and do not depend upon the common law doctrine of privity of estate<sup>4</sup>.

1 London and County (A & D) Ltd v Wilfred Sportsman Ltd [1971] Ch 764, [1970] 2 All ER 600, CA, overruling Flight v Bentley (1835) 7 Sim 149; Arlesford Trading Co Ltd v Servansingh [1971] 3 All ER 113, [1971] 1 WLR 1080, CA.

2 Re King, Robinson v Gray [1963] Ch 459, [1963] 1 All ER 781, CA. Thus a landlord can forfeit a lease for non-payment of rent due to a previous landlord even if there are no arrears due to the new landlord: Kataria v Safeland plc [1998] 1 EGLR 39, [1997] 45 LS Gaz R 27, CA. It may be that the same principle applies where the reversion has become vested in some person other than the original landlord otherwise than by assignment: Electricity Supply Nominees Ltd v Thorn EMI Retail Ltd (British Telecommunications plc, third party) (1991) 63 P & CR 143, [1991] 2 EGLR 46, CA.

3 This result of an assignment of the reversion follows from the application of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 141: see PARA 567 ante. The possibility of a contrary agreement was recognised by Upjohn LJ in Re King, Robinson v Gray [1963] Ch 459 at 488, [1963] 1 All ER 781 at 793, CA.

4 In Arlesford Trading Co Ltd v Servansingh [1971] 3 All ER 113, [1971] 1 WLR 1080, CA, the assignee of the reversion was held to be able to sue an assignee of the lease for rent accrued due prior to the assignment of the reversion by virtue of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 141, even though there had been no privity of contract or of estate between the two assignees.

571. Burden of landlord's covenants runs with reversion.

The obligation under a condition or of a covenant entered into by a lessor<sup>1</sup> with reference to the subject matter of the lease<sup>2</sup> is, if and as far as the lessor has power to bind the reversionary estate immediately expectant on the term granted by the lease, annexed and incident to and goes with that reversionary estate or the several parts thereof, notwithstanding the severance of that reversionary estate and may be taken advantage of and enforced by the person in whom the term is from time to time vested by conveyance, devolution in law, or otherwise<sup>3</sup>. If and as far as the lessor has power to bind the person from time to time entitled to that reversionary estate, the obligation may be taken advantage of and enforced against any person so entitled<sup>4</sup>. The above provisions apply whether the lease is by deed, in writing or merely oral<sup>5</sup>; and they probably also apply to a specifically enforceable agreement for a lease<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lessor' see PARA 240 note 6 ante.

2 These words are equivalent to 'which touch and concern the land': see PARA 559 note 1 ante. A covenant for quiet enjoyment seems to be of this nature: see Noke v Awdler (1595) Cro Eliz 373 at 436; Derisley v Custance (1790) 4 Term Rep 75; Campbell v Lewis (1820) 3 B & Ald 392; and see Cole's Case (1692) 1 Salk 196; cf Dewar v Goodman [1908] 1 KB 94 at 108, CA. For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 145 note 1 ante.

Other covenants which touch and concern the land for this purpose are a covenant to renew (Richardson v Sydenham (1703) 2 Vern 447; Simpson v Clayton (1838) 4 Bing NC 758 at 780; Muller v Trafford [1901] 1 Ch 54 at 60), a covenant for further assurance (Middlemore v Goodale (1638) Cro Car 503), a covenant to supply the demised houses with water (Jourdain v Wilson (1821) 4 B & Ald 266; cf Athol v Midland Great Western of Ireland Rly Co (1868) IR 3 CL 333), a covenant to lay down part of the land demised in grass within a year (Eccles v Mills [1898] AC 360, PC), a covenant to pay rates and taxes (see South of England Dairies Ltd v Baker [1906] 2 Ch 631), a covenant restrictive of building on adjoining land of the landlord (Ricketts v Churchwardens of Enfield [1909] 1 Ch 544), a covenant to build on the demised land (Re Hughes, Ellis v Hughes [1913] 2 Ch 491), a covenant to supply a housekeeper to keep premises clean (Barnes v City of London Real Property Co [1918] 2 Ch 18) and, in a periodic tenancy, a restriction on the right to give notice during a specified period (Breams Property Investment Co Ltd v Stroulger [1948] 2 KB 1, [1948] 1 All ER 758, CA); but a covenant by the landlord to give the tenant a right of pre-emption over adjoining ground is merely collateral (Collison v Lettsom (1815) 6 Taunt 224 at 229), and so is a covenant to pay a lump sum if the tenant does not renew (Re Hunter's Lease, Giles v Hutchings [1942] Ch 124, [1942] 1 All ER 27) and a covenant by the landlord to repay a security deposit to the tenant at the end of the term of the lease (Hua Chiao Commercial Bank Ltd v Chiaphua Industries Ltd [1987] AC 99, [1987] 1 All ER 1110, PC). A covenant to renew runs with the reversion which is vested in the landlord at the date of the lease; it does not bind the assignee of a different reversion which the landlord subsequently acquires: Coey v Pascoe [1899] 1 IR 125; Muller v Trafford supra. Where an underlandlord covenants to perform the covenants of the head lease so far as they relate to premises comprised in the head lease, but not in the underlease, and to indemnify the undertenant against breach, this is only collateral; it is not treated as touching and concerning the land on the ground that the undertenant is liable to be evicted for non-performance of the covenants in the head lease (Dewar v Goodman [1909] AC 72, HL); and a covenant to pay at the end of the term for articles which are not fixtures is collateral (Gorton v Gregory (1862) 3 B & S 90).

3 Law of Property Act 1925 s 142(1). Section 142 replaces 32 Hen 8 c 34 (Grantees of Reversions) (1540) s 2 (repealed) and the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 11 (repealed). The Law of Property Act 1925 s 142 applies to leases made before, on or after 1 January 1926, whether the severance of the reversionary estate was effected before, on or after that date (s 142(2)); but, where the lease was made before 1 January 1882, nothing in s 142 affects the operation of any severance of the reversionary estate effected before 1 January 1926 (s 142(2) proviso). Section 142 takes effect without prejudice to any liability affecting a covenantor or his estate: s 142(2).

5 The same principles apply as apply to the transfer of the benefit of the landlord's covenants: see PARA 569 note 3 ante.

6 See PARA 569 the text and note 4 ante. The decisions there cited all relate to the transfer of the benefit of the landlord's covenants under an agreement for a lease, but the same principle probably applies to the transfer of the burden.

572. Severance of reversion.

The reversion may be divided as regards either the estate or the land<sup>1</sup>. Where the reversion is divided as regards the estate, by statute the burden and benefit of covenants in the existing lease pass to the new lessee<sup>2</sup>. The position where the reversion is divided as regards the land has already been discussed<sup>3</sup>.

1 See PARA 555 ante. Severance of the reversion and of the incidents attached to the reversion does not sever the tenancy into two tenancies; there remains one single tenancy after the severance: see PARA 555 the text and note 1 ante. An assignment of the reversion to a bare trustee or nominee for the landlord does not effect a severance: see PARA 555 the text and note 2 ante.

Assignee's implied liability at common law to indemnify tenant.

D. MUTUAL LIABILITY OF TENANT AND ASSIGNEE

573. Assignee's implied liability at common law to indemnify tenant.

By taking the estate subject to the payment of rent and the performance of the covenants in the original lease, the assignee makes it his duty to pay the rent and perform the covenants, and from this duty the law implies a promise on his part<sup>1</sup>. Therefore, although both tenant and assignee are liable to the landlord, as between themselves the assignee is primarily liable while the term is vested in him; and, after paying the debt or discharging the obligation, the tenant has his remedy over against the assignee<sup>2</sup>. The liability of the assignee continues only so long as the term remains vested in him<sup>3</sup>. For this reason, before 1 January 1926, it was usual for the assignee to enter into an express covenant to indemnify the tenant<sup>4</sup> throughout the remainder of the term; but such a covenant is now implied in the case of an assignment for valuable consideration, other than a mortgage<sup>5</sup>. Upon a further assignment, the liability devolves upon the new assignee and the same relation is then constituted between the tenant and the new assignee, the new assignee being primarily liable and the tenant still being liable only as surety with a remedy over against the new assignee; and this holds as between the tenant and each subsequent assignee of the term, notwithstanding that the subsequent assignee has entered into an express covenant to indemnify his immediate assignor<sup>6</sup>. Each assignee is liable for rent accrued and breaches of covenant committed in his own time, even though the action is not commenced until after he has further assigned<sup>7</sup>.

The right of indemnity of a tenant against an assignee depends upon the assignee's taking the tenant's entire estate. It does not extend to an undertenant of the assignee, even though the underlease is by way of mortgage, and the mortgagee obtains the benefit of the tenant's payment of rent<sup>8</sup>; nor does it extend to a judgment creditor who takes the term in execution as a means to a sale of it<sup>9</sup>. Where, however, the tenant has executed a declaration of trust, he is entitled to be indemnified by the equitable assignee against the liabilities of the lease in the same manner as an ordinary trustee<sup>10</sup>; and, generally, where there is an agreement to assign under which the equitable assignee enters and enjoys the premises, it seems that he is liable to indemnify the tenant, if he is the immediate assignor, in respect of the period of his enjoyment, although not subsequently<sup>11</sup>. Where a surety for an assignee of the lease covenants with the landlord that the assignee will pay the rent, the assignee is entitled to be indemnified by the surety if the assignor pays the rent to the landlord on the tenant's default<sup>12</sup>.

Where there have been successive assignments of a lease and the landlord sues the original tenant under his covenant to pay the rent for the remainder of the term because the present tenant is insolvent, the original tenant may not compel an intermediate tenant to sue his successor who is solvent forcing him to pay the rent to the landlord; nor may the intermediate tenant be compelled to assign the benefit of his covenant to the original tenant<sup>13</sup>.

The former tenant is now afforded limited statutory protection in circumstances where the current tenant is in arrears with rent and may call for an overriding lease if he settles those arrears<sup>14</sup>.

574. Express covenant of indemnity.

It was usual for the tenant, on assigning the term, to take from the assignee an express covenant for payment of rent and performance of the covenants of the lease, and for indemnity, the assignee taking a similar covenant on further assignment; and the tenant and an assignee who, by reason of his having entered into such a covenant, remained under a continuing liability were entitled to have this covenant inserted in the assignment<sup>1</sup>. An express covenant for indemnity should still be inserted where the assignment is not made for valuable consideration. In other cases an express covenant need not be inserted because, by statute, a covenant similar to the usual express covenant is implied<sup>2</sup>.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(ii) Tenancies granted before 1 January 1996/D. MUTUAL LIABILITY OF TENANT AND ASSIGNEE/575. Statutory implied covenant for indemnity.

575. Statutory implied covenant for indemnity.

In a conveyance<sup>1</sup> for valuable consideration<sup>2</sup>, other than a mortgage, of the entirety of the land<sup>3</sup> comprised in a lease, for the residue of the term or interest created by the lease, there is implied, in addition to the covenants for title otherwise implied by statute<sup>4</sup>, a covenant by the assignee or joint and several covenant by the assignees, if more than one, with the conveying parties and with each of them, if more than one, that the assignees, or the persons deriving title under them will at all times:

- 1145 (1) from the date of the conveyance or other date therein stated, duly pay all rent becoming due under the lease creating the term or interest for which the land is conveyed, and observe and perform all the covenants, agreements and conditions therein contained and thenceforth on the part of the lessees<sup>5</sup> to be performed and observed; and
- 1146 (2) from such date, save harmless and keep indemnified the conveying parties and their estates and effects from and against all proceedings, costs, claims and expenses on account of any omission to pay such rent or any breach of any of such covenants, agreements and conditions<sup>6</sup>.

Where the assignment is of part of the land comprised in the lease and the rent has been apportioned with the lessor's consent, the covenant so implied is implied in the like manner as if the apportioned rent were the original rent reserved and the lease related solely to that part<sup>7</sup>. Where, however, the assignment is of part of the land, and the rent has been apportioned without the landlord's consent<sup>8</sup>, there is implied a similar covenant by the assignee and also a covenant by the assignor with the assignee, if the assignor conveys and is expressed to convey as beneficial owner and he retains a part of the land, that the assignor will pay his apportioned part of the rent and perform the covenants relating to the land retained by him and will indemnify the assignee accordingly<sup>9</sup>. Where the part of the land assigned is conveyed either subject to the entire rent or discharged from the entire rent, the appropriate modifications are implied<sup>10</sup>. The covenants so implied may be varied or extended by deed and, as so varied or extended, operate, as far as may be, in the like manner and with the like incidents, effects and consequences, as if such variations or extensions were directed<sup>11</sup> to be implied<sup>12</sup>. The benefit of the covenants so implied are annexed and incident to, and go with, the estate or interest of the implied covenantee and are capable of being enforced by every person in whom that estate or interest is for the whole or any part thereof from time to time vested<sup>13</sup>.

The chain of liability constituted by successive covenants of indemnity given on successive assignments may be broken by the bankruptcy of an intermediate assignee, but the tenant may take from the trustee in bankruptcy an assignment of the bankrupt's right of indemnity against a subsequent assignee, and may then recover in full from that assignee<sup>14</sup>.

The express exclusion of the statutory implied covenant does not prevent the assignee's implied liability at common law to indemnify the tenant from arising<sup>15</sup>.

576. Construction of express and statutory implied covenants for indemnity.

Express or statutory implied covenants for indemnity<sup>1</sup> are binding on the assignee for the residue of the term; and he cannot put an end to his liability by further assigning unless the liability is expressly so limited<sup>2</sup>. The covenants are construed as covenants for indemnity only<sup>3</sup>; and the assignor is not entitled to insist upon the observance of the covenants in the lease except so far as is necessary for his indemnity<sup>4</sup>. It is, however, a question of construction whether an express covenant is limited to an indemnity; and, where there is no mention of an indemnity, it may be construed as an unqualified covenant<sup>5</sup>. The covenant implied by statute binds the assignee to indemnify the assignor only against future breaches<sup>6</sup>; and an express covenant is usually qualified so as to bind the assignee to indemnify the assignor against future breaches only<sup>7</sup>. In the absence of such a qualification an express covenant may entitle the assignor to indemnity against past breaches, at any rate as regards dilapidations, as these may have been taken into account in fixing the price<sup>8</sup>. The assignee may also be entitled to an indemnity against past breaches of a continuing nature under the statutory implied covenants<sup>9</sup>.

If, after an assignment, the landlord sues the tenant for breach of covenant, it may be reasonable for the tenant to defend the claim, whether for the purpose of having the damages ascertained or otherwise; and in a claim on the covenant of indemnity the tenant may recover as damages from the assignee the costs properly so incurred, notwithstanding that the defence was unsuccessful<sup>1</sup>. When, however, the extent of the liability to the landlord has been ascertained, the assignee has no reason for defending the tenant's claim; and, if he does so, he may not recover the costs against a subsequent assignee<sup>2</sup>.

(iii) New Tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996

A. IN GENERAL

578. Tenancies and covenants to which the 1995 Act applies.

The provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1995 which are set out below<sup>1</sup> apply only to new tenancies<sup>2</sup>. For these purposes, a tenancy<sup>3</sup> is a new tenancy if it is granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>4</sup> otherwise than in pursuance of:

- 1147 (1) an agreement entered into before that date<sup>5</sup>; or
- 1148 (2) an order of a court made before that date<sup>6</sup>;

and heads (1) and (2) above apply<sup>7</sup> to the grant of a tenancy where by virtue of any variation of a tenancy there is a deemed surrender and regrant as it applies to any other grant of a tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

The Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 applies to a landlord covenant<sup>9</sup> or a tenant covenant<sup>10</sup> of a tenancy whether or not the covenant has reference to the subject matter of the tenancy, and whether the covenant is express, implied or imposed by law<sup>11</sup>. It does not, however, apply to, and nothing in that Act affects, any covenant imposed in pursuance of:

- 1149 (a) the provisions of the Housing Act 1985 requiring repayment of discount on early disposals following a conveyance in pursuance of a local authority's right to dispose of land held for housing purposes<sup>12</sup> or in pursuance of the right to buy<sup>13</sup>;
- 1150 (b) the provisions of that Act requiring redemption of the landlord's share following the exercise of the right to acquire on rent to mortgage terms<sup>14</sup>; or
- 1151 (c) the provisions of the Housing Act 1996 or of the Housing Associations Act 1985 requiring repayment of discount on early disposals following the purchase of housing from a registered social landlord<sup>15</sup> or restricting disposals<sup>16</sup> of certain houses so purchased<sup>17</sup>.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(iii) New Tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996/A. IN GENERAL/579. Restrictions on contracting out.

579. Restrictions on contracting out.

Any agreement relating to a tenancy<sup>1</sup> is void to the extent that:

- 1152 (1) it would otherwise have effect to exclude, modify or otherwise frustrate the operation of any provision of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995; or
- 1153 (2) it provides for the termination or surrender of the tenancy, or the imposition on the tenant of any penalty, disability or liability, in the event of the operation of any provision of the 1995 Act; or

- 1154 (3) it provides for any of the matters referred to in head (2) above and does so, whether expressly or otherwise, in connection with, or in consequence of, the operation of any provision of that Act<sup>2</sup>.

To the extent, however, that an agreement relating to a tenancy constitutes a covenant<sup>3</sup>, whether absolute or qualified, against the assignment<sup>4</sup>, or parting with the possession, of the premises demised by the tenancy or any part of them<sup>5</sup>:

- 1155 (a) the agreement is not void by virtue of heads (1) to (3) above by reason only of the fact that as such the covenant prohibits or restricts any such assignment or parting with possession; but 1156 (b) head (a) above does not otherwise affect the operation of heads (1) to (3) above in relation to the agreement, and in particular does not preclude its application to the agreement to the extent that it purports to regulate the giving of, or the making of any application for, consent<sup>6</sup> to any such assignment or parting with possession<sup>7</sup>.

Nothing in the above provisions applies<sup>8</sup> to any agreement to the extent that it is an authorised guarantee agreement<sup>9</sup>; but an agreement is void<sup>10</sup> to the extent that it is one<sup>11</sup> which purports:

- 1157 (i) to impose on the tenant any requirement to guarantee in any way the performance of the relevant covenant by any person other than the assignee; or
 1158 (ii) to impose on the tenant any liability, restriction or other requirement, of whatever nature, in relation to any time after the assignee is released from that covenant by virtue of the 1995 Act<sup>12</sup>.

Nothing in the 1995 Act is to be read as preventing:

- 1159 (A) a party to a tenancy from releasing a person from a landlord covenant<sup>13</sup> or a tenant covenant<sup>14</sup> of the tenancy; or 1160 (B) the parties to a tenancy from agreeing to an apportionment of liability under such a covenant<sup>15</sup>.

Further, an agreement between landlord and tenant to limit liability under their covenants from the outset does not impinge upon the operation of any provision of the 1995 Act and does not fall within head (1) above<sup>16</sup>. The mischief at which the Act was aimed was the absence of an exit route from the landlord's or tenant's future liabilities on a lawful assignment<sup>17</sup>; it is not intended to close any exit route available to the parties other than that provided by its own relieving provisions<sup>18</sup> and in particular that by agreement their liability may be curtailed from the outset or later relieved or waived<sup>19</sup>.

1 The Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 25 (see the text and notes 2-12 infra) applies to an agreement relating to a tenancy whether or not the agreement is (1) contained in the instrument creating the tenancy; or (2) made before the creation of the tenancy: s 25(4). Transmission of benefit and burden of covenants.

B. TRANSMISSION OF COVENANTS

580. Transmission of benefit and burden of covenants.

The benefit and burden of all landlord and tenant covenants<sup>1</sup> of a tenancy<sup>2</sup>:

- 1161 (1) are annexed and incident to the whole, and to each and every part, of the premises demised by the tenancy and of the reversion<sup>3</sup> in them; and 1162 (2) pass<sup>4</sup> on an assignment<sup>5</sup> of the whole or any part of those premises or of the reversion in them<sup>6</sup>.

Where the assignment is by the tenant<sup>7</sup> under the tenancy, then as from the assignment the assignee:

- 1163 (a) becomes bound by the tenant covenants of the tenancy except to the extent that immediately before the assignment they did not bind the assignor<sup>8</sup>, or they fall to be complied with in relation to any demised premises not comprised in the assignment; and
- 1164 (b) becomes entitled to the benefit of the landlord covenants of the tenancy except to the extent that they fall to be complied with in relation to any such premises<sup>9</sup>.

Where the assignment is by the landlord<sup>10</sup> under the tenancy, then as from the assignment the assignee:

- 1165 (i) becomes bound by the landlord covenants of the tenancy except to the extent that immediately before the assignment they did not bind the assignor<sup>11</sup>, or they fall to be complied with in relation to any demised premises not comprised in the assignment; and
- 1166 (ii) becomes entitled to the benefit of the tenant covenants of the tenancy except to the extent that they fall to be complied with in relation to any such premises<sup>12</sup>.

Any landlord or tenant covenant of a tenancy which is restrictive of the user of land is, as well as being capable of enforcement against an assignee, capable of being enforced against any other person who is the owner or occupier of any demised premises to which the covenant relates, even though there is no express provision in the tenancy to that effect<sup>13</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions operates, however:

- 1167 (A) in the case of a covenant which, in whatever terms, is expressed to be personal to any person<sup>14</sup>, to make the covenant enforceable by or, as the case may be, against any other person; or
- 1168 (B) to make a covenant enforceable against any person if it would not otherwise be enforceable against him by reason of its not having been registered under the Land Registration Act 2002 or the Land Charges Act 1972<sup>15</sup>.

Any rule of law by virtue of which the burden of a covenant whose subject matter is not in existence at the time when it is made does not run with the land affected unless the covenantor covenants on behalf of himself and his assigns is abolished in relation to tenancies<sup>16</sup>.

Where as a result of an assignment a person becomes, by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, bound by or entitled to the benefit of a covenant, he does not by virtue of that Act have any liability or rights under the covenant in relation to any time falling before the assignment<sup>17</sup>; but this does not preclude any such rights being expressly assigned to the person in question<sup>18</sup>.

6 Ibid s 3(1). In circumstances where an overriding lease has been granted, and there are two potential claimants for the benefit of a tenant covenant, entitlement to that benefit depends upon the express or presumed intentions of the parties deduced from the overriding lease; the presumption is that benefits of a capital kind remain with the freeholder and that those of an income nature pass to the grantee of the overriding lease: see First Penthouse Ltd v Channel Hotels & Properties (UK) Ltd, Channel Hotels & Properties (UK) Ltd v Al Tamimi [2003] EWHC 2713 (Ch) at [58], [2004] 1 EGLR 16 obiter per Lightman J; affd on other grounds [2004] EWCA Civ 1072, [2004] All ER (D) 568 (Jul). ## 581. Transmission of rights of re-entry.

The benefit of a landlord's<sup>1</sup> right of re-entry under a tenancy<sup>2</sup> is annexed and incident to the whole, and to each and every part, of the reversion<sup>3</sup> in the premises demised by the tenancy, and passes on an assignment<sup>4</sup> of the whole or any part of the reversion in those premises<sup>5</sup>.

Where as a result of an assignment a person becomes, by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995, entitled to a right of re-entry contained in a tenancy, that right is exercisable in relation to any breach of a covenant of the tenancy occurring before the assignment as in relation to one occurring thereafter, unless by reason of any waiver or release it was not so exercisable immediately before the assignment<sup>6</sup>.

C. RELEASE ON ASSIGNMENT; APPORTIONMENT OF LIABILITY

582. Tenant released from covenants on assignment of tenancy.

If the tenant assigns the whole of the premises demised to him<sup>4</sup>, he is released from the tenant covenants<sup>5</sup> of the tenancy and ceases to be entitled to the benefit of the landlord covenants<sup>6</sup> of the tenancy, as from the assignment<sup>7</sup>.

If the tenant assigns part only of the premises demised to him, then as from the assignment he is released from the tenant covenants of the tenancy, and ceases to be entitled to the benefit of the landlord covenants of the tenancy, only to the extent that those covenants fall to be complied with in relation to that part<sup>8</sup> of the demised premises<sup>9</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 289 note 2 ante.

2 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 5(1). For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 289 note 3 ante. As to the tenancies to which these provisions apply see PARA 578 ante; and as to restrictions on contracting out see PARA 579 ante.

3 Ibid s 5(4).

4 For these purposes, any assignment (however effected) consisting in the transfer of the whole of the tenant's interest in any premises demised by a tenancy is to be treated as an assignment by the tenant of those premises even if it is not effected by him: ibid s 28(6)(b). For the meaning of 'assignment' see PARA 289 note 1 ante.

5 For the meaning of 'tenant covenant' see PARA 289 note 6 ante.

6 For the meaning of 'landlord covenant' see PARA 578 note 9 ante.

7 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 5(2). As to the effects of such a release see PARA 589 post. In practice, in the vast majority of assignments of commercial leases the tenant will have continuing liability for the performance of the covenants in the lease by the assignee by virtue of being required to enter into an authorised guarantee agreement: see PARA 593 post.

8 For the purposes of any reference in the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 to a covenant falling to be complied with in relation to a particular part of the premises demised by a tenancy, a covenant falls to be so complied with if (1) it in terms applies to that part of the premises; or (2) in its practical application it can be attributed to that part of the premises (whether or not it can also be so attributed to other individual parts of those premises): s 28(2). This does not, however, apply in relation to covenants to pay money; and for the purposes of any reference in the 1995 Act to a covenant falling to be complied with in relation to a particular part of the premises demised by a tenancy, a covenant of a tenancy which is a covenant to pay money falls to be so complied with if (a) the covenant in terms applies to that part; or (b) the amount of the payment is determinable specifically by reference (i) to that part; or (ii) to anything falling to be done by or for a person as tenant or occupier of that part (if it is a tenant covenant); or (iii) to anything falling to be done by or for a person as landlord of that part (if it is a landlord covenant): s 28(3).

Landlord may be released from covenants on assignment of reversion.

583. Landlord may be released from covenants on assignment of reversion.

The following provisions apply where a landlord<sup>1</sup> assigns the reversion<sup>2</sup> in premises of which he is the landlord under a tenancy<sup>3</sup>, whether or not the landlord is landlord of the whole of the premises comprised in the tenancy<sup>4</sup>.

If the landlord assigns the reversion in the whole of the premises<sup>5</sup> of which he is the landlord:

- 1169 (1) he may apply to be released<sup>6</sup> from the landlord covenants<sup>7</sup> of the tenancy; and
- 1170 (2) if he is so released from all of those covenants, he ceases to be entitled to the benefit of the tenant covenants<sup>8</sup> of the tenancy as from the assignment<sup>9</sup>.

If the landlord assigns the reversion in part only of the premises<sup>10</sup> of which he is the landlord:

- 1171 (a) he may apply to be so released from the landlord covenants of the tenancy to the extent that they fall to be complied with in relation to that part of those premises<sup>11</sup>; and
- 1172 (b) if he is, to that extent, so released from all of those covenants, then as from the assignment he ceases to be entitled to the benefit of the tenant covenants only to the extent that they fall to be complied with in relation to that part of those premises<sup>12</sup>.

- 4 Ibid s 6(4).
- 5 For these purposes, any assignment (however effected) consisting in the transfer of the whole of the landlord's interest (as owner of the reversion) in any premises demised by a tenancy is to be treated as an assignment by the landlord of the reversion in those premises even if it is not effected by him: ibid s 28(6)(a). References to the assignment by a landlord of the reversion in the whole or part of the premises demised by a tenancy are to the assignment by him of the whole of his interest (as owner of the reversion) in the whole or part of those premises: s 28(5).

- 9 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 6(2). As to the effects of such a release see PARA 589 post. Nothing in the 1995 Act, however, affects the operation of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 3(3A) (as added) (preservation of former landlord's liability until tenant notified of new landlord): see PARA 553 the text and note 18 ante. ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(iii) New Tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996/C. RELEASE ON ASSIGNMENT; APPORTIONMENT OF LIABILITY/584. Former landlord may be released from covenants on assignment of reversion.

584. Former landlord may be released from covenants on assignment of reversion.

The following provisions apply where:

- 1173 (1) a landlord<sup>1</sup> assigns the reversion<sup>2</sup> in premises of which he is the landlord under a tenancy<sup>3</sup>; and whether or not the landlord making the assignment is landlord of the whole of the premises comprised in the tenancy and whether or not the former landlord has previously applied<sup>7</sup> to be released from the relevant covenant<sup>8</sup>.
- 1174 (2) immediately before the assignment<sup>4</sup> a former landlord of the premises remains bound by a landlord covenant<sup>5</sup> of the tenancy ('the relevant covenant')<sup>6</sup>,

If immediately before the assignment the former landlord does not remain the landlord of any other premises demised by the tenancy, he may apply to be released<sup>9</sup> from the relevant covenant<sup>10</sup>. In any other case the former landlord may apply to be so released from the relevant covenant to the extent that it falls to be complied with in relation to any premises comprised in the assignment<sup>11</sup>.

If the former landlord:

1175 (a) is so released from every landlord covenant by which he remained bound immediately before the assignment, he ceases to be entitled to the benefit of the tenant covenants<sup>12</sup> of the tenancy<sup>13</sup>;

1176 (b) is so released from every such landlord covenant to the extent that it falls to be complied with in relation to any premises comprised in the assignment, he ceases to be entitled to the benefit of the tenant covenants of the tenancy to the extent that they fall to be so complied with<sup>14</sup>.

Procedure for seeking release from a relevant covenant.

585. Procedure for seeking release from a relevant covenant.

For the statutory purposes<sup>1</sup> an application for the release of a covenant<sup>2</sup> to any extent is made by serving<sup>3</sup> on the tenant<sup>4</sup>, either before or within the period of four weeks beginning with the date of the assignment<sup>5</sup> in question, a notice<sup>6</sup> informing him of:

- 1177 (1) the proposed assignment or, as the case may be, the fact that the assignment has taken place; and
- 1178 (2) the request for the covenant to be released to that extent<sup>7</sup>.

Where an application for the release of a covenant is made in accordance with these provisions, the covenant is released to the extent mentioned in the notice if:

- 1179 (a) the tenant does not, within the period of four weeks beginning with the day on which the notice is served, serve on the landlord or former landlord<sup>8</sup> a notice in writing objecting to the release<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1180 (b) the tenant does so serve such a notice but the court<sup>10</sup>, on the application of the landlord or former landlord, makes a declaration that it is reasonable for the covenant to be so released; or
- 1181 (c) the tenant serves on the landlord or former landlord a notice in writing consenting to the release and, if he has previously served a notice objecting to it, stating that that notice is withdrawn<sup>11</sup>.

Any release from a covenant in accordance with these provisions is to be regarded as occurring at the time when the assignment in question takes place<sup>12</sup>.

1    le for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 6 (see PARA 583 ante) or s 7 (see PARA 584 ante).

2    For the meaning of 'covenant' see PARA 289 note 6 ante.

3    The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 (see PARA 703 post) applies in relation to the service of notices for these purposes and for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 10 (see PARA 587 post): s 27(5).

4    For these purposes, 'the tenant' means the tenant of the premises comprised in the assignment in question (or, if different parts of those premises are held under the tenancy by different tenants, each of those tenants): ibid s 8(4)(a). For the meaning of 'tenant' generally see PARA 289 note 2 ante.

5    For the meaning of 'assignment' see PARA 289 note 1 ante.

6    The form of any notice to be served for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ss 8, 10 must be prescribed by regulations made by the Lord Chancellor by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 27(1), (6). The regulations must require any notice served for the purposes of s 8(1) or s 10(1) ('the initial notice') to include: (1) an explanation of the significance of the notice and the options available to the person on whom it is served; (2) a statement that any objections to the proposed release, or (as the case may be) to the proposed binding effect of the apportionment, must be made by notice in writing served on the person or persons by whom the initial notice is served within the period of four weeks beginning with the day on which the initial notice is served; and (3) an address in England and Wales to which any such objections may be sent: s 27(2).

For the prescribed forms of notice for the purposes of s 8(1) see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 (Notices) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2964, regs 1(2), 2, Schedule, Forms 3-6. Form 3 must be used where the landlord is applying to be released from all the landlord covenants of the tenancy on the assignment of his entire interest; Form 4 where he is applying to be released to the appropriate extent on the assignment of part only of his interest; Form 5 where the former landlord is applying to be released from all the landlord covenants of the tenancy on a subsequent assignment of the landlord's interest; and Form 6 where the former landlord who assigned part only of his interest is applying to be released to the appropriate extent on a subsequent assignment of the landlord's interest. Forms substantially to the like effect may be used: reg 2. If any notice purporting to be served for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 8(1) is not in the prescribed form, or in a form substantially to the same effect, the notice is not effective: s 27(4).

7 Ibid s 8(1). As to the tenancies to which these provisions apply see PARA 578 ante; and as to restrictions on contracting out see PARA 579 ante.

8 For these purposes, any reference to the landlord or the former landlord is a reference to the landlord referred to in ibid s 6 or the former landlord referred to in s 7, as the case may be: s 8(4)(b).

9 The prescribed form for the notice of objection is Pt II of the form served by the landlord as set out in the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 (Notices) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2964, reg 2, Schedule, Forms 3-6.

10 For these purposes, 'the court' means a county court: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 8(4) (c).

11 Ibid s 8(2). Nothing in the 1995 Act, however, affects the operation of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 3(3A) (as added) (preservation of former landlord's liability until tenant notified of new landlord): see PARA 553 the text and note 18 ante. Nor does service of a notice under the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 8 release a landlord from a personal obligation which is not a landlord covenant falling to be complied with by the person for the time being entitled to the reversion: see BHP Great Britain Petroleum Ltd v Chesterfield Properties Ltd [2002] Ch 12, [2001] 2 All ER 914; rvsd in part [2001] EWCA Civ 1797, [2002] Ch 194, [2002] 1 All ER 821 (in agreement for a lease, landlord agreed to carry out certain building works which were expressed to be personal obligations of the landlord and tenant acknowledged that it would have no claim against the landlord's successors arising out of the landlord's obligations to remedy building works defects; held that the obligation to make good defects was a personal obligation and not a landlord covenant).

586. Apportionment of liability under covenants binding both assignor and assignee of tenancy or reversion.

The following provisions apply where:

- 1182 (1) a tenant<sup>1</sup> assigns part only of the premises demised to him by a tenancy;
- 1183 (2) after the assignment<sup>2</sup> both the tenant and his assignee are to be bound by a non-attributable tenant covenant<sup>3</sup> of the tenancy; and
- 1184 (3) the tenant and his assignee agree that as from the assignment liability under the covenant is to be apportioned between them in such manner as is specified in the agreement<sup>4</sup>; and also apply where:

- 1185 (a) a landlord<sup>5</sup> assigns the reversion<sup>6</sup> in part only of the premises of which he is the landlord under a tenancy;
- 1186 (b) after the assignment both the landlord and his assignee are to be bound by a non-attributable landlord covenant<sup>7</sup> of the tenancy; and
- 1187 (c) the landlord and his assignee agree that as from the assignment liability under the covenant is to be apportioned between them in such manner as is specified in the agreement<sup>8</sup>.

In any such case the parties to the agreement may apply for the apportionment to become binding<sup>9</sup> on the appropriate person<sup>10</sup>. They may also apply for the apportionment to become binding on any person, other than the appropriate person, who is for the time being entitled to enforce the covenant in question<sup>11</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 289 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'assignment' see PARA 289 note 1 ante.

3 For these purposes, a covenant is, in relation to an assignment, a 'non-attributable' covenant if it does not fall to be complied with in relation to any premises comprised in the assignment: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 9(6). For the meaning of 'covenant' and 'tenant covenant' see PARA 289 note 6 ante.

4 Ibid s 9(1). Any such agreement as is mentioned in head (3) or head (c) in the text may apportion liability in such a way that a party to the agreement is exonerated from all liability under a covenant: s 9(3). 9 Ie in accordance with ibid s 10: see PARA 587 post.

10 Ibid s 9(4). For these purposes, 'the appropriate person' means either (1) the landlord of the entire premises referred to in s 9(1)(a) (see head (1) in the text) (or, if different parts of those premises are held under the tenancy by different landlords, each of those landlords); or (2) the tenant of the entire premises referred to in s 9(2)(a) (see head (a) in the text) (or, if different parts of those premises are held under the tenancy by different tenants, each of those tenants), depending on whether the agreement in question falls within s 9(1) or s 9(2): s 9(7).

11 Ibid s 9(5). Section 10 applies in relation to such an application as it applies in relation to an application made with respect to the appropriate person: s 9(5).

Procedure for making apportionment bind other party to lease.

587. Procedure for making apportionment bind other party to lease.

For the purposes of the apportionment of liability under non-attributable covenants<sup>1</sup>, the parties to an agreement falling within the relevant statutory provisions<sup>2</sup> apply for an apportionment to become binding on the appropriate person<sup>3</sup> if, either before or within the period of four weeks beginning with the date of the assignment<sup>4</sup> in question, they serve<sup>5</sup> on that person a notice<sup>6</sup> informing him of:

1188 (1) the proposed assignment or, as the case may be, the fact that the assignment has taken place;

1189 (2) the prescribed particulars<sup>7</sup> of the agreement; and 1190 (3) their request that the apportionment should become binding on him<sup>8</sup>.

Where an application for an apportionment to become binding has been so made, the apportionment becomes binding on the appropriate person if:

1191 (a) he does not, within the period of four weeks beginning with the day on which the notice is served<sup>9</sup>, serve on the parties to the agreement a notice in writing<sup>10</sup> objecting to the apportionment becoming binding on him; or

1192 (b) he does so serve such a notice but the court<sup>11</sup>, on the application of the parties to the agreement, makes a declaration that it is reasonable for the apportionment to become binding on him; or

1193 (c) he serves on the parties to the agreement a notice in writing consenting to the apportionment becoming binding on him and, if he has previously served a notice objecting thereto, stating that the notice is withdrawn<sup>12</sup>.

Where any apportionment becomes binding in accordance with these provisions, this is to be regarded as occurring at the time when the assignment in question takes place<sup>13</sup>.

No apportionment which has become binding in accordance with these provisions is affected by any order or decision made under or by virtue of any enactment not contained in the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 which relates to apportionment<sup>14</sup>.

4    For the meaning of 'assignment' see PARA 289 note 1 ante.

Form 7 must be used for a joint application by the tenant and the tenant's assignee and Form 8 for a joint application by the landlord and the landlord's assignee.

7    For these purposes, 'prescribed' means prescribed by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 27 (see PARA 585 note 6 ante): s 10(4).

11   For these purposes, 'the court' means a county court: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 10(4).

588. Assignments in breach of covenant or by operation of law.

In relation to assignments<sup>1</sup> in breach of a covenant<sup>2</sup> of a tenancy<sup>3</sup> or assignments by operation of law ('excluded assignments'), the operation of the statutory provisions for the release from covenants and apportionment of liability<sup>4</sup> is as follows<sup>5</sup>.

In the case of an excluded assignment:

- 1194 (1) the tenant's automatic release from the tenant covenants of the tenancy<sup>6</sup> does not have effect in relation to the tenant<sup>7</sup> as from that assignment, but has that effect as from the next assignment, if any, of the premises assigned by him which is not an excluded assignment<sup>8</sup>;
- 1195 (2) the landlord's or former landlord's statutory right to apply for release from the landlord covenants of the tenancy<sup>9</sup> or from the relevant covenant<sup>10</sup> does not enable the landlord or former landlord<sup>11</sup> to apply for such a release<sup>12</sup> as from that assignment, but applies on the next assignment, if any, of the reversion<sup>13</sup> assigned by the landlord which is not an excluded assignment so as to enable the landlord or former landlord to apply for any such release as from that subsequent assignment<sup>14</sup>;
- 1196 (3) the provisions for the apportionment of liability<sup>15</sup> do not enable the tenant or landlord and his assignee to apply for an agreed apportionment to become binding<sup>16</sup> as from that assignment, but apply on the next assignment, if any, of the premises or reversion assigned by the tenant or landlord which is not an excluded assignment so as to enable him and his assignee to apply for such an apportionment to become binding<sup>17</sup> as from that subsequent assignment<sup>18</sup>.

If any such subsequent assignment as is mentioned in head (1), head (2) or head (3) above comprises only part of the premises assigned by the tenant or, as the case may be, only part of the premises the reversion in which was assigned by the landlord on the excluded assignment:

- 1197 (a) the relevant statutory provision or provisions<sup>19</sup> only have the effect mentioned above<sup>20</sup> to the extent that the covenants or covenant in question fall or falls to be complied with in relation to that part of those premises<sup>21</sup>; and
- 1198 (b) head (1), head (2) or head (3) above may accordingly apply on different occasions in relation to different parts of those premises<sup>22</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'assignment' see PARA 289 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'covenant' see PARA 289 note 6 ante.

5 See ibid s 11(1). As to the tenancies to which these provisions apply see PARA 578 ante; and as to restrictions on contracting out see PARA 579 ante.

6 I.e. ibid s 5(2) or (3): see PARA 582 ante.

7 It does not have the effect mentioned in ibid s 5(2) or (3). For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 289 note 2 ante.

8 Ibid s 11(2). As to the effects of such a release see PARA 589 post. Nothing in the 1995 Act, however, affects the operation of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 3(3A) (as added) (preservation of former landlord's liability until tenant notified of new landlord): see PARA 553 the text and note 18 ante.

Where a person ('the former tenant') is to any extent released from a covenant of a tenancy by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 11(2) as from an assignment and the assignor under the assignment enters into an authorised guarantee agreement with the landlord with respect to the performance of that covenant by the assignee under the assignment, the landlord may require the former tenant to enter into an agreement under which he guarantees, on terms corresponding to those of that authorised guarantee agreement, the performance of that covenant by the assignee under the assignment: s 16(6)(a). If its provisions conform with s 16(4), (5) (see PARA 593 post), any such agreement is an authorised guarantee agreement for the purposes of s 16 (see PARA 593 post): s 16(6)(b). As to the application of s 16 in relation to any such agreement see PARA 593 note 5 post; and for the meaning of 'authorised guarantee agreement' see PARA 593 post.

14 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 11(3); and see note 8 supra. Where s 6(2) or (3) or s 7(2) or (3) does so apply, then: (1) any reference in s 6 or s 7 to the assignment (except where it relates to the time as from which the release takes effect) is a reference to the excluded assignment; but (2) in that excepted case and in s 8 (see PARA 585 ante) as it applies in relation to any application under s 8 made by virtue of s 11(3), any reference to the assignment or proposed assignment is a reference to any such subsequent assignment as is mentioned in s 11(3): s 11(4).

18 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 11(5); and see note 8 supra. Where s 9 does so apply, then: (1) any reference in s 9 to the assignment or the assignee under it is a reference to the excluded assignment and the assignee under that assignment; but (2) in s 10 as it applies in relation to any application under s 9 made by virtue of s 11(5), any reference to the assignment or proposed assignment is a reference to any such subsequent assignment as is mentioned in s 11(5): s 11(6).

589. Effects of release from liability under, or loss of benefit of, covenant.

1199 (1) by virtue of that Act a tenant<sup>3</sup> is released from a tenant covenant<sup>4</sup> of a tenancy<sup>5</sup>; and

1200 (2) immediately before the release another person is bound by a covenant of the tenancy imposing any liability or penalty in the event of a failure to comply with that tenant covenant, then, as from the release of the tenant, that other person is released from the covenant mentioned in head (2) above to the same extent as the tenant is released from that tenant covenant<sup>6</sup>.

Where a person bound by a landlord or tenant covenant<sup>7</sup> of a tenancy:

1201 (a) assigns the whole or part of his interest in the premises demised by the tenancy; but

1202 (b) is not released by virtue of the 1995 Act from the covenant, with the result that the provisions set out above do not apply, the assignment<sup>8</sup> does not affect any liability of his arising from a breach of the covenant occurring before the assignment<sup>9</sup>.

Where by virtue of that Act a person ceases to be entitled to the benefit of a covenant, this does not affect any rights of his arising from a breach of the covenant occurring before he ceases to be so entitled<sup>10</sup>.

COVENANTS AND JOINT LIABILITY UNDER COVENANTS/590. Covenants with management companies etc.

D. THIRD PARTY COVENANTS AND JOINT LIABILITY UNDER COVENANTS

590. Covenants with management companies etc.

The following provisions apply where:

- 1203 (1) a person other than the landlord<sup>1</sup> or tenant<sup>2</sup> ('the third party') is under a covenant<sup>3</sup> of a tenancy<sup>4</sup> liable, as principal, to discharge any function with respect to all or any of the demised premises ('the relevant function'); and
- 1204 (2) that liability is not the liability of a guarantor or any other financial liability referable to the performance or otherwise of a covenant of the tenancy by another party to it<sup>5</sup>.

To the extent that any covenant of the tenancy confers any rights against the third party with respect to the relevant function, then for the purposes of the transmission of the benefit of the covenant<sup>6</sup> it is to be treated as if it were:

- 1205 (a) a tenant covenant<sup>7</sup> of the tenancy to the extent that those rights are exercisable by the landlord; and
- 1206 (b) a landlord covenant<sup>8</sup> of the tenancy to the extent that those rights are exercisable by the tenant<sup>9</sup>.

To the extent that any covenant of the tenancy confers any rights exercisable by the third party with respect to the relevant function, then for the purposes of:

- 1207 (i) the transmission of the burden of the covenant<sup>10</sup>; and
- 1208 (ii) any release from, or apportionment of liability in respect of, the covenant<sup>11</sup>, it is to be treated as if it were:

- 1209 (A) a tenant covenant of the tenancy to the extent that those rights are exercisable against the tenant; and
- 1210 (B) a landlord covenant of the tenancy to the extent that those rights are exercisable against the landlord<sup>12</sup>.

591. Covenants binding two or more persons.

Where in consequence of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 two or more persons are bound by the same covenant<sup>1</sup>, they are so bound both jointly and severally<sup>2</sup>; and where by virtue of that Act:

1211 (1) two or more persons are bound jointly and severally by the same covenant;
and

1212 (2) any of the persons so bound is released from the covenant, the release does not extend<sup>3</sup> to any other of those persons<sup>4</sup>.

For the purpose of providing for contribution between persons who, by virtue of the 1995 Act, are bound jointly and severally by a covenant, the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 has effect as if:

1213 (a) liability to a person under a covenant were liability in respect of damage suffered by that person;

1214 (b) references to damage accordingly included a breach of a covenant of a tenancy; and 1215 (c) certain transitional provision made by that 1978 Act<sup>5</sup> were omitted<sup>6</sup>.

Where two or more persons jointly constitute either the landlord or the tenant in relation to a tenancy, however, nothing in the above provisions applies in relation to the rights and liabilities of such persons between themselves<sup>7</sup>.

E. ENFORCEMENT OF COVENANTS; AUTHORISED GUARANTEE AGREEMENTS

592. Enforcement of covenants.

Where any tenant covenant<sup>1</sup> of a tenancy<sup>2</sup>, or any right of re-entry contained in a tenancy, is enforceable:

- 1216 (1) by the reversioner<sup>3</sup> in respect of any premises demised by the tenancy, it is also so enforceable by:
  - 111 136. (a) any person other than the reversioner who, as the holder of the immediate reversion in those premises, is for the time being entitled to the rents and profits under the tenancy in respect of those premises; or
  - 137. (b) any mortgagee<sup>4</sup> in possession of the reversion in those premises who is so entitled<sup>5</sup>;
- 112 1217 (2) against the tenant<sup>6</sup> in respect of any premises demised by the tenancy, it is also so enforceable against any mortgagee in possession of those premises under a mortgage<sup>7</sup> granted by the tenant<sup>8</sup>.

Where any landlord covenant<sup>9</sup> of a tenancy is enforceable:

- 1218 (i) against the reversioner in respect of any premises demised by the tenancy, it is also so enforceable against any person falling within head (1)(a) or head (1)(b) above<sup>10</sup>;
- 1219 (ii) by the tenant in respect of any premises demised by the tenancy, it is also so enforceable by any mortgagee in possession of those premises under a mortgage granted by the tenant<sup>11</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions, however, operates:

- 1220 (A) in the case of a covenant which, in whatever terms, is expressed to be personal to any person, to make the covenant enforceable by or, as the case may be, against any other person; or
- 1221 (B) to make a covenant enforceable against any person if it would not otherwise be enforceable against him by reason of its not having been registered under the Land Registration Act 2002 or the Land Charges Act 1972<sup>12</sup>.

Where a person ('the former tenant') is as a result of an assignment<sup>13</sup> no longer a tenant under a tenancy but he has under an authorised guarantee agreement<sup>14</sup> guaranteed the performance by his assignee of a tenant covenant of the tenancy under which any fixed charge<sup>15</sup> is payable, he is not liable to make any payment under that agreement unless the landlord satisfies the statutory conditions as to notice<sup>16</sup>. If he then makes full payment he is entitled to be granted an overriding lease of the premises by the landlord<sup>17</sup>.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(iii) New Tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996/E. ENFORCEMENT OF COVENANTS; AUTHORISED GUARANTEE AGREEMENTS/593. Tenant guaranteeing performance of covenant by assignee.

593. Tenant guaranteeing performance of covenant by assignee.

Where on an assignment<sup>1</sup> a tenant<sup>2</sup> is to any extent released from a tenant covenant of a tenancy<sup>3</sup> by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ('the relevant covenant'), nothing in that Act<sup>4</sup> precludes him from entering into an authorised guarantee agreement with respect to the performance of that covenant by the assignee<sup>5</sup>. For these purposes an agreement is an authorised guarantee agreement if:

- 1222 (1) under it the tenant guarantees the performance of the relevant covenant to any extent by the assignee; and
- 1223 (2) it is entered into in the specified circumstances<sup>6</sup>; and 1224 (3) its provisions conform<sup>7</sup> with the relevant statutory requirements<sup>8</sup>.

The specified circumstances are as follows:

- 1225 (a) by virtue of a covenant against assignment, whether absolute or qualified, the assignment cannot be effected without the consent<sup>9</sup> of the landlord<sup>10</sup> under the tenancy or some other person;
- 1226 (b) any such consent is given subject to a condition, lawfully imposed, that the tenant is to enter into an agreement guaranteeing the performance of the covenant by the assignee; and
- 1227 (c) the agreement is entered into by the tenant in pursuance of that condition<sup>11</sup>.

An agreement is not an authorised guarantee agreement to the extent that it purports:

- 1228 (i) to impose on the tenant any requirement to guarantee in any way the performance of the relevant covenant by any person other than the assignee; or
- 1229 (ii) to impose on the tenant any liability, restriction or other requirement, of whatever nature, in relation to any time after the assignee is released from that covenant by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>12</sup>.

Subject to heads (i) and (ii) above, an authorised guarantee agreement may:

- 1230 (A) impose on the tenant any liability as sole or principal debtor in respect of any obligation owed by the assignee under the relevant covenant;
- 1231 (B) impose on the tenant liabilities as guarantor in respect of the assignee's performance of that covenant which are no more onerous than those to which he would be subject in the event of his being liable as sole or principal debtor in respect of any obligation owed by the assignee under that covenant;
- 1232 (C) require the tenant, in the event of the tenancy assigned by him being disclaimed, to enter into a new tenancy of the premises comprised in the assignment whose term expires not later than the term of the tenancy assigned by the tenant, and whose tenant covenants are no more onerous than those of that tenancy;
- 1233 (D) make provision incidental or supplementary to any provision made by virtue of any of heads (A) to (C) above<sup>13</sup>.

The rules of law relating to guarantees, and in particular those relating to the release of sureties are, subject to its terms, applicable in relation to any authorised guarantee agreement as in relation to any other guarantee agreement<sup>14</sup>.

It has been held that on the renewal of a business tenancy<sup>15</sup>, the provisions of the new lease may not entitle the landlord to require, in all cases, an authorised guarantee agreement as a condition of consent for an assignment, but may only do so where such a requirement is reasonable<sup>16</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'assignment' see PARA 289 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 289 note 2 ante.

3 For the meanings of 'tenant covenant' and 'covenant' see PARA 289 note 6 ante; for the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 289 note 3 ante; and as to the release of a tenant see PARA 582 ante.

4     le and in particular, nothing in the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 25 (prohibition on contracting out): see PARA 579 ante.

5     Ibid s 16(1). For these purposes it is immaterial that (1) the tenant has already made an authorised guarantee agreement in respect of a previous assignment by him of the tenancy referred to in the text, it having been subsequently revested in him following a disclaimer on behalf of the previous assignee; or (2) the tenancy referred to in the text is a new tenancy entered into by the tenant in pursuance of an authorised guarantee agreement; and in any such case ss 16(2)-(5) (see the text and notes 6-13 infra) apply accordingly: s 16(7). 'Authorised guarantee agreement' means an agreement which is an authorised guarantee agreement for the purposes of s 16: s 28(1).

Where a person ('the former tenant') is to any extent released from a covenant of a tenancy by virtue of s 11(2) (see PARA 588 ante) as from an assignment and the assignor under the assignment enters into an authorised guarantee agreement with the landlord with respect to the performance of that covenant by the assignee under the assignment, the landlord may require the former tenant to enter into an agreement under which he guarantees, on terms corresponding to those of that authorised guarantee agreement, the performance of that covenant by the assignee under the assignment; and if its provisions conform with ss 16(4) and (5), any such agreement is an authorised guarantee agreement for the purposes of s 16: s 16(6)(a), (b). In the application of s 16 in relation to any such agreement, s 16(2)(b),(c), (3) (see heads (2)-(3), (a)-(c) in the text) are omitted, and any reference to the tenant or to the assignee is to be read as a reference to the former tenant or to the assignee under the assignment: s 16(6)(c).

As to the tenancies to which these provisions apply see PARA 578 ante; and as to restrictions on contracting out see PARA 579 ante. Section 16 applies where the tenancy referred to in s 16(1) is an overriding lease (as to which see PARA 290 ante) as it applies in other cases falling within s 16(1): s 20(5)(b).

6     le the circumstances set out in ibid s 16(3): see heads (a)-(c) in the text.

7     le its provisions conform with ibid s 16(4), (5): see the text and notes 12-13 infra.

Where a subtenant went into administrative receivership, and the sublease contained terms requiring the provision of an authorised guarantee agreement on assignment in such form as the landlord reasonably required, it was held that the landlord was not entitled, as a condition of relief from forfeiture for the purposes of an assignment, to require that the agreement should be given not only by the original tenant but also by the administrative receiver personally: see Legends Surf Shops plc (in administrative receivership) v Sun Life Assurance Society plc [2005] EWHC 1438 (Ch) [2005] 3 EGLR 43, [2005] 46 EG 178.

16    See Wallis Fashion Group Ltd v CGU Life Assurance Ltd (2000) 81 P & CR 393, [2000] 2 EGLR 49 (landlord cannot demand the inclusion of an authorised guarantee agreement as of right). In practice, however, an authorised guarantee agreement is almost invariably required on assignment, usually because it is a term of the lease that the tenant enters into such an agreement.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(4) BENEFIT AND BURDEN OF COVENANTS/(iv) Liability as between Adjoining Tenants/594. General rule and exceptions.

(iv) Liability as between Adjoining Tenants

594. General rule and exceptions.

Where neighbouring premises have been let to different tenants subject to restrictive covenants, the question arises whether the different tenants, or their respective successors in title, are entitled to the benefit of the covenants as against each other<sup>1</sup>. The general rule at common law is that one tenant may not enforce as against other tenants the covenants in the leases under which the other tenants hold the premises demised to them. To that general rule three, or possibly four, exceptions arise:

- 1234 (1) where a tenant has taken an assignment from the landlord of the benefit of a covenant entered into by a tenant of other premises<sup>2</sup>;
- 1235 (2) where the various tenants or their predecessors in title have entered into a mutual deed of covenant, in which case each is entitled to enforce it against the other parties<sup>3</sup>;
- 1236 (3) where there exists a building scheme, that is to say, where an estate has been laid out under a common scheme for building and the leases have been taken pursuant to that scheme; in such a case, each tenant may enforce the observance of the negative covenants by the other tenants, irrespective of the order in which the leases have been granted<sup>4</sup>;
- 1237 (4) where a letting scheme is imposed on the premises; the same principles apply as apply in respect of a building scheme, but there need be no physical laying out of the estate; it is sufficient that the estate is divided up into separate parcels and each parcel is let out on substantially identical terms in such circumstances as, if the estate had been physically laid out for the purposes of the building scheme, would have justified the recognition of such a scheme; the concept of a letting scheme is usually applied only to large buildings, such as a block of flats<sup>5</sup> and in order to establish a letting scheme, it is not enough that all of the leases contained similar or identical restrictive covenants; it must be shown that the covenants were taken in order to benefit the tenants of the various parcels comprised within the building or the estate generally<sup>6</sup>.

If a tenant may not enforce a restrictive covenant against another tenant pursuant to one or other of the above exceptions to the general rule, he may not be able to compel the landlord to enforce the covenant for him, as the landlord is not regarded as holding the benefit of the various tenants' covenants as trustee for and on behalf of the other tenants within the landlord's estate<sup>7</sup>. The landlord himself is, however, entitled to enforce them<sup>8</sup>; and, if on his part he has covenanted with tenants that the restrictions are to be observed, then, by reason of his continuing liability, he may enforce the covenants, notwithstanding that he has conveyed away the whole of the property<sup>9</sup>.

ASSIGNMENT AND DEVOLUTION OF LEASES/(5) DEVOLUTION ON TENANT'S DEATH/595. Lease devolves on personal representatives.

(5) DEVOLUTION ON TENANT'S DEATH

595. Lease devolves on personal representatives.

Whether it is for a term of years or from year to year, a tenant's interest in the demised property vests, on his death, in his personal representatives<sup>1</sup>. This is so notwithstanding that the tenant has bequeathed the property, and the term does not vest in the legatee until the executor has assented to the bequest<sup>2</sup>. There is, however, a distinction as to the time when a lease vests in an executor and an administrator respectively. The executor generally derives his title from the will, and the lease vests in him from the moment of the tenant's death, so that he may do almost all the acts incident to his office before probate<sup>3</sup>. An administrator, however, derives his title from the grant of letters of administration, and the lease vests in him only from that time; until the grant, the lease is vested in the President of the Family Division<sup>4</sup>. Thus, an administrator may not in general act before the grant<sup>5</sup>; and a notice to quit served on the President before the grant, or on the persons in occupation as his agents, is effective to determine a tenancy<sup>6</sup>.

1 See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 360. As to a yearly tenant see also Doe d Hull v Wood (1845) 14 M & W 682. A weekly tenancy creates a contractual duty to pay rent which binds a personal representative to the extent of the tenant's assets after the tenant's death until the tenancy is determined by notice to quit: Youngmin v Heath [1974] 1 All ER 461, [1974] 1 WLR 135, CA. As to claims by the landlord's personal representatives see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARAS 30, 36. In Eccles v Mills [1898] AC 360, PC, a covenant by the landlord to lay down part of the demised land in grass, and in Re Hughes, Ellis v Hughes [1913] 2 Ch 491 a covenant by a landlord to erect buildings on the demised land, were held, on the landlord's death, to have created liabilities which ought to be discharged out of the testator's general estate and not by the specific devisees of the reversions. In Re Day's Will Trust, Lloyds Bank Ltd v Shafe [1962] 3 All ER 699, [1962] 1 WLR 1419 it was held that an obligation of a deceased lessor to put demised premises into repair ought to be borne by the residuary estate rather than by the specific devisee of the reversion. As to the incidence of charges see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARAS 425-426.

596. Liability of representative as assignee.

A deceased tenant's personal representative<sup>1</sup> takes the leasehold property as assignee<sup>2</sup>; but he does not become personally liable for rent or on the covenants in the lease unless he has entered<sup>3</sup>. Further, even though he has entered and has thus made himself prima facie liable as assignee both for rent and on the covenants, he is entitled to limit his liability for rent to the yearly value of the premises<sup>4</sup>; but he cannot limit his liability in respect of any other covenant<sup>5</sup>. Where he is sued in his personal capacity as assignee, the liability, subject to such limitation, must be satisfied out of his own property<sup>6</sup>; but he may also be sued as representative, in which case the judgment, whether for rent<sup>7</sup> or breach of covenant<sup>8</sup>, is against the testator's property only, and the claim may be met by a plea of plene administravit<sup>9</sup>.

1 This includes an administrator ad colligenda bona: Whitehead v Palmer [1908] 1 KB 151. As to grants ad colligenda bona see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 223.

2 Tilny v Norris (1700) 1 Ld Raym 553. An executor de son tort may also be treated as assignee: Williams v Heales (1874) LR 9 CP 177; cf Paull v Simpson (1846) 9 QB 365; Stratford-upon-Avon Corp'n v Parker [1914] 2 KB 562; and see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 53. Where the term is vested in the survivor of two joint tenants, the executors of the deceased joint tenant are not, however, liable to assignees of the reversion for want of privity of estate, notwithstanding that there was a tenancy in common in equity: Goddard v Lewis (1909) 101 LT 528. As the assignment is by operation of law, it is not a breach of a covenant or condition against assignment: see PARA 483 ante.

3 Originally, in charging an assignee, it was necessary to allege that he had entered (see Cook v Harris (1698) 1 Ld Raym 367); but the liability of the ordinary assignee now arises without entry (see PARA 561 ante). As regards executors, however, the requirement has been maintained: see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 772. As the executor may not accept the executorship as to part only of the property, its maintenance is a matter of obvious convenience. In effect he disclaims the lease by not entering, and in this sense he is said to 'renounce' or 'waive' it: Wilkinson v Cawood (1797) 3 Anst 905, 909; Stephens v Hotham (1855) 1 K & J 571, 575; cf Howse v Webster (1607) Yelv 103. In pleading, the executor should not deny the assignment to himself; he should plead that he took as executor and never entered: Green v Earl Listowel (1840) 2 ILR 384; Wollaston v Hakewill (1841) 3 Man & G 297; Kearsley v Oxley (1864) 2 H & C 896 at 904-905; and see note to Goodland v Ewing (1883) Cab & El 43 at 44. The payment of rent accrued due after the death of the tenant, unless otherwise explained, amounts to entry: Rendall v Andreae (1892) 61 LQB 630.

4 See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 773; Youngmin v Heath [1974] 1 All ER 461, [1974] 1 WLR 135, CA; Rendall v Andreae (1892) 61 LQB 630. It is a question of fact whether an executor is in as assignee or under a new tenancy on the terms of the lease: see Theatre Royal Drury Lane Co of Proprietors v Chapman (1843) 1 Car & Kir 14. The executor may similarly limit his liability if he is sued for use and occupation: Patten v Reid (1862) 6 LT 281; and see Atkins v Humphrey (1846) 2 CB 654; Nixon v Quinn (1868) IR 2 CL 248.

597. Avoidance of liability.

Unless the lease contains a condition or covenant against assignment<sup>1</sup>, a personal representative who has become personally liable as assignee may avoid future liability by assigning the lease<sup>2</sup>. Where the testator was an assignee, the personal representative, by assigning, may avoid any future liability of the testator's estate<sup>3</sup>. Moreover, if the personal representative assigns the leaseholds on sale, then by satisfying all liabilities then accrued due and claimed, and setting apart a sufficient fund to answer any future claim in respect of any fixed sum covenanted to be laid out on the property, he may avoid personal liability for all claims which have not then been made<sup>4</sup>. This does not affect the liability of the testator's estate, but the lessor is not entitled to have the assets impounded to answer the future rent and covenants<sup>5</sup>. It is, however, unnecessary for the personal representative to require an indemnity as to leaseholds on distributing the estate<sup>6</sup> unless he has made himself personally liable by entering<sup>7</sup>.

3 See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 771. The original tenants may be entitled to indemnity against the testator's estate, and in his claim the executor may plead plene administravit; but he is not bound to keep the assets as an indemnity fund: Collins v Crouch (1849) 13 QB 542.

4 See the Trustee Act 1925 s 26 (as amended); and EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 408. ## (6) EFFECT OF TENANT'S INSOLVENCY

598. Personal insolvency.

On the bankruptcy of a tenant who is beneficially interested in the leasehold property<sup>1</sup> the term vests<sup>2</sup> in his trustee<sup>3</sup>, who thereupon, as assignee, becomes personally liable for the rent and under the covenants<sup>4</sup>. The trustee in bankruptcy may terminate his liability by assigning over<sup>5</sup>, unless prevented from assigning by the terms of the lease<sup>6</sup>, or he may avoid the liability altogether by disclaiming<sup>7</sup>. In either case the landlord, and, if the bankrupt is an assignee, the assignor, may prove against the estate of the bankrupt for any loss they may sustain<sup>8</sup>. Leaseholds acquired by the bankrupt after the bankruptcy follow the rule applicable to personal property generally; they do not automatically vest in the trustee, but may be claimed by the trustee<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the property of a bankrupt which is divisible amongst his creditors see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 283 (as amended); and BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 216.

2 Where the tenancy is (1) a tenancy which is an assured tenancy or an assured agricultural occupancy, within the meaning of the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45) (as amended) (see PARAS 1018, 1183 post), and the terms of which inhibit an assignment as mentioned in the Rent Act 1977 s 127(5) (as amended) (see PARA 929 note 10 post); or (2) a protected tenancy, within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 818 post), in respect of which, by virtue of any provision of Pt IX (ss 119-128) (as amended) (see PARAS 925 et seq, 998 post), no premium can lawfully be required as a condition of assignment; or (3) a tenancy of a dwelling house by virtue of which the bankrupt is, within the meaning of the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARAS 1144-1145 post), a protected occupier of the dwelling house, and the terms of which inhibit an assignment as mentioned in the Rent Act 1977 s 127(5) (as amended); or (4) a secure tenancy, within the meaning of the Housing Act 1985 Pt IV (ss 79-117) (as amended): see PARA 1300 et seq post, which is not capable of being assigned, except in the cases mentioned in s 91(3) (as amended) (see PARA 1323 post), the tenancy does not automatically vest in the trustee as part of the bankrupt's estate but so vests only upon the service on the bankrupt by the trustee of a notice in writing under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 308A (as added) (see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 393); see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 283(3A) (added by the Housing Act 1988 s 117); the Insolvency Act 1986 s 308A (as so added); and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 393.

3 See ibid s 306; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 391. This result is not prevented by a covenant against assignment contained in the lease. Where a trustee holds leasehold property for the beneficiary subject to his own right of indemnity, this gives him a beneficial interest, so that, if the retention of the leaseholds is necessary to give full effect to his rights, the leaseholds pass to his trustee in bankruptcy: Governors of St Thomas's Hospital v Richardson [1910] 1 KB 271, CA.

5 Wilkins v Fry (1816) 1 Mer 244 at 265. It seems that the assignment may be made even to a person of no means, for the express purpose of getting rid of the liability: Hopkinson v Lovering (1883) 11 QBD 92.

6 Re Wright, ex p Landau v Trustee [1949] Ch 729, [1949] 2 All ER 605 (covenant against assignment binding the tenant and his successors in title held to bind the trustee in bankruptcy). Previously it was thought that a trustee in bankruptcy, acting under the authority of a statute, was not bound by a covenant between the parties: Goring v Warner (1724) 2 Eq Cas Abr 100; Re Johnson, ex p Blackett (1894) 70 LT 381. Although the decision in Re Wright, ex p Landau v Trustee supra was based on the express inclusion in the covenant of the successors in title to the tenant, the trustee would seem to be bound by every covenant made since 31 December 1925, unless a contrary intention is expressed, as the covenant is deemed to be made by the tenant on behalf of himself and his successors in title: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 79(1); DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 256; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 414.

599. Corporate insolvency.

On the making of a winding-up order, the property of a company does not vest in the liquidator<sup>1</sup>. The liquidator has power to assign leaseholds held by the company<sup>2</sup>; but, where leaseholds are held by the company subject to a covenant against assignment without the landlord's consent, he may not assign without that consent<sup>3</sup>. The liquidator has power to disclaim leaseholds vested in the company<sup>4</sup>; and, upon such a disclaimer occurring, the landlord is reduced to the position of an unsecured creditor proving in the liquidation in respect of any arrears of rent other than arrears which accrued while the liquidator retained the lease for the general benefit of the creditors or for the convenience of the winding up<sup>5</sup>.

Whether the lease is assigned, disclaimed or retained by the liquidator, the landlord, and, if the company is an assignee, the assignor, may prove in the winding up for any loss they may sustain<sup>6</sup>; and in certain circumstances a fund may be set aside to meet future claims<sup>7</sup>.

14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION

(1) IN GENERAL

600. Methods of determination.

A lease may be determined only in one of certain recognised ways, that is to say by:

- 1238 (1) effluxion of time<sup>1</sup>;
- 1239 (2) notice to quit<sup>2</sup>;
- 1240 (3) exercise of an option to determine<sup>3</sup>;
- 1241 (4) operation of a condition subsequent<sup>4</sup>;
- 1242 (5) forfeiture<sup>5</sup>;
- 1243 (6) surrender<sup>6</sup>;
- 1244 (7) merger<sup>7</sup>;
- 1245 (8) disclaimer<sup>8</sup>;
- 1246 (9) application to the county court in the case of derelict land<sup>9</sup>;
- 1247 (10) application to the magistrates' court in the case of deserted premises<sup>10</sup>;
- 1248 (11) operation of the housing legislation<sup>11</sup>;
- 1249 (12) enlargement under the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>12</sup>;
- 1250 (13) exercise of the landlord's statutory power to determine the lease on the tenant's conviction for knowingly permitting the premises to be used as a brothel and failure thereafter to assign<sup>13</sup>;
- 1251 (14) frustration, repudiation and acceptance<sup>14</sup>.

Compulsory purchase does not itself extinguish a term, but rather transfers it to the acquiring authority whereupon it merges with the reversion also acquired; but the practical effect is that compulsory acquisition can be regarded as a further method whereby a lease may be determined<sup>15</sup>. Similarly, where a tenant exercises his right to acquire the freehold pursuant to the right to enfranchise<sup>16</sup>, the lease under which he holds the property is normally merged, where there is no intervening interest, with the freehold so acquired and the lease is thereby determined.

The Law Commission has recommended the abolition of the current law of forfeiture and the creation of a new statutory procedure for the termination of fixed term commercial tenancies and residential tenancies of 21 years or more<sup>17</sup>.

601. Frustration and repudiation.

There is no principle of law that the contractual doctrine of frustration<sup>1</sup> can never apply so as to determine a lease<sup>2</sup>. The fact that an executed lease, as well as being a contract, conveys an estate in land is no bar in principle to the application of the doctrine<sup>3</sup>. Even so, the instances in which the doctrine can apply so as to determine a lease will be rare<sup>4</sup>. There is no reported English case where a lease has been ruled to have been frustrated<sup>5</sup>. A possible instance of the application of the doctrine would be where the subject matter of the lease had been destroyed, although such an occurrence may be rare in relation to a lease of land<sup>6</sup>. An agreement for a lease may be frustrated<sup>7</sup>, as may a licence to use or occupy land<sup>8</sup>.

Notwithstanding earlier dicta and views to the contrary<sup>9</sup>, it is now clear that the contractual doctrine of repudiation and acceptance<sup>10</sup> applies to leases. Thus breaches of covenant by a landlord that are serious enough to amount to a repudiation of the terms of the contract embodied in the lease entitle the tenant to accept such repudiatory conduct and treat the lease as terminated<sup>11</sup>.

1 The doctrine of frustration is a doctrine of law applicable to contracts generally. 'Frustration of a contract takes place when there supervenes an event (without default of either party and for which the contract makes no sufficient provision) which so significantly changes the nature (not merely the expense or onerousness) of the outstanding contractual rights and/or obligations from what the parties could reasonably have contemplated at the time of its execution that it would be unjust to hold them to the literal sense of its stipulations in the new circumstances; in such case the law declares both parties to be discharged from further performance': National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675 at 700, [1981] 1 All ER 161 at 175, HL, per Lord Simon of Glaisdale. As to frustration generally see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 897 et seq.

2 National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675, [1981] 1 All ER 161, HL. Prior to that decision there had been no binding decision of the House of Lords on the question. In Cricklewood Property and Investment Trust Ltd v Leightons Investment Trust Ltd [1945] AC 221, [1945] 1 All ER 252, HL, Viscount Simon LC and Lord Wright took the view that in principle the doctrine of frustration could apply to an executed lease, Lord Russell of Killowen and Lord Goddard were of the opposite view, and Lord Porter reserved his opinion on the point. All courts except the House of Lords were, however, bound by the decision in Leightons Investment Trust Ltd v Cricklewood Property and Investment Trust Ltd [1943] KB 493, [1943] 2 All ER 97, CA, to the effect that an executed lease could never be frustrated.

3 See National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675 at 700-701, [1981] 1 All ER 161 at 170-171, HL, per Lord Wilberforce.

4 National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675 at 692, [1981] 1 All ER 161 at 166-167, HL, where the difference of opinion which had previously arisen was said by Lord Hailsham of St Marylebone LC to be a difference between those who considered that the doctrine of frustration could never apply to a lease, and those who considered that it could apply but on the facts there would hardly ever be a case where the lease was frustrated.

5 In National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675, [1981] 1 All ER 161, HL, warehouse premises which had been let for a term of ten years were deprived of the possibility of vehicular access, and thus of any use, for a period in excess of a year by a road closure; the proposition that these facts could amount to frustration was held not even to be a triable issue when it was raised as a defence in an action brought by the landlords for rent payable during the period of the road closure. Other decisions in which it has been held that a lease was not frustrated are London and Northern Estates Co v Schlesinger [1916] 1 KB 20 (tenant unable to reside on the premises because he was an enemy alien); Whitehall Court Ltd v Ettlinger [1920] 1 KB 680; Redmond v Dainton [1920] 2 KB 256 (bomb damage); Matthey v Curling [1922] 2 AC 180, HL (destruction by fire); Swift v MacBean [1942] 1 KB 375, [1942] 1 All ER 126 (government requisition of premises); Eyre v Johnson [1946] KB 481, [1946] 1 All ER 719 (refusal of a licence to repair under wartime regulations); Denman v Brise [1949] 1 KB 22, [1948] 2 All ER 141, CA (destruction by enemy action); Bracknell Development Corp v Greenlees Lennards Ltd [1981] 2 EGLR 105, (1981) 260 Estates Gazette 500 (difficulty in fixing a full and fair market rent for the premises in question for 21 years).

The doctrine of frustration, or an analogous doctrine, is applicable to leases of land in other common law jurisdictions: see eg Highway Properties Ltd v Kelly, Douglas & Co Ltd (1971) 17 DLR (3d) 710, Can SC (cited in National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd supra at 703 and at 172).

6 Instances sometimes advanced of the destruction of the demised premises are the destruction of a flat on the top floor of a building or the erosion of property on the top of a cliff. These possibilities were mentioned in National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675, [1981] 1 All ER 161, HL. In Cricklewood Property and Investment Trust Ltd v Leightons Investment Trust Ltd [1945] AC 221 at 229, [1945] 1 All ER 252 at 256, HL, Viscount Simon LC, while following the view that a lease could in principle be frustrated, considered that it was only in limited cases such as where 'some vast convulsion of nature swallowed up the property altogether, or buried it in the depths of the sea' that a lease would actually end by frustration. In National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd supra at 700 and at 175 Lord Simon of Glaisdale expressed the view that that put matters too catastrophically, even in the case of a long lease and that in the case of a short lease something other than such a natural disaster might in practice amount to a frustrating event. See also PARA 274 notes 6-7 ante.

7 Rom Securities Ltd v Rogers (Holdings) Ltd (1967) 205 Estates Gazette 427.

8 See eg Krell v Henry [1903] 2 KB 740, CA. The doctrine of frustration also applies to demise charters of ships: see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 900.

9 In Total Oil Great Britain Ltd v Thompson Garages (Biggin Hill) Ltd [1972] 1 QB 318, [1971] 3 All ER 1226, CA, Lord Denning MR stated that his view that repudiation and acceptance did not apply to leases was supported by the opinions of Lord Russell of Killowen and Lord Goddard in Cricklewood Property and Investment Trust Ltd v Leightons Investment Trust Ltd [1945] AC 221, [1945] 1 All ER 252, HL, that the doctrine of frustration did not apply to leases. Those opinions no longer represent the law following the decision in National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675, [1981] 1 All ER 161, HL.

10 As to the doctrine of repudiation and acceptance generally see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 997-1001.

11 Repudiation and acceptance may apply to leases where there is a letting of a furnished house with an implied condition that it is in a fit state for habitation at the commencement of the tenancy; and the tenant may repudiate the contract at once if the condition is not fulfilled: see PARA 426 ante. The doctrine also applies where there have been breaches of the covenant implied by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11 (as amended) (see PARAS 416-417 ante) which vitiate the purpose of the contract: see Hussein v Mehman [1992] 2 EGLR 86, county court. The judgment in this case applies the principle set out in National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd [1981] AC 675, [1981] 1 All ER 161, HL. That principle seems to be the unstated basis of the reasoning in Chartered Trust plc v Davies (1997) 76 P & CR 396, [1997] 2 EGLR 83, CA, and was applied explicitly in the High Court in Nynehead Developments Ltd v RH Fibreboard Containers Ltd [1999] 1 EGLR 7, [1999] 02 EG 139 (no repudiatory breach on the facts where despite deliberate, prolonged and surreptitious breaches of covenant relating to rights of use of a forecourt, the judge held that the breaches did not deprive the tenant of substantially the whole benefit of the lease). The principle was also accepted in Petra Investments Ltd v Jeffrey Rogers plc (2000) 81 P & CR 267, [2000] 3 EGLR 120 (alleged breaches related to failure to establish sophisticated shopping centre insufficient to found a repudiatory breach of contract).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(1) IN GENERAL/602. Statutory limitation of rights to possession; in general.

602. Statutory limitation of rights to possession; in general.

A landlord's right to claim that a lease has been determined and that he is entitled to possession may be postponed. Thus, where a tenancy of residential property protected by the Rent Act 1977 comes to an end, a new statutory tenancy may arise in favour of the tenant<sup>1</sup>. Protection is also given by the Housing Act 1988 upon the expiration of an assured tenancy<sup>2</sup> when a statutory periodic tenancy arises<sup>3</sup>. Where a tenancy of business premises reaches its contractual term date, the term continues by virtue of statute until a prescribed notice is served by the landlord on the tenant<sup>4</sup>. Where a tenant is performing a period of relevant service<sup>5</sup> with the forces of the Crown, a landlord is debarred from taking possession of any property or re-entering on any land without the leave of the court<sup>6</sup>.

Even where the landlord is entitled to possession in that the lease has been determined in accordance with its contractual terms and the tenant does not enjoy any statutory protection, the landlord may still need the court's assistance in order to assert his right to possession<sup>7</sup>.

Where, under the terms of a rental purchase agreement<sup>8</sup>, a person has been let into possession of a dwelling house and, on the termination of the agreement or of his right to possession under it, proceedings are brought for the possession of the dwelling house, the court may:

1252 (1) adjourn the proceedings; or

1253 (2) on making an order for the possession of the dwelling house, stay or suspend execution of the order or postpone the date of possession, for such period or periods as the court thinks fit<sup>9</sup>. On any such adjournment, stay, suspension or postponement the court may impose such conditions with regard to payments by the person in possession in respect of his continued occupation of the dwelling house and such other conditions as the court thinks fit<sup>10</sup>; and the court may revoke or from time to time vary any condition so imposed<sup>11</sup>.

The courts have power to restrain a landlord from abusing his contractual right to terminate a tenancy when it is shown that his purpose was to procure a breach of European Union law by requiring a tenant to enter into an agreement illegal under that law<sup>12</sup>.

7 See PARAS 651-655 post.

8 For these purposes, 'rental purchase agreement' means an agreement for the purchase of a dwelling house, whether freehold or leasehold property, under which the whole or part of the purchase price is to be paid in three or more instalments and the completion of the purchase is deferred until the whole or a specified part of the purchase price has been paid: Housing Act 1980 s 88(4).

9 Ibid s 88(1). Section 88 came into force on 3 October 1980 and extends to proceedings for the possession of a dwelling house which were begun before that date unless an order for the possession of the dwelling house was made in the proceedings and executed before that date: s 88(5); Housing Act 1980 (Commencement No 1) Order 1980, SI 1980/1406, art 3, Schedule.

(2) FORFEITURE

(i) Right of Re-entry

603. Effect of proviso for re-entry.

A lease may contain an express proviso for re-entry or forfeiture<sup>1</sup> by the landlord on specified events, such as non-payment of rent, non-performance or non-observance by the tenant of the covenants of the lease, the tenant's bankruptcy<sup>2</sup>, or the levy of execution on his goods<sup>3</sup>. Such a proviso leaves it at the option of the landlord whether he will exercise his right of determining the lease on a cause of forfeiture arising, and the effect is the same where the proviso contains a declaration that in the events specified the term is to cease. The proviso does not by itself enable the tenant to treat the term as at an end, as the lease is not void but voidable<sup>4</sup>, and only the landlord may avoid it<sup>5</sup>. Hence, notwithstanding the cause of forfeiture, the tenancy continues until the landlord does some act which shows his intention to determine it<sup>6</sup>. Even if the proviso declares that on re-entry the landlord is to have the premises again as if the deed had never been made, the landlord may sue for rent accrued due, or for breach of covenant committed, before the forfeiture<sup>7</sup>.

The forfeiture of the lease also destroys the rights of undertenants<sup>8</sup>; and a breach of covenant as to part of the premises, if followed by forfeiture, will destroy an underlease of another part<sup>9</sup>. An undertenant may, however, obtain what is substantially relief from forfeiture by way of a vesting order<sup>10</sup>. In certain circumstances a landlord may forfeit a lease as to part of the premises<sup>11</sup>.

Where an administration application in respect of a company has been made and either the application has not yet been granted or dismissed, or the application has been granted but the administration order has not yet taken effect, and in other specified circumstances<sup>12</sup>, a landlord<sup>13</sup> may not exercise a right of forfeiture by peaceable re-entry in relation to premises let to the company except with the permission of the court<sup>14</sup> and no legal process<sup>15</sup> may be instituted or continued against the company or property of the company except with the like permission<sup>16</sup>. Similarly, during the period for which an administration order is in force in relation to a company, a landlord<sup>17</sup> may not exercise a right of forfeiture by peaceable re-entry in relation to premises let to the company except with the consent of the administrator or the permission of the court and no legal process<sup>18</sup> may be instituted or continued against the company or property of the company except with the like consent or permission<sup>19</sup>.

1 As to when such a proviso may be inserted in a lease made in pursuance of an agreement for a lease to contain 'usual covenants and provisions' see PARA 83 ante. It is normal practice for a lease to contain a re-entry clause; but see Rainbow Estates Ltd v Tokenhold Ltd [1999] Ch 64, [1998] 2 All ER 860, where the leases contained no forfeiture clause or proviso for re-entry so that breach of a repairing covenant did not entitle the landlord to forfeit the leases. A landlord who enters for other than the specified events is liable to be treated as a trespasser: Yelloly v Morley (1910) 27 TLR 20, DC. A lease containing a proviso for re-entry need not be by deed: Hayne v Cummings (1864) 16 CBNS 421.

2 See eg Cadogan Estates Ltd v McMahon [2001] 1 AC 378, [2000] 4 All ER 897, HL. A proviso for re-entry on bankruptcy refers to the bankruptcy of the person in whom the term is vested for the time being: Williams v Earle (1868) LR 3 QB 739 at 749; Smith v Gronow [1891] 2 QB 394; Horseley Estate Ltd v Steiger [1899] 2 QB 79, CA. A lease which contains a proviso for forfeiture on the bankruptcy of the tenant, his executors, administrators or assignees is liable to forfeiture on the bankruptcy of the tenant's personal representative: see Doe d Bridgman v David (1834) 1 Cr M & R 405; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 412-414. It is not necessary to obtain the court's leave under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 285 in order to commence forfeiture proceedings against a tenant against whom a bankruptcy order has been made: Ezekiel v Orakpo [1977] QB 260, [1976] 3 All ER 659, CA; Razzaq v Pala [1997] 1 WLR 1336, [1997] 2 EGLR 53. It seems that the right to forfeit is not defeated by a subsequent annulment of the bankruptcy (see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 625); but an irregularity in the bankruptcy proceedings may enable a tenant to escape from forfeiture under a proviso for re-entry if he is 'duly found and declared a bankrupt' (see Doe d Lloyd v Ingleby (1846) 15 M & W 465).

5 A tenant who has been guilty of a wrongful act cannot avail himself of that wrongful act to insist that the lease has thereby become void: Reid v Parsons (1817) 2 Chit 247 (sub nom Rede v Farr 6 M & S 121); Doe d Bryan v Bancks (1821) 4 B & Ald 401 at 406; Arnsby v Woodward (1827) 6 B & C 519; Dakin v Cope (1827) 2

The proviso can operate only during the term, and cannot be used after the term to deprive the tenant of a claim to emblements: Johns v Whitley (1770) 3 Wils 127 at 140. Once a landlord elects to forfeit a lease and the tenant accepts forfeiture, the landlord is not permitted unilaterally to withdraw from the proceedings or to challenge the validity of the forfeiture: see GS Fashions Ltd v B & Q plc [1995] 4 All ER 899, [1995] 1 WLR 1088; but cf Mount Cook Land Ltd v Media Business Centre Ltd [2004] EWHC 346 (Ch), [2004] 2 P & CR 24, [2004] All ER (D) 111 (Feb) (tenant chose to defend forfeiture proceedings; when landlord discontinued the claim, the lease was resurrected). TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(i) Right of Re-entry/604. Term determinable on breach of a condition.

604. Term determinable on breach of a condition.

A lease will be determinable without an express proviso for re-entry on the happening of the event specified in a condition subject to which the term was created<sup>1</sup>.

If, however, the clause which is put forward as terminating the term constitutes only an agreement on the part of the tenant to do or not to do a specific act and not a condition, the landlord may not re-enter for a breach of it except under an express proviso for re-entry<sup>2</sup>. The question whether the provision in question is a condition (breach of which automatically ends the lease) or a covenant (breach of which gives the landlord an option to end the lease with the possibility of relief against forfeiture being granted to the tenant) is a matter for determination according to the precise words used in the lease and the intention of the parties<sup>3</sup>. It may be possible for a provision to have the dual character of a covenant and a condition<sup>4</sup>.

1 See Freeman v Boyle (1788) 2 Ridg Parl Rep 69 at 79; Sexton d Freeman v Boyle (1788) Vern & Scr 402 at 414, Ex Ch; Doe d Lockwood v Clarke (1807) 8 East 185; Bashir v Lands Comr [1960] AC 44, [1960] 1 All ER 117, PC.

4 Bashir v Lands Comr [1960] AC 44, [1960] 1 All ER 117, PC. In such a case the only remedy available to the landlord for breach is apparently to forfeit the lease, in which case the tenant may apply for relief. Thus in their consequences provisions of a dual character are akin to covenants.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(i) Right of Re-entry/605. Impugning landlord's title as ground for forfeiture.

605. Impugning landlord's title as ground for forfeiture.

There is implied in every lease a condition that the tenant is not to do anything that may prejudice the landlord's title, and that, if this is done, the landlord may re-enter for breach of this implied condition<sup>1</sup>. Thus it is a cause of forfeiture if the tenant denies the landlord's title by alleging in writing, or, in the case of a tenancy from year to year, either in writing or orally, that the title to the land is in himself or another<sup>2</sup>, or if he assists a third person to set up an adverse title, as where he acknowledges the freehold title to be in him<sup>3</sup>, or delivers the premises to him in order to enable him to set up a title<sup>4</sup>. In the case of a tenancy from year to year, the effect of such a denial of title is that the tenancy may be forthwith determined by the landlord without notice to quit<sup>5</sup>. It is, however, a question of fact what intention underlies the tenant's words or actions, whether in fact he is definitely asserting a title adverse to the landlord, or, as the case may be, intending to enable somebody else to set up such a title<sup>6</sup>. Thus it is not sufficient that the tenant pays rent to a third person<sup>7</sup>, or does not at once acknowledge the landlord's title, or refuses to give up possession at a time when the landlord has no right to claim it<sup>8</sup>. A denial in a pleading does not now give rise to forfeiture unless the denial amounts to the setting up of a title of a rival claimant or a claim of ownership on the part of the tenant<sup>9</sup>. Re-entry on the basis of a denial of title cannot be effected until after the service of a notice<sup>10</sup> under the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>11</sup>.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(i) Right of Re-entry/606. Construction of forfeiture clauses.

606. Construction of forfeiture clauses.

The ordinary rules of construction apply to conditions and covenants the breach of which may lead to a forfeiture<sup>1</sup>, and the intention of the parties has to be found from the language they have used<sup>2</sup>. Conditions of this nature are entitled to neither favour nor disfavour, but a fair construction is to be put upon them according to the apparent intent of the contracting parties<sup>3</sup>.

Thus, in the case of a covenant with a proviso for re-entry, the court has to ascertain the meaning of the covenant without regard to the forfeiture, and then see, upon that ascertained meaning, whether a forfeiture has been incurred<sup>4</sup>. Subject to this principle, the court leans towards a literal<sup>5</sup> or strict<sup>6</sup> construction of a forfeiture clause; and, since the clause destroys or defeats the estate, it is subject to the subsidiary rule of construction that it is to be taken most strongly against the person at whose instance it is introduced, that is the landlord<sup>7</sup>. Hence, before the forfeiture is established, it must be clearly shown, in the case of a condition, that the event specified in the condition has happened, and, in the case of a proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant, that the proviso extends to the covenant<sup>8</sup>, and that there has been a breach<sup>9</sup>. Thus a condition against assignment is not broken by the creation of an equitable charge<sup>10</sup>, or by an assignment which is in fact void<sup>11</sup>. Where, however, there is a proviso for re-entry on the liquidation of a tenant company, in the absence of express restriction 'liquidation' includes voluntary liquidation, even if it is only for the purpose of reconstruction<sup>12</sup>.

Where the substance of a stipulation in a lease is that it is a forfeiture clause or proviso for re-entry, the court will treat it as such and will disregard the form of the stipulation<sup>13</sup>.

5 Doe d Spencer v Godwin (1815) 4 M & S 265 at 269 (proviso for re-entry for breach of covenants 'hereinafter contained'; no forfeiture for breach of a covenant contained before the proviso, even though there were no covenants after); Rees d Powell v King and Morris (1800) For 19 (proviso for re-entry if no sufficient distress is found; every part of the premises must be searched); Shepherd v Berger [1891] 1 QB 597, CA (proviso for re-entry if and whenever one quarter's rent or any part of it was in arrear for 21 days and no sufficient distress be found); Doe d Abdy v Stevens (1832) 3 B & Ad 299 (proviso for re-entry if the tenant did an 'act' contrary to the covenants did not apply to an omission to repair); Doe d Lloyd v Ingleby (1846) 15 M & W 465 (proviso for re-entry if tenant duly found bankrupt did not apply where there was an error in the process). If the condition is grammatically unintelligible, the court will not find a meaning for it: Doe d Wyndham v Carew (1841) 2 QB 317; Murray v Dunn [1907] AC 283 (covenant not to erect unseemly buildings too vague to be enforceable). Where the breach is by act of law, a forfeiture is not incurred: see Doe d Lord Grantley v Butcher (1840) 6 QB 115n (b); Doe d Marquis of Anglesea v Churchwardens of Rugeley (1844) 6 QB 107. 8 Croft v Lumley (1858) 6 HL Cas 672 at 693. Where the proviso is for re-entry on breach of covenants or stipulations, it applies to a provision against assignment even though it is not in the form of a covenant: Brookes v Drysdale (1877) 3 CPD 52.

9 West v Dobb (1870) LR 5 QB 460, Ex Ch; Bristol Corp'n v Westcott (1879) 12 ChD 461 at 467, CA. It is for the claimant to prove the forfeiture. Thus, on an alleged breach of a covenant to insure, the claimant must prove the non-insurance; it is not sufficient that the tenant fails to produce the policy unless he is expressly bound to do so by the covenant: Doe d Bridger v Whitehead (1838) 8 Ad & El 571; Doe d Chandless v Robson (1826) 2 C & P 245; Chaplin v Reid (1858) 1 F & F 315. The former rule that a person could not be compelled to produce any document in any legal proceedings if to do so would tend to expose him to a forfeiture has been abolished, except in relation to criminal proceedings: see the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 16(1)(a); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 970. If the covenant provides eg that the tenant is not to permit a sale by auction without the landlord's consent, the landlord must prove that the tenant permitted the sale and give evidence that consent was not obtained: see Toleman v Portbury (1870) LR 5 QB 288, Ex Ch.

10 Bowser v Colby (1841) 1 Hare 109 at 138; and see PARA 482 ante.

See also COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 891.

13 Thus the statutory provisions relating to forfeiture will apply, notwithstanding that the form of the transaction is disguised as a surrender: Plymouth Corp v Harvey [1971] 1 All ER 623, [1971] 1 WLR 549. Similarly, a provision entitling a landlord to determine a tenancy by giving three months' notice in the event of breach of covenant or non-payment of rent (when 12 months' notice would otherwise have been required) was construed as a forfeiture clause: Richard Clarke & Co Ltd v Widnall [1976] 3 All ER 301, [1976] 1 WLR 845, CA, distinguished in Clays Lane Housing Co-operative Ltd v Patrick (1984) 49 P & CR 72, CA (for a provision for forfeiture to be effective it was necessary that it brought the lease to an end earlier than what otherwise would be the termination date; a provision could not be effective merely because it operated on the tenant's default).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(i) Right of Re-entry/607. Positive and negative covenants.

607. Positive and negative covenants.

As some of the tenant's covenants, such as the covenant to repair, are positive, and others, such as the covenant not to assign, are negative, it is usual to make the proviso for re-entry take effect on the 'non-performance or non-observance' of the tenant's covenants. While these words are appropriate to the positive and negative covenants respectively, a reference to 'non-performance' only will nevertheless apply to a breach of a negative covenant<sup>1</sup>.

1 Harman v Ainslie [1904] 1 KB 698 at 709, CA per Collins MR ('in a proviso for re-entry for non-performance of covenants, it seems to me that the word 'perform' is used as meaning the fulfilment of the obligation or duty undertaken, and not as referring to the thing to be done or left undone in pursuance of the covenant'). Before this decision it was considered that, where there was a reference to non-performance only of covenants, the proviso for re-entry would not apply to breach of a negative covenant (see Hyde v Warden (1877) 3 ExD 72 at 82, CA; Evans v Davis (1878) 10 ChD 747 at 761) although a reference also to non-observance extended the proviso to such covenants (see Croft v Lumley (1858) 6 HL Cas 672; Evans v Davis supra; Timms v Baker (1883) 49 LT 106 ('perform and keep')). The word 'performance' will still be restricted to positive covenants where there is a condition attached to the proviso for re-entry which indicates that this is the intention eg where the proviso is to take effect on default by the tenant in the performance of his covenants after a specified length of notice from the landlord: Doe d Palk v Marchetti (1831) 1 B & Ad 715; and see Harman v Ainslie supra.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(i) Right of Re-entry/608. To whom right of re-entry may be reserved.

608. To whom right of re-entry may be reserved.

At common law a right of re-entry may be reserved only in favour of the person in whom the legal estate is vested, either actually or by estoppel<sup>1</sup>. However, all rights of entry affecting a legal estate which are exercisable on condition broken or for any other reason may, on and after 1 January 1926, be made exercisable by any person and the persons deriving title under him<sup>2</sup>. To support a condition of re-entry it is not essential that there should be a reversion; a tenant who sublets for the whole residue of his term may reserve a right of re-entry on breach of covenant notwithstanding that the sublease operates as an assignment<sup>3</sup>.

In relation to tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>4</sup>, the benefit of a landlord's right of re-entry under a tenancy is annexed to the whole and every part of the reversion in the premises and passes on an assignment of the whole or any part of the premises<sup>5</sup>.

1 Thus a right of entry could not be reserved in favour of a beneficiary whose title as such appeared by the lease: Doe d Barney v Adams (1832) 2 Cr & J 232; Doe d Barker v Goldsmith (1832) 2 Cr & J 674; Saunders v Merryweather (1865) 3 H & C 902. Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(i) Right of Re-entry/609. What amounts to re-entry.

609. What amounts to re-entry.

The terms of a proviso for re-entry require that, if the landlord elects to determine the lease for a forfeiture, he must do so by re-entry<sup>1</sup>, which the landlord may effect by physically entering upon the premises with the intention of determining the tenancy<sup>2</sup> or by the issue and service<sup>3</sup> of proceedings for the recovery of possession of the premises. In the case of forfeiture for non-payment of rent the landlord must first make formal demand for payment<sup>4</sup>, unless this requirement is dispensed with by suitable words in the proviso<sup>5</sup>, or by statute. Usually the formal demand is expressly dispensed with by inserting the words 'whether formally demanded or not'<sup>6</sup>, and it is dispensed with by statute in cases where half a year's rent is in arrear and no sufficient distress can be found upon the premises<sup>7</sup>.

Actual entry is not necessary in order to take advantage of the forfeiture. When the cause of forfeiture is complete, the landlord may bring a claim to recover possession, and the bringing of the claim<sup>8</sup> is equivalent to actual entry<sup>9</sup>. If the claim form contains an unequivocal demand for possession<sup>10</sup>, its service operates as a final election to determine the term, whether judgment is obtained or not<sup>11</sup>. Re-entry may be effected by the landlord's allowing a third party into possession as a tenant, or by accepting a subtenant as a tenant under a new tenancy<sup>12</sup>. The mere receipt of rent is not an assertion of a right of re-entry<sup>13</sup>.

1 Where the premises are in the possession of an undertenant, a reletting of the premises to him by the landlord is a sufficient re-entry to avoid the lease (see the text and note 12 infra), but it has been held to be otherwise when he relets to a stranger to whose entry the undertenant objects (Parker v Jones [1910] 2 KB 32).

2 As to the need for an intention to effect a forfeiture, and as to the circumstances in which an apparent re-entry by the landlord may not determine the lease, see Relvok Properties Ltd v Dixon (1972) 25 P & CR 1, CA, applying the test earlier enunciated, in relation to the question whether a landlord's acts amounted to the acceptance of a surrender, in Oastler v Henderson (1877) 2 QBD 575, CA.

3 See the cases cited in note 11 infra.

4 Doe d Chandless v Robson (1826) 2 C & P 245; Hill v Kempshall (1849) 7 CB 975; Jackson & Co v Northampton Street Tramways Co (1886) 55 LT 91. The demand must be made upon the land and, if there is a house on the premises, at the front door: Co Litt 201b, 202a. In the absence of the tenant it may be made upon the occupier (Doe d Brook v Brydges (1822) 2 Dow & Ry KB 29); but it is effective even if no one is on the premises (Co Litt 201b). The demand must be only of the sum due for rent for the last period for payment (Scot v Scot (1587) Cro Eliz 73; Fabian v Winston (1589) Cro Eliz 209; Doe d Wheeldon v Paul (1829) 3 C & P 613), and must be made before sunset on the last day of payment, and continued until sunset (Co Litt 202a; Wood v Chivers (1573) 4 Leon 179; Doe d Wheeldon v Paul supra; Acocks v Phillips (1860) 5 H & N 183; and see 1 Wms Saund (1871 Edn) 434-440; Doe d Darke v Bowditch (1846) 8 QB 973). The condition is fulfilled by tender of the rent to the person who is to receive it on any part of the land at any time on the last day of payment: Co Litt 202a.

5 Doe d Harris v Masters (1824) 2 B & C 490; cf Treseder-Griffin v Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd [1956] 2 QB 127 at 143, [1956] 2 All ER 33 at 39, CA.

6 It seems that the words 'being demanded' are sufficient, but the full period of grace mentioned in the lease must be allowed to elapse before demand (Phillips v Bridge (1873) LR 9 CP 48), and the amount demanded must be correct (Jackson & Co v Northampton Street Tramways Co (1886) 55 LT 91). 'Being lawfully demanded' was held not to dispense with formal demand in Doe d Scholefield v Alexander (1814) 2 M & S 525, although in that case demand was dispensed with by the statute; but Lord Ellenborough CJ dissented, and in Manser v Dix (1857) 8 De GM & G 703 these words were treated as sufficient. As to a power of distress upon a mining rent being 'legally demanded' see Thorp v Hurt [1886] WN 96.

7 Common Law Procedure Act 1852 s 210 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1892) (re-enacting the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 s 2). The statute dispenses with both formal demand and re-entry, and enables the landlord to sue for recovery of the premises. It must be proved that half a year's rent was due before the service of proceedings, that there was no sufficient distress (Doe d Forster v Wandlass (1797) 7 Term Rep 117), and that the landlord had power to re-enter (Doe d Darke v Bowditch (1846) 8 QB 973). If the proviso gives a right of re-entry if and whenever one quarter's rent was in arrears for 21 days and no sufficient distress could be levied, the right to re-enter arises at any time the two conditions arise: Shepherd v Berger [1891] 1 QB 597, CA. A distress which reduces the arrears below half a year's rent takes the case out of the statute: Cotesworth v Spokes (1861) 10 CBNS 103. The goods must be so visibly on the premises as to be distrainable by a broker using due diligence (Doe d Haverson v Franks (1847) 2 Car & Kir 678), but it is not necessary that the goods should be actually distrained (see Rickett v Green [1910] 1 KB 253, DC). If the premises are locked up, no distress can be found and the statute is satisfied: Hammond v Mather (1862) 3 F & F 151; and see Doe d Chippendale v Dyson (1827) 1 Mood & M 77; Doe d Cox v Roe (1847) 5 Dow & L 272. The statute does not prevent the parties from dispensing by the lease with formal demand: Goodright d Hare v Cator (1780) 2 Doug KB 477 at 486.

8 Where the tenant, in breach of his covenant, had assigned the term and had disappeared, proceedings brought against the assignee were held to be a sufficient declaration to determine the tenancy under the forfeiture clause: Works Comrs v Hull [1922] 1 KB 205.

9 Under the old practice in ejectment the defendant admitted the landlord's entry, and no actual entry was necessary (Goodright d Hare v Cator (1780) 2 Doug KB 477; Doe d Phillips v Rollings (1847) 4 CB 188, 197), and the alteration in procedure has not affected the right of the landlord, so that he may still bring his claim without previous entry (Grimwood v Moss (1872) LR 7 CP 360 at 364; Ware v Booth (1894) 10 TLR 446); and see Re Morrish, ex p Hart Dyke (1882) 22 ChD 410, CA.

10 A claim for a permanent injunction is not an unequivocal election by the landlord to determine the lease on the ground of forfeiture: Calabar Properties Ltd v Seagull Autos Ltd [1969] 1 Ch 451, [1968] 1 All ER 1, discussing Moore v Ullcoats Mining Co Ltd [1908] 1 Ch 575 and Wheeler v Keeble (1914) Ltd [1920] 1 Ch 57. The landlord is entitled at the trial to abandon his claim for possession and proceed with his claim for an injunction upon the basis that the lease is still afoot. A claim for a declaration of title to possession operated as a forfeiture although the writ did not claim an order for possession: Cohen v Donegal Tweed Co Ltd (1935) 79 Sol Jo 592, CA.

11 Canas Property Co Ltd v KL Television Services Ltd [1970] 2 QB 433, [1970] 2 All ER 795, CA; Elliott v Boynton [1924] 1 Ch 236, CA. Service of the writ on a trespasser allowed into occupation by the tenant may not, however, be effective as a forfeiture of the tenant's lease: see Capital and City Holdings Ltd v Dean Warburg Ltd (1988) 58 P & CR 346, [1989] 1 EGLR 90, CA. ## (ii) Statutory Restrictions on Forfeiture of Certain Tenancies

610. Restriction on termination of residential tenancy for failure to pay service charge.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may not, in relation to premises let as a dwelling<sup>2</sup>, exercise a right of re-entry or forfeiture<sup>3</sup> for failure by a tenant<sup>4</sup> to pay a service charge<sup>5</sup> or administration charge<sup>6</sup> unless:

- 1254 (1) it is finally determined by, or on appeal from, a leasehold valuation tribunal or by a court, or by an arbitral tribunal<sup>7</sup> in proceedings pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>8</sup>, that the amount of the service charge or administration charge is payable by him<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1255 (2) the tenant has admitted that it is so payable<sup>10</sup>.

The landlord may not exercise a right of re-entry or forfeiture by virtue of head (1) above until after the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the day after that on which the final determination is made<sup>11</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions affects the exercise of a right of re-entry or forfeiture on other grounds<sup>12</sup>.

These provisions apply in relation to Crown land as in relation to other land<sup>13</sup>.

1 For these purposes of the Housing Act 1996, 'lease' and 'tenancy' have the same meaning; and both expressions include (1) a sublease or subtenancy; and (2) an agreement for a lease or tenancy, or sublease or subtenancy: s 229(1), (2). The expressions 'lessor and 'lessee' and 'landlord' and 'tenant', and references to letting, to the grant of a lease or to covenants or terms, are to be construed accordingly: s 229(3).

2 For these purposes, 'dwelling' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 2 ante): Housing Act 1996 s 81(5)(c) (s 81(5)(a)-(c) added, and s 81(5)(d) numbered as such, by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 170(1), (6)). The reference in the text to premises let as a dwelling does not, however, include premises let on (1) a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) applies (business tenancies: (see PARA 701 et seq post); (2) a tenancy of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323); or (3) a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Housing Act 1996 s 81(4).

3 References for these purposes to the exercise of a right of re-entry or forfeiture include the service of a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1) (restriction on re-entry or forfeiture: see PARA 619 post): Housing Act 1996 s 81(4A) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 170(1), (5)).

4 See note 1 supra.

5 For these purposes, 'service charge' means a service charge within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 ante), other than one excluded from s 18 (as amended) by s 27 (as amended) (rent of dwelling registered and not entered as variable: see PARA 325 ante): Housing Act 1996 s 81(5)(d) (as amended: see note 2 supra).

6 For these purposes, 'administration charge' has the meaning given by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11 Pt I (paras 1-6) (see PARA 355 ante): Housing Act 1996 s 81(5)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra).

7 For these purposes, 'arbitral tribunal' has the same meaning as in the Arbitration Act 1996 Pt I (ss 1-84) (see ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1226 et seq): Housing Act 1996 s 81(5)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra).

8 For these purposes, 'arbitration agreement' has the same meaning as in the Arbitration Act 1996 Pt I (see ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1213) and 'post-dispute arbitration agreement', in relation to any matter, means an arbitration agreement made after a dispute about the matter has arisen: Housing Act 1996 s 81(5)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra).

9 For these purposes, it is finally determined that the amount of a service charge or administration charge is payable (1) if a decision that it is payable is not appealed against or otherwise challenged, at the end of the time for bringing an appeal or other challenge; or (2) if such a decision is appealed against or otherwise challenged and not set aside in consequence of the appeal or other challenge, at the time specified in ibid s 81(3A) (as substituted) (see heads (a)-(b) infra): s 81(3) (s 81(3), (3A) substituted by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 170(1), (4)). The time referred to in head (2) supra is the time when the appeal or other challenge is disposed of (a) by the determination of the appeal or other challenge and the expiry of the time for bringing a subsequent appeal (if any); or (b) by its being abandoned or otherwise ceasing to have effect: Housing Act 1996 s 81(3A) (as so substituted). Any order of a court to give effect to a determination of a leasehold valuation tribunal is to be treated as a determination by the court for these purposes: s 81(5A) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 176, Sch 13 para 16). The county court has jurisdiction in relation to proceedings under the Housing Act 1996 s 81 (as amended): see s 95(5)(a).

10 Housing Act 1996 s 81(1) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 170(1), (2)). In relation to tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>1</sup>, where:

- 1256 (1) as a result of one or more assignments<sup>2</sup> a person is the tenant<sup>3</sup> of part only of the premises demised by a tenancy<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1257 (2) under a proviso or stipulation in the tenancy there is a right of re-entry or forfeiture for a breach of a tenant covenant<sup>5</sup> of the tenancy; and
- 1258 (3) the right is otherwise exercisable in relation to that part and other land demised by the tenancy, the right is nevertheless, in connection with a breach of any such covenant by that person, to be taken to be a right exercisable only in relation to that part<sup>6</sup>.

612. Long residential leases; no forfeiture for failure to pay small amount.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> under a long lease<sup>2</sup> of a dwelling<sup>3</sup> may not exercise a right of re-entry or forfeiture for failure by a tenant<sup>4</sup> to pay an amount consisting of rent, service charges<sup>5</sup> or administration charges<sup>6</sup> or a combination of them ('the unpaid amount') unless the unpaid amount:

- 1259 (1) exceeds the prescribed sum<sup>7</sup>, which must not exceed £500<sup>8</sup>; or
- 1260 (2) consists of or includes an amount which has been payable for more than a prescribed period<sup>9</sup>.

If the unpaid amount includes a default charge<sup>10</sup>, it is to be treated for the purposes of head (1) above as reduced by the amount of the charge<sup>11</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 369 note 8 ante (definition applied by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167(5)).

2 For these purposes, 'long lease' has the meaning given by ibid ss 76, 77 (as amended) (see PARA 371 ante), except that a shared ownership lease is a long lease whatever the tenant's total share: s 167(5). See further note 3 infra.

3 For these purposes, 'dwelling' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 2 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167(5). 'Long lease of a dwelling' does not, however, include: (1) a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) applies (business tenancies: see PARA 701 et seq post); (2) a tenancy of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323); or (3) a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167(4).

4 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 369 note 8 ante (definition applied by ibid s 167(5)).

5 For these purposes, 'service charge' has the meaning given by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167(5).

6 'Administration charge' has the same meaning as in ibid s 158, Sch 11 Pt 1 (paras 1-6) (see PARA 355 ante): s 167(5).

7 'Prescribed' means prescribed by regulations made by the appropriate national authority: ibid s 167(5). For the meaning of 'the appropriate national authority' see PARA 355 note 9 ante; and as to the power to make regulations under Pt 2 (ss 71-179) (as amended) see PARA 59 note 2 ante. Regulations may not be made by the Secretary of State under s 167 or s 171 (see PARA 614 post) unless a draft of the instrument containing them has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 178(4).

8 See ibid s 167(2). The prescribed sum is £350: Rights of Re-entry and Forfeiture (Prescribed Sum and Period) (England) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3086, reg 2(1); Rights of Re-entry and Forfeiture (Prescribed Sum and Period) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1352, reg 2(1).

9 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167(1). The prescribed period is three years: Rights of Re-entry and Forfeiture (Prescribed Sum and Period) (England) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3086, reg 2(2); Rights of Re-entry and Forfeiture (Prescribed Sum and Period) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1352, reg 2(2)

10 For this purpose 'default charge' means an administration charge payable in respect of the tenant's failure to pay any part of the unpaid amount: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167(3).

11 Ibid s 167(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(ii) Statutory Restrictions on Forfeiture of Certain Tenancies/613. Long residential leases; no forfeiture notice before determination of breach.

613. Long residential leases; no forfeiture notice before determination of breach.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> under a long lease<sup>2</sup> of a dwelling<sup>3</sup> may not serve a forfeiture notice<sup>4</sup> in respect of a breach by a tenant<sup>5</sup> of a covenant or condition in the lease unless the statutory condition<sup>6</sup> is satisfied<sup>7</sup>. That condition is satisfied if:

- 1261 (1) it has been finally determined on an application to a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>8</sup> that the breach has occurred<sup>9</sup>;
- 1262 (2) the tenant has admitted the breach; or
- 1263 (3) a court in any proceedings, or an arbitral tribunal<sup>10</sup> in proceedings pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>11</sup>, has finally determined<sup>12</sup> that the breach has occurred<sup>13</sup>.

A notice may not, however, be served by virtue of head (1) or head (3) above until after the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the day after that on which the final determination is made<sup>14</sup>.

A landlord under a long lease of a dwelling may make an application to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination that a breach of a covenant or condition in the lease has occurred<sup>15</sup>; but he may not make such an application in respect of a matter which:

- 1264 (a) has been, or is to be, referred to arbitration pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement to which the tenant is a party;
- 1265 (b) has been the subject of determination by a court; or
- 1266 (c) has been the subject of determination by an arbitral tribunal pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>16</sup>.

An agreement by a tenant under a long lease of a dwelling, other than a post-dispute arbitration agreement, is void in so far as it purports to provide for a determination in a particular manner, or on particular evidence, of any question which may be the subject of such an application<sup>17</sup>.

Nothing in the above provisions affects the service of a forfeiture notice in respect of a failure to pay a service charge<sup>18</sup> or an administration charge<sup>19</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 369 note 8 ante (definition applied by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 169(5)).

2 For these purposes, 'long lease' has the meaning given by ibid ss 76, 77 (as amended) (see PARA 371 ante), except that a shared ownership lease is a long lease whatever the tenant's total share: s 169(5). See further note 3 infra. For these purposes, a lease limited to continue as long only as the lessee abstains from committing a breach of covenant is and takes effect as a lease to continue for any longer term for which it could subsist, but determinable by a proviso for re-entry on such a breach: Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(7) (applied for the purposes of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 ss 168, 169 by s 169(6)).

3 For these purposes, 'dwelling' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 2 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 169(5). 'Long lease of a dwelling' does not, however, include: (1) a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) applies (business tenancies: see PARA 701 et seq post); (2) a tenancy of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323); or (3) a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 169(4).

4 le a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1): see PARA 619 post.

5 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 369 note 8 ante (definition applied by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 169(5)).

6 le ibid s 168(2): see heads (1)-(3) in the text.

8 le an application under ibid s 168(4): see the text and note 15 infra.

9 For these purposes, it is finally determined that a breach of a covenant or condition in a lease has occurred: (1) if a decision that it has occurred is not appealed against or otherwise challenged, at the end of the period for bringing an appeal or other challenge; or (2) if such a decision is appealed against or otherwise challenged and not set aside in consequence of the appeal or other challenge, at the time specified in ibid s 169(3): s 169(2). The time referred to in s 169(2)(b) (see head (2) supra) is the time when the appeal or other challenge is disposed of (a) by the determination of the appeal or other challenge and the expiry of the time for bringing a subsequent appeal (if any); or (b) by its being abandoned or otherwise ceasing to have effect: s 169(3).

10 For these purposes, 'arbitral tribunal' has the same meaning as in the Arbitration Act 1996 Pt I (ss 1-84) (see ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1226 et seq): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 169(5).

11 For these purposes, 'arbitration agreement' has the same meaning as in the Arbitration Act 1996 Pt I (see ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1213); and 'post-dispute arbitration agreement', in relation to any matter, means an arbitration agreement made after a dispute about the matter has arisen: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 169(5).

13 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 168(2).

As to the other particulars to be included, and the procedure on such an application, see PARA 59 et seq ante. Procedure regulations may include provision requiring the payment of fees in respect of such an application, or in respect of an oral hearing of such a case: see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 12 para 9(1)(d); and PARA 59 ante.

614. Power to prescribe additional or different requirements.

The appropriate national authority<sup>1</sup> may by regulations<sup>2</sup> prescribe requirements which must be met before a right of re-entry or forfeiture may be exercised in relation to a breach of a covenant or condition in a long lease<sup>3</sup> of an unmortgaged dwelling<sup>4</sup>. The regulations may specify that the requirements are to be in addition to, or instead of, requirements imposed otherwise than by the regulations<sup>5</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'the appropriate national authority' see PARA 355 note 9 ante.

2 As to the making of regulation see PARA 612 note 7 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'long lease' has the meaning given by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 ss 76, 77 (as amended) (see PARA 371 ante), except that a shared ownership lease is a long lease whatever the tenant's total share: s 171(5). See further note 4 infra.

4 Ibid s 171(1). For these purposes, 'dwelling' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 2 ante) (Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 171(5)); and a dwelling is unmortgaged if it is not subject to a mortgage, charge or lien (s 171(4)). 'Long lease of a dwelling' does not, however, include: (1) a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) applies (business tenancies: see PARA 701 et seq post); (2) a tenancy of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323); or (3) a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 171(3).

(iii) Waiver of Forfeiture

615. Waiver of forfeiture.

The landlord has the option whether to take advantage of a forfeiture or not<sup>1</sup>; and, if he elects not to do so, the forfeiture is waived. Such election may be either express or implied, and it is implied when, after the cause of forfeiture has come to his knowledge<sup>2</sup>, the landlord does any act whereby he recognises the relationship of landlord and tenant as still continuing<sup>3</sup>. The onus of proof that the landlord knew of the cause of forfeiture is on the tenant<sup>4</sup>, and does not shift to the landlord on proof that the landlord has recognised the tenancy after the ground of forfeiture has arisen<sup>5</sup>. If, however, it is shown that, with knowledge of the cause of forfeiture, the landlord has recognised the tenancy, he will be precluded from saying that he did not do the act with the intention of waiving the forfeiture<sup>6</sup>. A landlord does not waive the forfeiture by merely standing by and seeing it incurred, as, for example, where the tenant makes alterations in breach of covenant and the landlord does not interfere; there must be some positive act of waiver<sup>7</sup>. There is no difference in principle in the rules governing waiver of the right to forfeiture whether the breach is a failure to pay the rent or some other breach of covenant<sup>8</sup>.

1 See PARA 603 ante.

2 Waiver implies knowledge: see Pennant's Case (1596) 3 Co Rep 64a (sub nom Harvey v Oswald Cro Eliz 553 at 572); Roe d Gregson v Harrison (1788) 2 Term Rep 425; Atkin v Rose [1923] 1 Ch 522; London and County (A & D) Ltd v Wilfred Sportsman Ltd [1971] Ch 764, [1970] 2 All ER 600, CA.

A reference in a reversionary lease granted to a third person to the effect that it was granted subject to and with the benefit of another lease then liable to be forfeited is not a waiver of the right to forfeit that other lease as it was an ordinary conveyancing practice and did not amount to an unequivocal recognition of the existence of the other lease: London and County (A & D) Ltd v Wilfred Sportsman Ltd [1971] Ch 764, [1970] 2 All ER 600, CA, overruling Davenport v Smith [1921] 2 Ch 270.

PARAS 1386-2000/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iii) Waiver of Forfeiture/616. What acts amount to waiver.

616. What acts amount to waiver.

A subsisting tenancy is recognised, and, if the landlord has notice of the cause of forfeiture, the forfeiture is waived:

- 1267 (1) by his bringing a claim<sup>1</sup> for, or by the mere receipt of, rent which has accrued due since the cause of forfeiture<sup>2</sup>, whether the forfeiture is for condition broken or under an express proviso for re-entry<sup>3</sup>;
- 1268 (2) by distraining for rent, whether accrued due before or after the cause of forfeiture<sup>4</sup>, unless the object of the distress is such that the distress does not imply a recognition of the tenancy, as where it is levied for the purpose of escaping the requirement of formal demand of the rent<sup>5</sup>; or
- 1269 (3) by agreeing to grant a new lease to commence from the regular determination of the existing lease<sup>6</sup>.

Merely entering into and continuing 'without prejudice' negotiations does not necessarily constitute a waiver<sup>7</sup>.

A demand made by the landlord or his agent with knowledge of the breach for rent due after the cause of the forfeiture operates as a waiver<sup>8</sup>. Where money is accepted, it is a question of fact whether it is tendered and accepted as rent; if it is so tendered and accepted, it is then a principle of law that, so long as the landlord then knew of the breach, the acceptance constitutes a waiver<sup>9</sup>. Thus the fact that the landlord, by accepting rent, has no actual intention of waiving the breach does not prevent his action amounting in law to a waiver<sup>10</sup>. Nor can the landlord prevent the waiver by demanding or accepting rent 'without prejudice'<sup>11</sup>. An acceptance of rent in error by a managing agent's clerk will bind the landlord and waive the breach<sup>12</sup>. If, however, the landlord has already shown a final determination to take advantage of the forfeiture, for instance by commencing proceedings to recover possession, no subsequent act, whether receipt of rent<sup>13</sup>, or distress<sup>14</sup>, or otherwise, will operate as a waiver. Forfeiture is not waived by acceptance of rent accrued due before the cause of forfeiture<sup>15</sup> unless at the same time the landlord recognises the tenancy as subsisting, as, for example, where he describes the tenant as such in the receipt<sup>16</sup>. A forfeiture is not waived by a landlord's proffering an unexecuted engrossment of a deed of variation<sup>17</sup>. Where the forfeiting event is the tenant's liquidation, publication in the London Gazette of that liquidation does not impute that knowledge to the landlord<sup>18</sup>. Forfeiture is, however, waived where a landlord issues proceedings claiming production of an insurance policy under a tenant's insurance covenant<sup>19</sup> or where, having failed to ascertain who is living in premises let on a lease providing for re-entry for breach of a covenant preventing subletting, he commences access proceedings against the purchaser of the lease<sup>20</sup>.

If the landlord takes advantage of the forfeiture, he will recover the equivalent of the rent as mesne profits. The taking of other proceedings which imply the continuance of the tenancy will also operate as a waiver of the forfeiture: see Pellatt v Boosey (1862) 31 LJCP 281; Evans v Davis (1878) 10 ChD 747; and see the text and note 19 infra. There appears, however, to be no objection to commencing proceedings in which a claim for possession on the ground of forfeiture is joined with a claim, in the alternative, for a permanent injunction to restrain breaches of covenant: Calabar Properties Ltd v Seagull Autos Ltd [1969] 1 Ch 451, [1968] 1 All ER 1; and see PARA 609 note 10 ante. Payment into the landlord's bank account, if usual, may operate as a waiver, even if the landlord has instructed the bank not to receive it: Pierson v Harvey (1885) 1 TLR 430; but see PARA 265 ante. It is sufficient if payment is accepted from a subtenant (Price v Worwood (1859) 4 H & N 512) or other person in satisfaction of the rent (Pellatt v Boosey supra). Acceptance from an assignee prior to the completion of the assignment will not enable the assignee to make a good title when he has failed to comply with a notice of dilapidations: Re Martin, ex p Dixon (Trustee) v Tucker (1912) 106 LT 381. Where, however, a lease was at the date of assignment voidable on the ground of breach of covenant to repair, the defect of title was cured by the acceptance of rent from the assignee by the landlord after the assignment: Buterl v Mountview Estates Ltd [1951] 2 KB 563 at 568, [1951] 1 All ER 693 at 698. Since, apart from statute, the landlord may distrain only during the continuance of the tenancy, it makes no difference whether the arrears accrued due before or after the forfeiture. In ordinary cases of determination of tenancy, distress may be made within six months after the determination under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1709, but this does not apply where the tenancy is determined by forfeiture: Grimwood v Moss (1872) LR 7 CP 360 at 365; Kirkland v Briancourt (1890) 6 TLR 441; cf Ward v Day (1864) 5 B & S 359, Ex Ch. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iii) Waiver of Forfeiture/617. Continuing breach of covenant.

617. Continuing breach of covenant.

Where the breach of covenant which gives the right of re-entry is a continuing breach<sup>1</sup>, there is a continually recurring cause of forfeiture. The demand for or acceptance of rent which is payable in arrear is only a waiver of breaches which have occurred up to the date when the rent is due<sup>2</sup> and, where the rent is payable in advance, is a waiver of only those breaches which at the time of the demand or acceptance are known to be continuing and operates only for such period as it is definitely known they will continue<sup>3</sup>. The levy of a distress for rent waives a continuing breach to the same extent<sup>4</sup>. The landlord is not, therefore, precluded from taking advantage of a subsequent continuation of the breach<sup>5</sup>. Thus, where there is a breach of covenant to repair, this is a continuing breach, and demand for and receipt of rent is no waiver, at least if there is no improvement in the condition of the premises between service of a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>6</sup> and commencement of proceedings<sup>7</sup>. Where the breach of one covenant, for example not to underlet, necessarily involves breach of another covenant, for example to use the premises as a single dwelling house, waiver of a breach of the first covenant, even though that breach is not a continuing breach, necessarily waives the continuing breach of the second covenant<sup>8</sup>.

1 Eg a covenant to use premises as a private residence only (Segal Securities Ltd v Thoseby [1963] 1 QB 887, [1963] 1 All ER 500), a covenant to repair (Fryett d Harris v Jeffreys (1795) 1 Esp 392; Coward v Gregory (1866) LR 2 CP 153; Penton v Barnett [1898] 1 QB 276, CA) or a covenant to insure (Doe d Flower v Peck (1830) 1 B & Ad 428; Doe d Muston v Gladwin (1845) 6 QB 953). In the case of a covenant against assigning or underletting or permitting a third person to occupy the premises, it is not a continuing breach to allow an undertenant to remain in possession (Walrond v Hawkins (1875) LR 10 CP 342), although user of premises by the undertenant contrary to a covenant in the head lease may be a continuing breach of that covenant on the part of the tenant (Lawrie v Lees (1880) 14 ChD 249 at 262, CA; affd (1881) 7 App Cas 19 at 30, HL; contra Griffin v Tomkins (1880) 42 LT 359). A failure to pay rent is a once and for all and not a continuing breach: London and County (A & D) Ltd v Wilfred Sportsman Ltd [1971] Ch 764, [1970] 2 All ER 600, CA.

5 Penton v Barnett [1898] 1 QB 276, CA, where a three months' notice to repair was served under what is now the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) on 22 September 1896 and on 14 January 1897, no repairs having been done, an action was brought claiming the rent due on 25 December and possession. It was held, overruling Bevan v Barnett (1897) 13 TLR 310, that the claim for rent was not a waiver of the breach of the covenant to repair continuing after 25 December. This case was followed in New River Co v Crumpton [1917] 1 KB 762, in which some doubt was cast on the correctness of the decision in Guillemard v Silverthorne (1908) 99 LT 584, where a landlord was held to have waived the breach, notwithstanding that it was continuing, by the acceptance of rent while negotiations for a new lease were going on and after some repairs had been executed. See also Farimani v Gates [1984] 2 EGLR 66, (1984) 271 Estates Gazette 887, CA; and Greenwich London Borough Council v Discreet Selling Estates Ltd [1990] 2 EGLR 65, CA (following Penton v Barnett supra).

There would still be a right to re-enter if any of the breaches the subject of the notice survived at the date the landlord issued proceedings, and it is submitted that the notice waives only the right to forfeit (which arises afresh the following day) and not the breach: see Greenwich London Borough Council v Discreet Selling Estates Ltd supra at 68 per Staughton LJ.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iii) Waiver of Forfeiture/618. Effect of waivers and licences.

618. Effect of waivers and licences.

Where any actual waiver<sup>1</sup> by a lessor<sup>2</sup> or persons deriving title under him of the benefit of any covenant or condition in any lease<sup>3</sup> is proved to have taken place in any particular instance, such waiver is not deemed to extend to any instance, or to any breach of covenant or condition save that to which such waiver specially relates, or to operate as a general waiver of the benefit of any such covenant or condition<sup>4</sup> unless a contrary intention appears<sup>5</sup>. Where single breaches of a covenant have been continually waived, the landlord is not debarred from exercising his rights in respect of a subsequent similar breach unless it can be inferred that the terms of the lease have been varied<sup>6</sup>.

Where a licence is granted to a lessee<sup>7</sup> to do any act, the licence, unless otherwise expressed, extends only:

- 1270 (1) to the permission actually given; or
- 1271 (2) to the specific breach of any provision or covenant referred to; or
- 1272 (3) to any other matter thereby specifically authorised to be done, and the licence does not prevent any proceeding for any subsequent breach unless otherwise specified in the licence<sup>8</sup>. Notwithstanding any such licence:

- 1273 (a) all rights under covenants and powers of re-entry contained in the lease remain in full force and are available as against any subsequent breach of covenant, condition or other matter not specifically authorised or waived, in the same manner as if no licence had been granted; and
- 1274 (b) the condition or right of entry remains in force in all respects as if the licence had not been granted, save in respect of the particular matter authorised to be done<sup>9</sup>.

Where in any lease there is a power or condition of re-entry on the lessee assigning, subletting or doing any other specified act without a licence, and a licence is granted:

- 1275 (i) to any one of two or more lessees to do any act or to deal with his equitable share or interest; or 1276 (ii) to any lessee, or to any one of two or more lessees, to assign or underlet part only of the property, or to do any act in respect of part only of the property, the licence does not operate to extinguish the right of entry in case of any breach of covenant or condition by the co-lessees of the other shares or interests in the property, or by the lessee or lessees of the rest of the property, as the case may be, in respect of such shares or interests or remaining property, but the right of entry remains in force in respect of the shares, interests or property not the subject of the licence<sup>10</sup>.

A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT

619. Statutory conditions of re-entry.

A right of re-entry or forfeiture under any proviso or stipulation in a lease<sup>1</sup> for a breach of any covenant or condition in the lease is not enforceable<sup>2</sup> unless and until the lessor<sup>3</sup> serves on the lessee a notice<sup>4</sup>:

- 1277 (1) specifying the particular breach complained of; and

- 1278 (2) if the breach is capable of remedy, requiring the lessee to remedy the breach; and
- 1279 (3) in any case, requiring the lessee to make compensation in money for the breach, and the lessee fails, within a reasonable time thereafter, to remedy the breach, if it is capable of remedy, and to make reasonable compensation in money, to the satisfaction of the lessor, for the breach<sup>5</sup>. If the lease is assigned after service of the notice, it is not necessary to serve a new notice on the assignee<sup>6</sup>. The requirement of a notice is not confined to cases where the tenant has broken a covenant or obligation imposed on him by the terms of the lease. Thus, subject to statutory exceptions, a notice is required before a forfeiture on the ground of the bankruptcy of the tenant<sup>7</sup> or on the ground of the bankruptcy of a surety of the tenant's obligations<sup>8</sup> or on the basis of impugning the landlord's title<sup>9</sup>.

A right of re-entry or forfeiture for breach of any covenant or agreement to repair is not enforceable<sup>10</sup> unless the lessor proves that the fact that the requisite notice under the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>11</sup> had been served on the lessee was known either:

- 1280 (a) to the lessee; or
- 1281 (b) to an underlessee holding under an underlease which reserved a nominal reversion only to the lessee; or
- 1282 (c) to the person who last paid the rent due under the lease either on his own behalf or as agent for the lessee or the underlessee, and that a time reasonably sufficient to enable the repairs to be executed had elapsed since the time when the fact of the service of the notice had come to the knowledge of any such person<sup>12</sup>.

Where a lessor serves on the lessee a notice<sup>13</sup> that relates to a breach of a covenant or agreement to keep or put in repair during the currency of the lease<sup>14</sup> all or any of the property comprised in the lease, and at the date of the service of the notice three years or more of the term of the lease remain unexpired, the lessee may within 28 days from that date serve on the lessor a counter-notice<sup>15</sup> to the effect that he claims the benefit of the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938<sup>16</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease' includes an original or derivative underlease, an agreement for a lease where the lessee has become entitled to have his lease granted and a grant at a fee farm rent, or securing a rent by condition (Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(5)(a)); 'underlease' includes an agreement for an underlease where the underlessee has become entitled to have his underlease granted (s 146(5)(d)); 'lessee' includes an original or derivative underlessee, and the persons deriving title under a lessee and also a grantee under any such grant as aforesaid and the persons deriving title under him (s 146(5)(b)); and 'underlessee' includes any person deriving title under an underlessee (s 146(5)(e)). The particular lessee required to be served under s 146(1) is the person who, vis-à-vis the lessor, is bound to remedy a breach or to make compensation in money; the relationship of lessor and lessee is unaffected by a mortgage, and that remains the position even if the mortgagee takes possession: Smith v Spaul [2002] EWCA Civ 1830, [2003] QB 983, [2003] 1 All ER 509, CA.

2 ie by action (now generally known as a 'claim': see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 18) or otherwise (ie by peaceable entry: see Re Riggs, ex p Lovell [1901] 2 KB 16 at 20). See also Howard v Fanshawe [1895] 2 Ch 581.

3 For these purposes 'lessor' includes an original or derivative underlessor, and the persons deriving title under a lessor; and also a person making a grant at a fee farm rent, or securing a rent by condition and the persons deriving title under him: Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(5)(c).

4 The statutory provisions as to service of a notice on the tenant and the tenant's right to apply to the court for relief against forfeiture (see the text and notes 10-16 infra; and PARA 620 et seq post) cannot be avoided by disguising what is in truth and substance a forfeiture as some other form of transaction: Plymouth Corpn v Harvey [1971] 1 All ER 623, [1971] 1 WLR 549 (where there was an arrangement by which the tenant executed a deed of surrender in escrow and handed it to a third person to be handed to the landlord upon a specified breach of covenant, and this was held to be a forfeiture not a surrender). See also Richard Clarke & Co Ltd v Widnall [1976] 3 All ER 301, [1976] 1 WLR 845, CA; and PARA 628 note 3 post. The statutory provisions do not, however, apply where the re-entry is by operation of law and not under a proviso or stipulation in a lease: see Warner v Sampson [1958] 1 QB 404, [1958] 1 All ER 44; and PARA 626 note 17 post. As to the statutory restrictions on serving a notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) with regard to residential tenancies see PARA 610 et seq ante.

No such notice is required, and s 146 (as amended) does not apply, in relation to:

- 39 (1) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre (see the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 84(1), (3)(b) (substituted by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 96); the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 7(1), (3)(b); and PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARAS 532, 658);
- 40 (2) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation (see the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 s 149(3)(b) (amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 s 66(2)(a), (3)(c)); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 157).

5 Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1), which replaced the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 14(1) (repealed). The Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1) does not, however, destroy the landlord's right of re-entry, but merely gives the tenant a chance to remedy the situation: Creswell v Davidson (1887) 56 LT 811. A notice served after the landlord has taken possession is effective: see Fuller v Judy Properties Ltd (1991) 64 P & CR 176, [1992] 1 EGLR 75, CA. Where the breach of covenant is an assignment of the lease without the landlord's consent, the assignment is still effective to vest the lease in the assignee and the statutory notice should be addressed to and served on the assignee: Old Grovebury Manor Farm Ltd v W Seymour Plant Sales and Hire Ltd (No 2) [1979] 3 All ER 504, [1979] 1 WLR 1397, CA. If the prospective tenant has already committed breaches of the intended covenants, he is not entitled to have his lease granted, and so cannot obtain the statutory relief: Coatsworth v Johnson (1886) 55 LJQB 220, CA. The Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) does not, save as otherwise mentioned, affect the law relating to re-entry or forfeiture or relief in case of non-payment of rent and has effect notwithstanding any stipulation to the contrary: s 146(11), (12).

Where the landlord has waived a breach of a covenant to repair by receipt of rent accruing due during the currency of the notice, but no repairs have been done at the expiration of the notice, he may sue for possession without serving a fresh notice (Penton v Barnett [1898] 1 QB 276, CA); nor is a fresh notice required where some of the repairs are executed and rent has been accepted after the expiry of the notice, if after the acceptance of rent the notice remains not fully complied with (New River Co v Crumpton [1917] 1 KB 762). The same principle probably applies to any continuing breach of covenant: see PARA 617 ante. In Guilemar v Silverthorne (1908) 99 LT 584, it was held that the forfeiture was waived by the execution of some of the repairs and by the landlord carrying on negotiations for a new lease; but this decision was not followed in New River Co v Crumpton supra, where the decision in Penton v Barnett supra was preferred. It is not necessary in proceedings to recover possession for breach of covenant to allege specifically that the notice has been served on the tenant: Gates v WA and RJ Jacobs Ltd [1920] 1 Ch 567; and see also Expert Clothing Service & Sales Ltd v Hillgate House Ltd [1986] Ch 340, [1985] 2 All ER 998, CA; but as to the caution to be exercised in the use of pre-CPR authorities see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 33.

The Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) applies although the proviso or stipulation under which the right of re-entry or forfeiture accrues is inserted in the lease in pursuance of the directions of any Act of Parliament: s 146(6). For the purposes of s 146 (as amended), a lease limited to continue as long only as the lessee abstains from committing a breach of covenant is and takes effect as a lease to continue for any longer term for which it could subsist, but determinable by a proviso for re-entry on such a breach: s 146(7).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/620. What notice is required.

620. What notice is required.

The notice of breach of covenant must be so distinct as to direct the tenant's attention to the particular things of which the landlord complains in order that the tenant may have an opportunity of remedying them before a claim to enforce the forfeiture is begun<sup>1</sup>. It must also be sufficient to inform the tenant of what is complained of, but it need not identify every defect or amount to a detailed specification of the work to be done<sup>2</sup>. The notice will not be invalid because, in attempting to enumerate the specific breaches, it includes some breaches which have not been committed<sup>3</sup>. Nor will it be invalid because, in addition to referring to covenants which do exist, it refers to a covenant which does not exist<sup>4</sup>.

It is not necessary that the notice should require payment of compensation in money<sup>5</sup>, nor, where the breach is incapable of remedy<sup>6</sup>, need the notice require it to be remedied<sup>7</sup>. If the breach is capable of remedy and the notice fails to require its remedy, the notice will be insufficient; if there is any doubt as to whether the breach is or is not capable of remedy, it is sufficient in the notice to require the remedy of the breach 'if it is capable of remedy'<sup>8</sup>. The notice may state a time within which the breach is to be remedied, but the landlord will not be entitled to re-enter at the end of the stated period unless the time is in fact reasonable<sup>9</sup>. Even if the breach is incapable of remedy, a reasonable time must be given to the tenant between the service of the notice and the beginning of proceedings against him<sup>10</sup>.

1 Fletcher v Nokes [1897] 1 Ch 271 (notice that the tenant had broken the covenants to repair, without giving any details of the want of repair, held to be insufficient); Re Serle, Gregory v Serle [1898] 1 Ch 652; Jolly v Brown [1914] 2 KB 109, CA (affd sub nom Fox v Jolly [1916] 1 AC 1, HL); Davenport v Smith [1921] 2 Ch 270; and see Akici v LR Butlin Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 1296, [2006] 2 All ER 872, [2006] 1 WLR 201 (notice alleging breach of covenant against assignment or subletting or parting with possession of the premises insufficient as the tenant had merely shared possession). The notice need not, however, specify the particular acts which the tenant must do: Piggott v Middlesex County Council [1909] 1 Ch 134 at 147; Fox v Jolly supra.

2 Fox v Jolly [1916] 1 AC 1, HL, where the notice concluded 'and note that the completion of the items mentioned in this schedule does not excuse the execution of other repairs if found necessary'. It was held that the notice was not thereby invalidated, but that the landlord had merely reserved his rights if he later discovered a further breach. See also Adagio Properties Ltd v Ansari [1998] 2 EGLR 69, [1998] 05 LS Gaz R 30 (in a case of alleged breach of covenant against alterations, it was sufficient to allege division into two flats); and PARA 626 note 17 post.

3 Matthews v Usher [1900] 2 QB 535, CA; Pannell v City of London Brewery Co [1900] 1 Ch 496, followed in McIlvenny v McKeever [1931] NI 161, NI CA; Blewett v Blewett [1936] 2 All ER 188, CA. The notice will, however, be invalid if it claims in respect of special covenants to repair which are additional to those contained in the lease (Guillemard v Silverthorne (1908) 99 LT 584), or refers to the wrong covenant (Jacob v Down [1900] 2 Ch 156).

4 Silvester v Ostrowska [1959] 3 All ER 642, [1959] 1 WLR 1060 (distinguishing Guillemard v Silverthorne (1908) 99 LT 584), where a notice to remedy a breach of covenant to repair also referred to a breach of a non-existing covenant against subletting.

5 Lock v Pearce [1893] 2 Ch 271, CA; Civil Service Co-operative Society v McGrigor's Trustee [1923] 2 Ch 347; Rugby School Governors v Tannahill [1935] 1 KB 87, CA.

6 Certain breaches of covenant are, by their very nature, irremediable: see Rugby School Governors v Tannahill [1935] 1 KB 87, CA (use of house for immoral purposes); Egerton v Esplanade Hotels London Ltd [1947] 2 All ER 88 (hotel used as brothel); Hoffmann v Fineberg [1949] Ch 245, [1948] 1 All ER 592 (use as gaming house); Barthwick-Norton v Romney Warwick Estates Ltd [1950] 1 All ER 798, CA (sublet flat used as brothel); Bickerton's Aerodromes Ltd v Young (1958) 108 L Jo 218 (breaches of licensing laws); Ali v Booth (1966) 110 Sol Jo 708, CA (conviction under food and drugs regulations); Scala House and District Property Co Ltd v Forbes [1974] QB 575, [1973] 3 All ER 308, CA (breach of covenant not to assign, sublet or part with possession of the demised premises); DR Evans & Co v Chandler (1969) 211 Estates Gazette 1381 (use of premises so as to give them a stigma or bad name which would last well beyond the cessation of the use). Whether the breach of a covenant not to suffer distress is remediable depends upon the particular circumstances of the case; if the landlord has sustained no undue injury, and no undue notoriety has attached to the premises, the breach may be remediable on payment of the rent due and the costs of the landlord's distress: Hartley v Larkin (1950) 66 (Pt I) TLR 896. In Glass v Kencakes Ltd [1966] 1 QB 611, [1964] 3 All ER 807, it was held that an immoral use by a subtenant was not a breach incapable of remedy by a head tenant when the head tenant did not know of it and took all reasonable steps to stop it when he found out; cf British Petroleum Pension Trust Ltd v Behrendt (1985) 52 P & CR 117, 18 HLR 42, CA (cited in PARAS 22 note 4, 500 ante). Most, if not all, breaches of positive covenants, whether continuous or once and for all, are capable of remedy: Expert Clothing Service & Sales Ltd v Hillgate House Ltd [1986] Ch 340, [1985] 2 All ER 998, CA.

7 Rugby School Governors v Tannahill [1935] 1 KB 87, CA.

8 Glass v Kencakes Ltd [1966] 1 QB 611, [1964] 3 All ER 807; Expert Clothing Service & Sales Ltd v Hillgate House Ltd [1986] Ch 340, [1985] 2 All ER 998, CA (a breach of a positive covenant is distinguishable from a breach of a negative covenant and is remediable if the remedy is carried out within a reasonable time); Savva v Houssein (1996) 73 P & CR 150, [1996] 2 EGLR 65, CA (test suggested to be whether mischief resulting from the breach can be removed).

9 Horsey Estate Ltd v Steiger [1899] 2 QB 79 at 92, CA; Civil Service Co-operative Society v McGrigor's Trustee [1923] 2 Ch 347 (14 days' notice held to be sufficient). A three months' notice will usually be reasonable (see Penton v Barnett [1898] 1 QB 276, CA; Gulliver Investments v Abbott [1966] EGD 299); but, where the notice applies to all the premises and a longer period is necessary in respect of part, it must be allowed in respect of the whole (Hopley v Tarvin Parish Council (1910) 74 JP 209). See also Cardigan Properties Ltd v Consolidated Property Investments Ltd [1991] 1 EGLR 64; Courtney Lodge Management Ltd v Blake [2004] EWCA Civ 975, [2005] 1 P & CR 17, [2004] All ER (D) 30 (Jul) (landlord did not afford tenant reasonable period of time in which to remedy the breach before issue of proceedings). The defence that the time allowed was not reasonable need not be specifically pleaded: Hopley v Tarvin Parish Council supra; but as to the caution to be exercised in the use of pre-CPR authorities see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 33.

10 Horsey Estate Ltd v Steiger [1899] 2 QB 79, CA; Scala House and District Property Co Ltd v Forbes [1974] QB 575, [1973] 3 All ER 308, CA. In such a case the purpose of allowing to the tenant a period of time is so that he will have an opportunity to consider his position generally and in particular to consider such matters as whether he should apply for relief and offer compensation to the landlord. In Horsey Estate Ltd v Steiger supra two days was held not to be a reasonable time; whereas in Scala House and District Property Co Ltd v Forbes supra 14 days was held to be a sufficient time.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/621. Service of notice.

621. Service of notice.

Any notice<sup>1</sup> served on a lessee<sup>2</sup> or mortgagor<sup>3</sup> is sufficient, although only addressed to the lessee or mortgagor by that designation, without his name, or generally to the persons interested, without any name, and notwithstanding that any person to be affected by the notice is absent, under disability, unborn, or unascertained<sup>4</sup>. Any notice is sufficiently served if it is left at the last-known place of abode or business in the United Kingdom<sup>5</sup> of the lessee, lessor<sup>6</sup>, mortgagee, mortgagor, or other person to be served<sup>7</sup>, or, in case of a notice required or authorised to be served on a lessee or mortgagor, is affixed or left for him<sup>8</sup> on the land<sup>9</sup> or any house or building comprised in the lease or mortgage, or, in the case of a mining lease<sup>10</sup>, is left for the lessee at the office or counting-house of the mine<sup>11</sup>. Notice is also sufficiently served if it is sent by post in a registered letter<sup>12</sup> addressed to the lessee, lessor, mortgagee, mortgagor, or other person to be served, by name and that letter is not returned by the postal operator<sup>13</sup> concerned undelivered; and that service is deemed to be made at the time at which the registered letter would in the ordinary course be delivered<sup>14</sup>. The notice must be served before the alleged breach is remedied<sup>15</sup>.

1    Ie under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(1): see PARA 619 ante. Any notice required or authorised to be served or given under the Law of Property Act 1925 must be in writing: s 196(1). Service is presumed if the statutory requirements are complied with, even though the notice is never received: see R v Westminster Union Assessment Committee, ex p Woodward & Sons [1917] 1 KB 832, 86 LJKB 698; but see also Holwell Securities Ltd v Hughes [1974] 1 All ER 161, [1974] 1 WLR 155, CA.

2    For the meaning of 'lessee' see PARA 145 note 3 ante. A notice served upon an equitable assignee of a lease by name is not an effective service on the lessee: see Gentle v Faulkner [1900] 2 QB 267, 69 LJQB 777, CA. A notice addressed to the original lessee and 'all others whom it both or may concern' and served on the person in occupation of the demised premises is sufficiently addressed to and validly served on the assignee of the lease: see Cronin v Rogers (1884) Cab & El 348.

3    For these purposes, 'mortgagor' includes any person from time to time deriving title under the original mortgagor or entitled to redeem a mortgage according to his estate, interest or right in the mortgaged property; and 'mortgage' includes any charge or lien on any property for securing money or money's worth: Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(xvi).

4    Ibid s 196(2).

5    Any reference in ibid s 196(3) or (4) (see the text and notes 6-14 infra) to the last known place of abode or business of the person to be served has effect, in its application to a notice to be served by a tenant on a landlord of premises to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt VI (ss 46-50) (as amended) (see PARAS 53, 257 ante), as if that reference included a reference to (1) the address last furnished to the tenant by the landlord in accordance with s 48 (as amended) (see PARA 53 ante); or (2) if no address has been so furnished in accordance with s 48 (as amended), the address last furnished to the tenant by the landlord in accordance with s 47 (as amended) (see PARA 257 ante): s 49. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 25 note 18 ante.

6    For the meaning of 'lessor' see PARA 240 note 6 ante.

7    If there is more than one lessee, all the lessees must be served: Blewett v Blewett [1936] 2 All ER 188, CA. Where the legal estate in the lease is vested in the Public Trustee, eg under the Law of Property Act 1925 Sch 1 Pt IV para 1(4) (as amended), the Public Trustee must be served: Blewett v Blewett supra. There is no requirement that a mortgagee or underlessee must be served: Church Comrs for England v Ve-Ri-Best Manufacturing Co Ltd [1957] 1 QB 238, [1956] 3 All ER 777; Egerton v Jones [1939] 2 KB 702, [1939] 3 All ER 889, CA.

8    The notice will be left for the tenant if it is left with some person on the premises provided there is reasonable ground for supposing that that person will pass it on to the tenant if possible: Cannon Brewery Co Ltd v Signal Press Ltd (1928) 139 LT 384.

9    For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

10   For these purposes, 'mining lease' means a lease for mining purposes, ie the searching for, winning, working, getting, making merchantable, carrying away, or disposing of mines and minerals, or purposes connected therewith, and includes a grant or licence for mining purposes: Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1) (xiv).

11 Ibid s 196(3); and see Trustees of Henry Smith's Charity v Kyriakou (1989) 22 HLR 66, [1989] 2 EGLR 110, CA; Blunden v Frogmore Investments Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 573 at [53], [2003] 2 P & CR 84, [2002] 2 EGLR 29, obiter, per Robert Walker LJ (fixing of notice to building which was inaccessible because of security measures constituted sufficient service).

12 In a neighbourhood in which there is no usual delivery, service by registered post is not good: see Lewis v Evans (1874) LR 10 CP 297; but it is questionable whether on the facts in that case, in which there was no delivery within two miles of the premises in question, it would now be held that letters were not delivered in the ordinary course.

13 Ie within the meaning of the Postal Services Act 2000: see s 125(1); and POST OFFICE.

14 Law of Property Act 1925 s 196(4) (amended by the Postal Services Act 2000 (Consequential Modifications No 1) Order 2001, SI 2001/1149, art 3(1), Sch 1 para 7); Recorded Delivery Service Act 1962 s 1(1). See also the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 18(2); and PARA 449 ante. In Stephenson & Son v Orca Properties Ltd [1989] 2 EGLR 129 it was held that delivery in the ordinary course of post, in the case of recorded delivery letters, requires an available recipient; but this was not followed in WX Investments Ltd v Begg [2002] EWHC 925 (Ch), [2002] 1 WLR 2849, [2002] 3 EGLR 47 (recorded delivery letter posted several days before expiry of notice period but delivered after expiry of that period as previous attempts by the Post Office to deliver it were abortive; held that notice was deemed to have been served within the notice period); and see Re 88 Berkeley Road, London NW9, Rickwood v Turnsek [1971] Ch 648, [1971] 1 All ER 254 (letter of severance of joint tenancy sent recorded delivery held to have been served even though it was alleged not to have been received by the plaintiff). ## UPDATE

621 Service of notice

TEXT AND NOTE 1--A notice to quit served by a council is not a notice required or authorised to be given by the 1925 Act s 196: Enfield LBC v Devonish (1996) 74 P & CR 288, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/622. Tenant's right to relief.

622. Tenant's right to relief.

Where a lessor<sup>1</sup> is proceeding to enforce the right of re-entry or forfeiture<sup>2</sup>, the lessee<sup>3</sup> may, in the lessor's claim<sup>4</sup>, if any, or in any claim brought by himself, apply to the court for relief<sup>5</sup>.

The right to apply for relief is available in the High Court or a county court<sup>6</sup>. The application may be made before or after the landlord has actually re-entered<sup>7</sup>. A court cannot, however, grant relief if the landlord has obtained a judgment for possession against the tenant and has entered into possession pursuant to that judgment<sup>8</sup>. The tenant may apply in the landlord's claim or may himself bring a claim and apply for relief but relief cannot be granted to joint tenants unless they both apply for it<sup>9</sup>. The landlord need not make a mortgagee a party to the claim or inform the mortgagee of the proceedings<sup>10</sup>.

The court may grant or refuse relief, as the court, having regard to the proceedings and conduct of the parties, and to all the other circumstances, thinks fit; and in case of relief may grant it on such terms, if any, as to costs<sup>11</sup>, expenses, damages, compensation, penalty or otherwise, including the granting of an injunction to restrain any like breach in the future, as the court, in the circumstances of each case, thinks fit<sup>12</sup>. In each case the court will consider all the circumstances and the conduct of the parties, the nature and gravity of the breach and its relation to the value of the property<sup>13</sup>, in deciding whether relief should be granted, and, if so, upon what terms<sup>14</sup>. There is no rule that relief is granted only in exceptional circumstances<sup>15</sup>. Although relief is normally granted where the tenant remedies the breach and is able and willing to perform his obligations in the future, it may still be refused in exceptional circumstances, as, for example, where the tenant has shown himself personally unsuitable<sup>16</sup> or where the tenant grants an underlease on terms which disregard the undertakings in the licence to underlet<sup>17</sup>. Relief may, however, in an appropriate case be granted even where the breach is serious<sup>18</sup> or is incapable of remedy<sup>19</sup>. In certain circumstances relief may be granted in respect of a part only of the demised premises<sup>20</sup>. Where relief is granted subject to a condition with a time limit, the court may extend the time for compliance<sup>21</sup>. Where the landlord grants a lease of the premises to a bona fide third party purchaser for value without notice of the tenant's right to relief, the court may grant relief subject to the lease held by the third party, the tenant being put into the position of immediate reversioner of the third party's lease<sup>22</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lessor' for these purposes see PARA 619 note 3 ante.

2 I.e. by action (now known as a 'claim': see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 18) or otherwise. If the notice has not been served, the landlord's claim to enforce the forfeiture will necessarily fail (Greenfield v Hanson (1886) 2 TLR 876; Jacques v Harrison (1884) 12 QBD 165, CA); but a notice is not a necessary preliminary of a claim for a receiver (Charrington & Co Ltd v Camp [1902] 1 Ch 386; Leney & Sons Ltd v Callingham and Thompson [1908] 1 KB 79, CA). Nor can the landlord obtain a mere declaration of forfeiture not to be followed by re-entry: Wilson v Rosenthal (1906) 22 TLR 233.

3 For the meaning of 'lessee' for these purposes see PARA 619 note 1 ante. See, however, Escalus Properties Ltd v Robinson, Escalus Properties Ltd v Dennis, Escalus Properties Ltd v Cooper-Smith, Sinclair Gardens Investments (Kensington) Ltd v Walsh [1996] QB 231, [1995] 4 All ER 852, CA (as a matter of construction, the class of lessees who are entitled to apply to the court for retrospective relief under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(2) is not restricted to those who are in privity of contract or estate with the lessor, but extends to a mortgagee by way of sub-demise seeking relief against forfeiture).

4 The statutory wording is 'action'; but see note 2 supra.

5 Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(2). Originally relief against forfeiture was a creation of the Court of Chancery. Relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent would readily be granted but relief in other cases was rare: Hill v Barclay (1811) 18 Ves 56. In the field of landlord and tenant the old equitable jurisdiction has been replaced by a statutory jurisdiction for breaches other than non-payment of rent: see Billson v Residential Apartments Ltd [1992] 1 AC 494, [1992] 1 All ER 141, HL; Smith v Metropolitan City Properties Ltd [1986] 1 EGLR 52, (1985) 277 Estates Gazette 753; cf Abbey National Building Society v Maybeech Ltd [1985] Ch 190, [1984] 3 All ER 262. Nonetheless the equitable jurisdiction remains and can be invoked in suitable cases: see Shiloh Spinners Ltd v Harding [1973] AC 691, [1973] 1 All ER 90, HL; Thatcher v CH Pearce & Sons (Contractors) Ltd [1968] 1 WLR 748, 19 P & CR 682. See also Rexhaven Ltd v Nurse (1995) 28 HLR 241, [1995] EGCS 125 (application for relief from forfeiture for breach of service charge covenant).

It is probable that a claim for relief may not be brought until the landlord has served a statutory notice: Pakwood Transport Ltd v 15 Beauchamp Place (1978) 36 P & CR 112 at 116, 117, CA. See also Barton, Thompson & Co Ltd v Stapling Machines Co [1966] Ch 499 at 508, [1966] 2 All ER 222 at 224. It is only when the landlord has served a statutory notice that he can be said to be proceeding to forfeit the lease; the fact that a landlord has served the requisite statutory notice does not necessarily mean that he is entitled to refuse an application by the tenant for consent to assign the lease, and the court may grant relief against forfeiture and a declaration that consent to an assignment has been unreasonably withheld: Pakwood Transport Ltd v 15 Beauchamp Place supra.

6 The county court has jurisdiction whatever the amount involved in the proceedings and whatever the value of any fund or asset connected with the proceedings: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(13) (added by the County Courts Act 1984 s 148(1), Sch 2 para 5; amended by the High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, 1991/724, art 2(1)(a), (8), Schedule Pt I). Relief may be given upon a counterclaim by the tenant in the landlord's claim for possession: Warden etc of Cholmeley's School at Highgate v Sewell [1893] 2 QB 254; and see CPR Pt 20.4. As to possession proceedings see PARA 656 et seq post.

7 Billson v Residential Apartments Ltd [1992] 1 AC 494, [1992] 1 All ER 141, HL, distinguishing Rogers v Rice [1892] 2 Ch 170, CA; Quilter v Mapleson (1882) 9 QBD 672 and Pakwood Transport Ltd v 15 Beauchamp Place (1977) 36 P & CR 112; and see Lock v Pearce [1893] 2 Ch 271 at 274, CA; Scott v Matthew Brown & Co Ltd (1884) 51 LT 746. Where a landlord claims possession in the High Court and seeks final judgment, the tenant's right to relief is a true equitable defence and counterclaim for such relief for which unconditional leave to defend should be given: Liverpool Properties Ltd v Oldbridge Investments Ltd [1985] 2 EGLR 111, CA; Sambrin Investments Ltd v Taborn [1990] 1 EGLR 61. As to the caution to be exercised in the use of pre-CPR authorities, however, see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 33.

8 Billson v Residential Apartments Ltd [1992] 1 AC 494, [1992] 1 All ER 141, HL, affirming Rogers v Rice [1892] 2 Ch 170, CA. Cf, however, Rexhaven Ltd v Nurse and Alliance & Leicester Building Society (1995) 28 HLR 241, [1995] EGCS 125 (court has jurisdiction to set aside a judgment of possession and to grant a mortgagee relief from forfeiture after execution of such a judgment, although such relief will be granted only in exceptional circumstances if the mortgagee was properly informed of the proceedings).

11 An order against an applicant for costs on an indemnity basis should not be made as a condition of granting relief against forfeiture of a lease, since indemnity costs encourage lawyers and surveyors to charge large fees, there is no inducement to the landlord to compromise his dispute with the tenant and there is no reason why an unsuccessful applicant for relief should be in any worse position than any other unsuccessful litigant: Billson v Residential Apartments Ltd [1992] 1 AC 494, [1992] 1 All ER 141, HL.

12 Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(2), replacing the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 14(2). The right to relief is a chose in action and devolves, in the event of the tenant's bankruptcy, on his trustee, who may assign it to a purchaser: Howard v Fanshawe [1895] 2 Ch 581 at 589.

14 Hyman v Rose [1912] AC 623, HL; Egerton v Esplanade Hotels London Ltd [1947] 2 All ER 88. Immediate rectification of the breach of covenant is not in all cases an essential prerequisite of relief: Duke of Westminster v Swinton [1948] 1 KB 524, [1948] 1 All ER 248. As to the conditions of relief see Quilter v Mapleson (1882) 9 QBD 672, CA; North London Freehold Land and House Co v Jacques (1883) 49 LT 659; Bond v Freke [1884] WN 47. As to the conditions which were imposed where relief was granted in a case where the landlord had suffered no appreciable damage see Associated Omnibus Co Ltd v Idris & Co Ltd (1919) 148 LT Jo 157.

15 As to the considerations which influenced the court in granting relief see Ropemaker Properties Ltd v Noonhaven Ltd [1989] 2 EGLR 50; Southern Depot Co Ltd v British Railways Board [1990] 2 EGLR 39; Khar v Delmounty Ltd (1996) 75 P & CR 232, CA. In appropriate cases an appellate court can exercise a fresh discretion under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(2) where circumstances have changed and new evidence is available, but it is important to distinguish between a change of circumstances and a change of heart: Darlington Borough Council v Denmark Chemists Ltd [1993] 1 EGLR 62, [1993] 02 EG 117, CA (fresh evidence directed to the willingness and financial ability of the appellant to remedy the breach did not show a change of circumstances).

19 See eg Scala House and District Property Co Ltd v Forbes [1974] QB 575, [1973] 3 All ER 308, CA. The very facts which make the breach incapable of remedy may, however, also be a reason for refusing relief: see eg Ali v Booth (1966) 110 Sol Jo 708, CA.

623. Compensation and costs.

If the tenant has remedied the breach, he will be required to make compensation only where the landlord has in fact suffered loss; and, in general, where compensation is given, it will be measured by the same rule as damages in a claim for breach of the covenant<sup>1</sup>.

A lessor<sup>2</sup> is entitled to recover as a debt due to him from a lessee<sup>3</sup>, and in addition to damages, if any, all reasonable costs and expenses properly incurred by the lessor in the employment of a solicitor and surveyor or valuer, or otherwise, in reference to any breach giving rise to a right of re-entry or forfeiture which, at the request of the lessee, is waived by the lessor, or from which the lessee is relieved<sup>4</sup> unless the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938<sup>5</sup> applies, in which case those costs can be recovered only if the lessor applies to the court for leave to proceed under that Act and on the application the court directs that the lessor is entitled to recover those costs<sup>6</sup>.

In general it is a condition of relief that the tenant pays the costs of the landlord's claim for possession including the costs of the application for relief<sup>7</sup>.

1 Skinner's Co v Knight [1891] 2 QB 542, CA; and see PARA 459 ante. The measure of damages for breach of a covenant to use as a private dwelling house may be the cost of reinstatement (Eyre v Rea [1947] KB 567, [1947] 1 All ER 415) or only part of it (Duke of Westminster v Swinton [1948] 1 KB 524, [1948] 1 All ER 248).

Such costs could not be included in damages, although their payment might be made a condition of relief: Bond v Freke [1884] WN 47; Bridge v Quick (1892) 61 LJ QB 375. They are recoverable only where the landlord waives the breach by writing under his hand, or where the tenant is relieved under the statute, not where the tenant complies with the notice and so avoids the forfeiture: Nind v Nineteenth Century Building Society [1894] 2 QB 226, CA.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/624. Effect of order on lease; non-compliance with conditions of order.

624. Effect of order on lease; non-compliance with conditions of order.

Where relief is granted, it is not necessary for a new lease to be executed as the tenant continues to hold the premises under the old lease<sup>1</sup>. Where relief is granted subject to conditions to be performed within a certain time, then, until those conditions are performed or the time expires, the status of the tenant is that of a tenant at will or a tenant at sufferance only<sup>2</sup>. As long as the tenant is pursuing in good faith a claim for relief against forfeiture, his lease cannot, however, be said to have come to an end for all purposes<sup>3</sup>.

The tenant cannot be compelled to perform the conditions of relief, and, if he declines to do so, the order for relief will be treated as abandoned<sup>4</sup>. If the order fixes a time limit for performance of the conditions, the court has power to extend the time limit<sup>5</sup>.

Where a lease contains a rent review clause, the court should attach some condition to the grant of relief preserving the landlord's rights under that clause<sup>6</sup>.

The effect of the compromise of a forfeiture claim is that the lease is fully restored and there is no need for the grant of relief from forfeiture<sup>7</sup>. Where the landlord discontinues forfeiture proceedings against the tenant, it has been held that the effect of the discontinuance is to resurrect the lease from the 'twilight' period in which it was prospectively terminated during the pendency of those proceedings<sup>8</sup>.

Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/625.
Covenant against assignment.

625. Covenant against assignment.

Relief could not be granted against forfeiture in respect of a breach of covenant or condition against assigning, underletting or parting with the possession or disposing of the land leased<sup>1</sup>, where the breach occurred before 1 January 1926<sup>2</sup>. With regard to breaches of such covenants and conditions on or after that date, the same requirements as to notice<sup>3</sup> must be complied with as in the case of breaches of other covenants before the landlord can enforce any right of re-entry or forfeiture and the tenant can similarly obtain relief<sup>4</sup>.

1 Such covenants and conditions were excepted from the operation of the Conveyancing Act 1881 s 14 (repealed), replaced by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended); and thus no notice had to be given prior to enforcing a right of re-entry or forfeiture, nor could relief in such a case be obtained in equity: Barrow v Isaacs & Son [1891] 1 QB 417, CA; Ellis v Allen [1914] 1 Ch 904; Atkin v Rose [1923] 1 Ch 522. The exception did not include a covenant against sharing possession (Jackson v Simons [1923] 1 Ch 373), nor one against assigning for the benefit of creditors (Gentle v Faulkner [1900] 2 QB 267, CA), but did include a covenant against parting with possession of part of the premises (Abrahams v MacFisheries Ltd [1925] 2 KB 18, which did not follow the judgment of Scrutton LJ in Russell v Beecham [1924] 1 KB 525, CA, but which was followed in Carrington Manufacturing Co v Saldin Ltd (1925) 133 LT 432).

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/626. Where restrictions and relief inapplicable.

626. Where restrictions and relief inapplicable.

The statutory provisions relating to the service of notices and the grant of relief against forfeiture<sup>1</sup> do not apply to a condition for forfeiture on bankruptcy<sup>2</sup> of the lessee<sup>3</sup>, or on taking in execution of the lessee's interest if contained in a lease<sup>4</sup> of:

- 1283 (1) agricultural or pastoral land<sup>5</sup>;
- 1284 (2) mines or minerals<sup>6</sup>;
- 1285 (3) a house used or intended to be used as a public house<sup>7</sup>;
- 1286 (4) a house let as a dwelling house with the use of any furniture, books, works of art, or other chattels not being in the nature of fixtures<sup>8</sup>;
- 1287 (5) any property with respect to which the tenant's personal qualifications are of importance for the preservation of the value or character of the property or on the ground of neighbourhood to the lessor<sup>9</sup> or to any person holding under him<sup>10</sup>.

In the case of leases other than those mentioned in heads (1) to (5) above, those statutory provisions apply to the forfeiture condition if the lessee's interest is sold<sup>11</sup> within one year from the bankruptcy or taking in execution; if his interest is not sold within that year, they apply only to the forfeiture condition during the first year from the date of the bankruptcy or taking in execution<sup>12</sup>. Hence, within the year, and afterwards if there has been a sale within the year, notice must be given before forfeiture and relief may be granted<sup>13</sup>. Notice is also required where the landlord is entitled to forfeit the lease upon the bankruptcy of the surety of the tenant's obligations<sup>14</sup>.

The statutory provisions<sup>15</sup> do not apply to forfeiture for non-payment of rent<sup>16</sup> but it is now clear that they do apply to forfeiture by reason of denial by the tenant of the landlord's title and to any other implied terms in the lease<sup>17</sup>.

6    Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(9)(b). TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/A. BREACH OF COVENANT OTHER THAN NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/627. Underlessee's right to relief or to a vesting order.

627. Underlessee's right to relief or to a vesting order.

Where a lessor<sup>1</sup> is proceeding<sup>2</sup> to enforce a right of re-entry or forfeiture under any covenant, proviso, or stipulation in a lease<sup>3</sup>, or for non-payment of rent, the court may, on application by any person claiming as underlessee<sup>4</sup> any estate or interest in the property comprised in the lease, either in the lessor's claim, if any, or in any claim brought by such person for that purpose<sup>5</sup>, make an order vesting, for the whole term of the lease or any less term, the property comprised in the lease or any part of it in any person entitled as underlessee to any estate or interest in such property upon such conditions as to execution of any deed or other document, payment of rent<sup>6</sup>, costs<sup>7</sup>, expenses, damages, compensation, giving security or otherwise, as the court in the circumstances of each case may think fit; in no case, however, is any such underlessee entitled to require a lease to be granted to him for any longer term than he had under his original sublease<sup>8</sup>. The estate so vested is a new estate<sup>9</sup> which commences from the date the vesting order takes effect<sup>10</sup>; and the underlessee will normally be required to enter into covenants in all respects the same, or at least as stringent, as the covenants in the original lease<sup>11</sup>. It follows that the landlord will be entitled to the rents and profits from the land<sup>12</sup>, or to a sum by way of compensation equivalent to mesne profits<sup>13</sup>, for the period between the termination of the former head tenancy and the creation by the vesting order of the former subtenant's new tenancy<sup>14</sup>, at least in relation to such part of that period as the landlord has been kept out of possession<sup>15</sup>. A new lease so granted to a mortgagee<sup>16</sup> is a substituted security and is subject to the mortgage<sup>17</sup>. The court has power<sup>18</sup> to grant such relief to an underlessee against conditions of forfeiture on bankruptcy<sup>19</sup>, and against forfeiture for non-payment of rent<sup>20</sup>, and for breach of covenants of any description, but the power is clearly discretionary and has been exercised sparingly and with caution<sup>21</sup>. The court is entitled to exercise its discretion in refusing to grant relief where the underlessee will not accept the repairing liabilities of the forfeited headlease<sup>22</sup>.

Where the superior landlord fails to inform an underlessee of the forfeiture of the headlease, and the rents reserved by the underlease continue to be demanded and paid, the superior landlord may be estopped from denying that the underlessee holds by the term of the underlease. The grant of relief to a subtenant does not reinstate sub-underleases which determined upon forfeiture of the head lease<sup>23</sup>.

A liquidator of an underlessee company may apply for relief from forfeiture<sup>24</sup>.

- 1 For the meaning of 'lessor' for these purposes see PARA 619 note 3 ante.
  - 2 le by action (now known as a 'claim': see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 18) or otherwise.
  - 3 For the meaning of 'lease' for these purposes see PARA 619 note 1 ante.
  - 4 For the meaning of 'underlessee' see PARA 619 note 1 ante. Where a legal mortgage of land is created by deed expressed to be by way of legal mortgage, the mortgagee has the same protection, powers and remedies as if a mortgage term or, as the case may be, a sub-term, had been created: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 87(1); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 191. Thus, 'underlessee' includes a person having a mortgage by sub-demise or by way of legal charge, and a person having the right to call for such a mortgage: Re Good's Lease, Good v Wood [1954] 1 All ER 275, [1954] 1 WLR 309; Grand Junction Co Ltd v Bates [1954] 2 QB 160, [1954] 2 All ER 385; Regent Oil Co Ltd v JA Gregory (Hatch End) Ltd [1966] Ch 402, [1965] 3 All ER 673, CA; Grangeside Properties Ltd v Collingwoods Securities Ltd [1964] 1 All ER 143, [1964] 1 WLR 139, CA. While an equitable chargee does not have a direct right to apply for relief against forfeiture, there is an implied obligation on the chargor to take reasonable steps to preserve the chargee's security, which may include pursuing relief against forfeiture: Bland v Ingram's Estates Ltd [2001] Ch 767, [2002] 1 All ER 221, CA.
  - 5 An application is usually made by a counterclaim in the landlord's claim where the underlessee has been joined as a party; otherwise by an application issued by the underlessee in the landlord's claim asking to be joined as a party and seeking relief.
  - 6 The rent may be increased (Ewart v Fryer [1901] 1 Ch 499, CA; Wardens etc of Cholmeley School, Highgate v Sewell [1894] 2 QB 906 at 913), and may be restricted to part of the land originally leased (London Bridge Buildings Co v Thomson (1903) 89 LT 50).   - 7 The underlessee must pay the costs of obtaining relief (London Bridge Building Co v Thomson (1903) 89 LT 50) including the costs of an inquiry necessary to determine the new rent (Ewart v Fryer (1902) 86 LT 676) and may, as a condition of relief, be required to pay a sum equal to the costs even though he is a legally aided litigant (Factors (Sundries) Ltd v Miller [1952] 2 All ER 630, CA). See also Belgravia Insurance Co Ltd v Meah [1964] 1 QB 436, [1963] 3 All ER 828, CA; Grangeside Properties Ltd v Collingwoods Securities Ltd [1964] 1 All ER 143, [1964] 1 WLR 139, CA (both cases concerned with forfeiture for non-payment of rent). A mortgagee may be required to pay the landlord's costs of the proceedings against the tenant: see Egerton v Jones [1939] 2 KB 702, [1939] 3 All ER 889, CA (where it was conceded that the landlord's judgment for costs against the tenant ought to be assigned to the mortgagee).

See also Factors (Saundries) Ltd v Miller [1952] 2 All ER 630, CA. Relief may be available to unlawful subtenants in circumstances where the sole ground of forfeiture was non-payment of rent by the head tenant, the subtenants are able to pay the rent and the landlord has previously negotiated with the claimants about the possibility of granting them a tenancy: see Duarte v Mount Cook Land Ltd [2001] 33 EGCS 87, [2001] All ER (D) 368 (Jul).
- A distinction must be drawn between (1) relief from forfeiture properly so called whereby the original lease and underlease are reinstated as if they had never been determined by the forfeiture; and (2) a vesting order whereby a new leasehold interest is created. 'Relief from forfeiture' and 'vesting order' are used in these meanings in this paragraph and in PARA 629 post. The distinction which is now made was largely ignored until Official Custodian for Charities v Mackey [1985] Ch 168, [1984] 3 All ER 689; and confusion between the two terms is compounded by the several meanings of 'relief'; thus the relief which an undertenant seeks may be a vesting order.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/B. NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/628. Right to relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent.

B. NON-PAYMENT OF RENT

628. Right to relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent.

The proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent is regarded in equity as merely a security for the rent<sup>1</sup> and, accordingly, provided that the landlord and other persons interested can be put in the same position as before<sup>2</sup>, the tenant is entitled to be relieved against the forfeiture on payment of the rent and any expenses to which the landlord has been put<sup>3</sup>. Save in exceptional circumstances, therefore, relief will be granted on payment of the rent in arrears<sup>4</sup>, and, moreover, save in exceptional circumstances, the court will grant relief on payment of arrears of rent and costs and will disregard other breaches of covenant<sup>5</sup>.

This right to relief has been recognised, and restricted as to time, by statute. Under the Common Law Procedure Act 1852, if the landlord has brought a claim<sup>6</sup> to recover possession, then at any time before trial<sup>7</sup>, and provided that the rent is six months in arrears<sup>8</sup>, the tenant or his assignee may pay or tender to the landlord, or pay into court, all the rent in arrear, together with costs; thereupon all further proceedings are stayed, and the tenant or his assignee holds the demised land under the lease, without any new lease<sup>9</sup>. After trial and judgment for recovery of possession the tenant is still entitled to relief, but he must apply within six months from the date when the judgment was executed; after that time he is barred from relief<sup>10</sup>. If, however, he applies in time and obtains relief, he holds the demised premises in accordance with the terms of the original lease, without the necessity for a new lease<sup>11</sup>. A person who has acquired title as against the tenant by adverse possession has no right to apply for relief<sup>12</sup>. Where the landlord has re-entered peaceably without bringing proceedings, the statutory six months' time limit for an application for relief does not apply and the court may grant relief under its equitable jurisdiction outside that limit<sup>13</sup>. The jurisdiction is exercised by the High Court<sup>14</sup>.

Similarly, under the County Courts Act 1984, where a lessor<sup>15</sup> is proceeding by a claim<sup>16</sup> in a county court to enforce against a lessee<sup>17</sup> a right of re-entry or forfeiture in respect of any land for non-payment of rent, then if the lessee pays into court or to the lessor not less than five clear days before the return day<sup>18</sup> all the rent in arrear and the costs of the proceedings, the proceedings cease, and the lessee holds the land according to the lease<sup>19</sup> without any new lease<sup>20</sup>. If the proceedings do not so cease and the court at the trial is satisfied that the lessor is entitled to enforce the right of re-entry or forfeiture, the court must order possession of the land to be given to the lessor at the expiration of such period, not being less than four weeks from the date of the order, as the court thinks fit, unless within that period the lessee pays into court or to the lessor all the rent in arrear and the costs of the proceedings<sup>21</sup>. The court may extend the period specified for these purposes at any time before possession of the land is recovered in pursuance of the order<sup>22</sup>. If within the period specified in the order, or within that period as so extended, the lessee pays into court or to the lessor all the rent in arrear and the costs of the proceedings, he holds the land according to the lease without any new lease<sup>23</sup>. If he does not so make payment, the order is enforceable in the prescribed manner<sup>24</sup> and so long as the order remains unreversed the lessee is<sup>25</sup> barred from all relief<sup>26</sup>. Where the lessor recovers possession of the land at any time after the making of the order, whether as a result of the enforcement of the order or otherwise, the lessee may, at any time within six months from the date on which the lessor recovers possession, apply to the court for relief; and on any such application the court may, if it thinks fit, grant to the lessee such relief, subject to such terms and conditions, as it thinks fit<sup>27</sup>. Where the lessee is granted relief on such an application, he holds the land according to the lease without any new lease<sup>28</sup>.

Where a lessor has enforced against a lessee, by re-entry without bringing legal proceedings<sup>29</sup>, a right of re-entry or forfeiture as respects any land for non-payment of rent, the lessee may at any time within six months from the date on which the lessor re-entered apply to the county court for relief, and on any such application the court may, if it thinks fit, grant to the lessee such relief as the High Court could have granted<sup>30</sup>.

1 The original jurisdiction to grant relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent arose from the practice of the old Court of Chancery: see Popham v Bampfild (1682) 1 Vern 79; Grimston v Lord Bruce (1707) 1 Salk 156. Later the equitable intervention, which originally extended to all breaches, was confined to non-payment of rent: Hill v Barclay (1810) 16 Ves 402. For modern discussions of the historic basis of relief see Belgravia Insurance Co Ltd v Meah [1964] 1 QB 436, [1963] 3 All ER 828, CA; Shiloh Spinners Ltd v Harding [1973] AC 691, [1973] 1 All ER 90, HL; Khar v Delmounty Ltd (1996) 75 P & CR 232, CA. Statute intervened to restrict the time within which relief could be granted to six months after execution of a judgment, first by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 and then by the Common Law Procedure Act 1852 of which s 210 (as amended) remains the statutory basis of relief where the tenant seeks relief after a judgment for possession. Relief in favour of underlessees is also available under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(4): see PARA 627 ante. Where the landlord enters without a judgment for possession, relief may still be obtained apart from statute under the old equitable jurisdiction.

Where the lease contains a provision allowing the landlord to determine the lease on giving a period of notice following a breach of covenant by the tenant, the court may grant relief against the operation of the clause after non-payment of rent: Richard Clarke & Co Ltd v Widnall [1976] 3 All ER 301, [1976] 1 WLR 845, CA. It is the same whether there is a proviso for re-entry or whether the lease is conditioned to be void on non-payment of rent: Bowser v Colby (1841) 1 Hare 109

It appears that arrears which are statute-barred need not be paid: see Re Howell's Application [1972] Ch 509, [1972] 3 All ER 662; and LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARAS 1033, 1057, 1077. A mortgagee is entitled to relief on the same terms as the tenant: Doe d Whitfield v Roe (1811) 3 Taunt 402. The relief protects subtenants: Shine v Gough (1811) 1 Ball & B 436. The Common Law Procedure Act 1852 s 212 has no application to a tenant holding over under the Rent Act 1977 after the contractual relationship of landlord and tenant has ceased: Dellenty v Pellow [1951] 2 KB 858, [1951] 2 All ER 716, CA. The fact that, after judgment has been obtained against him, the tenant signs an agreement by which he undertakes to give up possession will not necessarily deprive him of the right to relief: Nance v Naylor [1928] 1 KB 263, CA. However, relief cannot be spelled out of the conduct of the parties without grant of relief or order: see Smith v Odder [1949] WN 249, CA (order for possession in default of appearance had been set aside and the tenant continued in possession without any further order). Formerly, when relief was granted after the determination of the lease, a new lease had to be executed: see Hare v Elms [1893] 1 QB 604 at 608, DC; Dendy v Evans [1910] 1 KB 263 at 266, CA.

14 The Common Law Procedure Act 1852 left the tenant to apply in equity for relief; the Common Law Procedure Act 1860 (repealed) empowered the courts of common law to give relief, and this jurisdiction passed to the High Court: Wilson v Bolton (1893) 10 TLR 17. In any claim in the High Court for the forfeiture of a lease for non-payment of rent, the court now has power to grant relief against forfeiture in a summary manner, and may do so subject to the same terms and conditions as to the payment of rent, costs or otherwise as could have been imposed by it in such a claim immediately before 1 January 1982: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 38(1); and see note 11 supra. The term 'rent' in s 38 and in the County Courts Act 1984 s 138 (as amended) (see the text and notes 15-28 infra) is to be construed as a periodical sum paid in return for the occupation of land, issuing out of the land and for the non-payment of which a distress is leviable; accordingly, a lease which provided that service charge should be deemed to be sums due by way of additional rent and should be recoverable as rent had the effect of investing the charge with the character of rent and, for the purposes of claiming relief, it was to be treated as such, even though the parties to the agreement had omitted to reserve the service charge as rent in the reddendum: Escalus Properties Ltd v Robinson, Escalus Properties Ltd v Dennis, Escalus Properties

Ltd v Cooper-Smith, Sinclair Gardens Investments (Kensington) Ltd v Walsh [1996] QB 231, [1995] 4 All ER 852, CA.

An application for relief has been said to be inappropriate before the landlord has begun proceedings or taken possession: Barton, Thompson & Co Ltd v Stapling Machines Co [1966] Ch 499 at 508, [1966] 2 All ER 222 at 224. 15 For these purposes, 'lessor' includes (1) an original or derivative underlessor; (2) the persons deriving title under a lessor; (3) a person making a grant at a fee farm rent, or a grant securing a rent by condition; and (4) the persons deriving title under such a grantor: County Courts Act 1984 s 140.

16 Ie being a claim in which the county court has jurisdiction: ibid s 138(1); and see note 6 supra.

17 For these purposes, 'lessee' includes (1) an original or derivative underlessee; (2) the persons deriving title under a lessee; (3) a grantee under a grant at a fee farm rent, or under a grant securing a rent by condition; and (4) the persons deriving title under such a grantee; and 'underlessee' includes any person deriving title under an underlessee: ibid s 140.

18 'Return day' means the day appointed in any summons or proceeding for the appearance of the defendant or any other day fixed for the hearing of any proceedings: ibid s 147(1).

19 For these purposes, 'lease' includes (1) an original or derivative underlease; (2) an agreement for a lease where the lessee has become entitled to have his lease granted; and (3) a grant at a fee farm rent, or under a grant securing a rent by condition; and 'underlease' includes an agreement for an underlease where the underlessee has become entitled to have his underlease granted: ibid s 140.

20 Ibid s 138(1), (2) (s 138(2), (3), (5), (7), (8), (9) amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(2), Sch 17 para 17). See also Escalus Properties Ltd v Robinson, Escalus Properties Ltd v Dennis, Escalus Properties Ltd v Cooper-Smith, Sinclair Gardens Investments (Kensington) Ltd v Walsh [1996] QB 231, [1995] 4 All ER 852, CA, cited in note 14 supra. Relief under the County Courts Act 1984 s 138 (as amended) cannot be claimed where an order for possession has been made on mandatory grounds under the Housing Act 1988 (see PARA 1106 et seq post): Artesian Residential Investments Ltd v Beck [2000] QB 541, [1999] 3 All ER 113, CA, applied in Procureur v Alexander [2004] EWHC 607 (Ch), [2004] All ER (D) 406 (Feb).

The County Courts Act 1984 s 138(2) (as so amended) does not apply where the lessor is proceeding in the same claim to enforce a right of re-entry or forfeiture on any other ground as well as for non-payment of rent, or to enforce any other claim as well as the right of re-entry or forfeiture and the claim for arrears of rent: s 138(6). In a case where s 138 (as amended) has effect, if (1) one-half-year's rent is in arrear at the time of the commencement of the claim; and (2) the lessor has a right to re-enter for non-payment of that rent; and (3) no sufficient distress is to be found on the premises countervailing the arrears then due, the service of the summons in the claim in the prescribed manner stands in lieu of a demand and re-entry: s 139(1).

21 Ibid s 138(3) (as amended: see note 20 supra); and see Maryland Estates Ltd v Bar-Joseph [1998] 3 All ER 193, [1999] 1 WLR 83, CA (the 'rent in arrear' for these purposes means the rent in arrears at the time when the court making its order assumes that payment of that rent will result in the lease continuing for all purposes, and thus includes sums falling due after the service of the claim form, for use and occupation and claimed as mesne profits, in addition to the rent in arrears at the date of service).

22 County Courts Act 1984 s 138(4). The extension under s 138(4) of a period fixed by a court is not to be treated as relief from which the lessee is barred by s 138(7) (see the text and notes 24-26 infra) if he fails to pay into court or to the lessor all the rent in arrear and the costs of the proceedings within that period: s 138(8) (as amended: see note 20 supra). Where the court extends a period under s 138(4) at a time when (1) that period has expired; and (2) a warrant has been issued for the possession of the land, the court must suspend the warrant for the extended period; and, if, before the expiration period, the lessee pays into court or to the lessor all the rent in arrear and all the costs of the proceedings, the court must cancel the warrant: s 138(9) (as so amended). The court may also adjourn the hearing to enable inquiries to be made into the tenant's ability to pay, but this discretion ought not to be exercised in a way that is unfair to the landlord: see R v Circuit Judge, ex p Wathen (1976) 33 P & CR 423, sub nom Wathen v White [1976] 1 EGLR 47.

An application under the County Courts Act 1984 s 138(9A) (as so added) may be made by a person with an interest under a lease of the land derived (whether immediately or otherwise) from the lessee's interest therein in like manner as if he were the lessee; and on any such application the court may make an order which (subject to such terms and conditions as the court thinks fit) vests the land in such a person, as lessee of the lessor, for the remainder of the term of the lease under which he has any such interest as aforesaid, or for any lesser term: s 138(9B) (as so added). For these purposes, any reference to the land includes a reference to a part of the land: s 138(9B) (as so added).

28 Ibid s 138(9C) (as added: see note 27 supra). Section 138(9C) (as so added) applies to the holder of a charging order against a tenant and entitles such a person to apply for relief from forfeiture for non-payment of rent; on such an application, the court may, if it thinks fit, restore the original lease merely for the purpose of enabling the applicant to apply for an order for sale, and on condition that he does so or, alternatively, the holder of the charging order may obtain a lease: Croydon (Unique) Ltd v Wright [2001] Ch 318, [1999] 4 All ER 257, CA; and see Bland v Ingram's Estates Ltd (No 2) [2001] EWCA Civ 1088, [2002] Ch 177, [2002] 1 All ER 244.

30 County Courts Act 1984 s 139(2). Section 138(9B), (9C) (as added) (see the text and notes 27-28 supra) has effect in relation to such an application as it has effect in relation to an application under s 138(9A) (as added): s 139(3) (added by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 55(5)).

Nothing in the County Courts Act 1984 ss 138, 139 (as amended) is to be taken to affect (1) the power of the court to make any order which it would otherwise have power to make as respects a right of re-entry or forfeiture on any ground other than non-payment of rent; or (2) the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(4) (relief against forfeiture: see PARA 627 ante): County Courts Act 1984 s 138(10).

628 Right to relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent

NOTE 11--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(2) FORFEITURE/(iv) Relief against Forfeiture/B. NON-PAYMENT OF RENT/629. Underlessee's right to relief from forfeiture or to a vesting order.

629. Underlessee's right to relief from forfeiture or to a vesting order.

Where the head lease is forfeited for non-payment of rent, an underlessee has a number of statutory procedures available which he may use to seek relief or a vesting order<sup>1</sup>.

The first procedure which applies where the proceedings are brought in the High Court is under the Common Law Procedure Act 1852 which confers on an undertenant the like rights as those conferred on a tenant<sup>2</sup>. The underlessee need not prove his title under the original tenant; it is sufficient that he is in possession and claims as underlessee<sup>3</sup>. If he does not apply until after the lease has been actually determined by the landlord<sup>4</sup>, he must, as the granting of the relief means the revival of the lease, bring the original tenant, and, where the lease has been assigned, the last assignee, before the court<sup>5</sup>, or must satisfactorily account for their absence<sup>6</sup>. If, however, the underlessee applies before the actual determination of the lease, the presence of the original tenant and the last assignee is not necessary<sup>7</sup>.

Where the landlord is proceeding against the head tenant in the county court<sup>8</sup>, an underlessee or mortgagee has the like right to pay into court<sup>9</sup> the arrears claimed and costs as has the head tenant, notwithstanding the fact that the underlessee is not a party to the landlord's claim, and this will relieve the forfeiture of the head lease and thereby the forfeiture of the sublease<sup>10</sup>. In the county court an underlessee is prevented by the Common Law Procedure Act 1852<sup>11</sup> and the County Courts Act 1984<sup>12</sup> from seeking relief after the statutory six-month period<sup>13</sup>.

An alternative procedure which applies in both the High Court and the county court is that under the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>14</sup>. The underlessee may apply for a vesting order before the landlord has obtained possession or, if the landlord physically re-entered without obtaining a judgment, may apply after the landlord so re-entered<sup>15</sup>; and it is not necessary to bring the original lessee or the last assignee before the court<sup>16</sup>. The court will normally grant a vesting order upon terms. The underlessee is usually required to pay any arrears of rent under the head lease<sup>17</sup> and costs<sup>18</sup> and may be required to make good any subsisting breaches of covenant in the head lease<sup>19</sup>. A frequent order is that the premises should vest in the underlessee for the residue of the term of the underlease upon his executing a deed of covenant to pay the rent and perform the covenants of the head lease during that residue. A mortgagee by sub-demise and a mortgagee holding under a charge by way of legal mortgage may apply for a vesting order under this procedure<sup>20</sup>.

The usual practice in the High Court is to seek relief or a vesting order under the Law of Property Act 1925 where that can be done<sup>21</sup>. The principles as to the granting of relief and the terms imposed do not differ between the High Court procedures<sup>22</sup>, although the consequences of relief from forfeiture and a vesting order differ<sup>23</sup>.

Where the landlord has obtained possession by proceedings in the county court, the underlessee may at any time within six months from the date on which the landlord recovers possession apply to the county court for a vesting order which the court may grant subject to such terms and conditions as it thinks fit<sup>24</sup>.

1 As to the distinction between 'relief from forfeiture' and 'vesting order' see PARA 627 note 8 ante. The decision of the Court of Appeal in United Dominions Trust Ltd v Shellpoint Trustees Ltd [1993] 4 All ER 310, 67 P & CR 18, CA shows that hitherto many undertenants who have sought vesting orders after forfeiture for non-payment of rent could more advantageously have obtained relief from forfeiture. However, an undertenant of part only of much larger premises formerly comprised in a forfeited lease may well have no practical alternative.

2 Ie under the Common Law Procedure Act 1852 s 210 (as amended), s 212: see PARA 628 ante. In s 210 (as amended) the words used are 'the lessee or his assignee, or other person claiming or deriving under the said lease', which are clearly wide enough to include underlessees. In s 212 the words are the 'tenant or his assignee'; but 'tenant' in this context includes an underlessee: see Doe d Wyatt v Byron (1845) 1 CB 623 (decided under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 s 4, replaced by the Common Law Procedure Act 1852 ss 210, 212). The relief is available for mortgagees by sub-demise: Hare v Elms [1893] 1 QB 604, DC; Newbolt v Bingham (1895) 72 LT 852, CA; Belgravia Insurance Co Ltd v Meah [1964] 1 QB 436, [1963] 3 All ER 828, CA. 17 Where the whole of the premises comprised in the head lease are also underlet to the applicant for relief, he will normally be required to pay the whole of the arrears of rent. An underlessee of a part only of the premises comprised in the head lease will normally be required to pay only a proportionate part of the arrears: Chatham Empire Theatre (1955) Ltd v Ultrans Ltd [1961] 2 All ER 381, [1961] 1 WLR 817.

18 As to costs see Grangeside Properties Ltd v Collingwoods Securities Ltd [1964] 1 All ER 143, [1964] 1 WLR 139, CA. An applicant for relief will not, however, be required to pay costs in so far as they have been increased in resisting the claim for relief: Howard v Fanshawe [1895] 2 Ch 581; Grangeside Properties Ltd v Collingwoods Securities Ltd supra.

It may be that an equitable charge may apply to the court for relief under the court's inherent jurisdiction: see Ladup Ltd v Williams & Glyn's Bank plc [1985] 2 All ER 577, [1985] 1 WLR 851.

21 See, however note 1 supra. The underlessee may apply either before or after the landlord has obtained possession: see the text and note 15 supra.

22 Belgravia Insurance Co Ltd v Meah [1964] 1 QB 436, [1963] 3 All ER 828, CA (a vesting order case where the court used the term 'relief' indiscriminately).

23 See PARA 627 note 15 ante.

24 See the County Courts Act 1984 s 138(9A), (9C) (as added); and PARA 628 ante. Thus the same substantive position is achieved in the High Court or county court. After six months it is too late to obtain an order: United Dominions Trust Ltd v Shellpoint Trustees Ltd [1993] 4 All ER 310, (1993) 67 P & CR 18, CA. Since the vesting order will create a new leasehold interest, prima facie the same principles as to determining the terms upon which the vesting order is made (see PARA 627 ante) will apply. See also Leeds Permanent Building Society v Manyfield Ltd (16 June 1993, unreported).

(3) SURRENDER

(i) In general

630. Nature of surrender.

A surrender is a voluntary act of the parties whereby, with the landlord's consent, the tenant surrenders his lease to the landlord so that the lease merges with the reversion and is thus brought to an end<sup>1</sup>. It is defined as being the yielding up of the term to the person who has the immediate estate in reversion in order that, by mutual agreement, the term may merge in the reversion<sup>2</sup>. The surrender may be either express, that is by an act of the parties having the expressed intention of effecting a surrender, or by operation of law, that is as an inference from the acts of the parties<sup>3</sup>. The parties to the surrender must be the owner of the term<sup>4</sup> and the owner of the immediate reversion expectant on the term<sup>5</sup>. Consequently an undertenant cannot surrender his underlease to the head landlord<sup>6</sup>. A surrender must be of the entire term in the premises<sup>7</sup>; hence a tenancy held jointly cannot be surrendered by one of two joint tenants<sup>8</sup>. A part only of the demised premises may, however, be surrendered<sup>9</sup>.

It was once considered that a tenant could not surrender his lease until he had entered, but it is now probable that a tenant can validly surrender his lease even prior to actual entry on the land by him<sup>10</sup>. Authority has suggested that a surrender must take effect at once and cannot take effect at a future date<sup>11</sup>, but an agreement for a surrender entered into for valuable consideration is enforceable<sup>12</sup>. An express surrender may be subject to a condition precedent or condition subsequent<sup>13</sup>. If a condition precedent is not satisfied, the surrender will not take effect; and, if a condition subsequent is not satisfied, the lease will revive and the tenant will remain liable under it<sup>14</sup>.

1 A surrender is to be distinguished from a merger. A merger occurs where the tenant acquires the landlord's reversion or a third person acquires both the lease and the reversion with the result that the two interests merge, being in the ownership of the same person. The principle underlying surrender and merger is the same, namely that the lease and the reversion become vested in the same person and the lease, being a lesser interest derived from the reversion, ends. As to merger generally see PARAS 640-641 post.

2 Co Litt 337b; 4 Bac Abr, Leases and Terms for Years (S) 1(1). On surrender the landlord is entitled to possession against a trespasser who has acquired a possessory title against the tenant: Fairweather v St Marylebone Property Co Ltd [1963] AC 510, [1962] 2 All ER 288, HL.

3 As to surrender by operation of law see PARA 633 et seq post.

4 See Seaward v Drew (1898) 67 LQB 322 at 323; cf Stait v Fenner [1912] 2 Ch 504.

5 Edwards v Wickwar (1866) LR 1 Eq 403 (but the actual decision in this case, which depended upon a supposed lack of attornment and the former doctrine of interesse termini (see PARA 118 ante) cannot be supported: see Horn v Beard [1912] 3 KB 181, DC). Hence a surrender to a sequestrator is ineffectual: Cornish v Searell (1828) 8 B & C 471 at 476. The assignee of the reversion may accept a surrender and put an end to the rent, notwithstanding an agreement on the assignment that the rent is to continue to be received by the assignor: Southwell v Scotter (1880) 49 LQB 356, CA (but see Wood v Marquis of Londonderry (1847) 10 Beav 465). Where a concurrent lease is granted so as to pass the reversion on the prior lease (see PARAS 104-106 ante), the later tenant can accept a surrender of the earlier lease. Where the title to the lease has been registered under the Land Registration Act 2002 or the title to the reversion is so registered and the lease is noted on the register as an incumbrance, the determination of the lease by surrender should be notified on the register: see the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 79. As to the powers of mortgagors and mortgagees to make or accept surrenders see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 100; and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 351-354; as to surrenders of leases where the reversion is settled land see the Settled Land Act 1925 ss 52, 90(1)(iv); and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARAS 859, 869; as to surrender where the reversioner is a minor see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 49; and as to mentally disordered persons see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 608-609.

6 Such a purported surrender would merely effect an assignment of the undertenant's interest to the head landlord. A surrender by an undertenant and tenant to the landlord will, however, operate as a surrender by the undertenant to the tenant, followed by a surrender by the tenant to the landlord: Paramour v Yardley (1579) 2 Plowd 539 at 541. A term may be surrendered to a leasehold reversioner who holds for a shorter term: Hughes

v Robotham (1593) Cro Eliz 302 at 303; 4 Bac Abr, Leases and Terms for Years (S) 1(2). Previously it was held that a term could not be 'drowned' in a term: Porry v Allen (1590) Cro Eliz 173.

7 Burton v Barclay (1831) 7 Bing 745 at 757.

The acceptance by the tenant of an invalid notice to quit does not effect a surrender: Bessell v Landsberg (1845) 7 QB 638. See also PARA 633 note 3 post.

12 Wallace v Patton (1846) 12 Cl & Fin 491, HL. A future lease cannot be surrendered expressly, although it may be surrendered by operation of law: 4 Bac Abr, Leases and Terms for Years (S) 2(2).

13 Shep Touch 307. There is no modern authority on this point. See, however, Plymouth Corp'n v Harvey [1971] 1 All ER 623, [1971] 1 WLR 549 (parties executed a surrender in escrow to be handed by the president of the local law society to the landlord if the tenant failed to comply with a term of the lease; transaction held to be in truth a forfeiture of the lease disguised as a surrender).

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(3) SURRENDER/(i) In general/631. VAT and stamp duty land tax on surrenders.

631. VAT and stamp duty land tax on surrenders.

Subject to certain exceptions<sup>1</sup>, the grant of any interest in or right over land<sup>2</sup> or of any licence to occupy<sup>3</sup> land is an exempt supply for the purposes of VAT<sup>4</sup>; and 'grant' includes an assignment or surrender and the supply made by the person to whom an interest is surrendered when there is a reverse surrender<sup>5</sup>. The supply made by a landlord in accepting the surrender of his tenant's lease in return for a payment made by the tenant is also normally exempt<sup>6</sup>.

For the purposes of stamp duty land tax, where a lease<sup>7</sup> is granted in consideration of the surrender of an existing lease between the same parties, the grant of the new lease does not count as chargeable consideration for the surrender, and the surrender does not count as chargeable consideration for the grant of the new lease<sup>8</sup>. Nor, in the case of a surrender, does a reverse premium<sup>9</sup> count as chargeable consideration<sup>10</sup>. The release of certain tenant's obligations<sup>11</sup> does not count as chargeable consideration in relation to the surrender of the lease<sup>12</sup>.

2 For the meaning of 'land' for these purposes see VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 14 note 22.

3 A distinction must be drawn between the grant or assignment of a licence to occupy land (which may be exempt) and the grant or assignment of a licence to go upon land (which is not): see VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 156 note 4.

(ii) Express Surrender

632. Form of surrender.

Every express surrender is void unless made by deed or in writing<sup>1</sup>. Leases taking effect in possession for a term not exceeding three years at the best rent that can be reasonably obtained without taking a fine<sup>2</sup> may be surrendered by writing, signed by the person making the surrender or his agent lawfully authorised in writing<sup>3</sup>; but surrenders of all other terms, except where the surrender is by operation of law, must be made by deed<sup>4</sup>.

The use of the word 'surrender' is not necessary. Any form of words which shows the intention of the parties to effect a surrender will be sufficient; and the words will be construed so as to give effect to that intention<sup>5</sup>. It is, however, always necessary to ascertain the true nature of the document and not just its ostensible form, so that a forfeiture in the guise of a surrender remains a forfeiture<sup>6</sup>. The mere cancellation or mutilation of the lease without a deed or other sufficient writing is not a sufficient surrender<sup>7</sup>, nor is it prima facie evidence of a formal surrender<sup>8</sup>. This is because, where a deed, such as a lease, operates as a conveyance of property, its cancellation does not have the effect of revesting or reconveying the estate or interest conveyed<sup>9</sup>. The surrender vests the estate immediately in the person accepting the surrender without express acceptance, but is made void by his dissent<sup>10</sup>. Where a lease is expressly surrendered and a new lease granted which is void, the surrender is not thereby rendered void<sup>11</sup>. It may be that in such circumstances the express surrender is voidable and may be set aside during the currency of the term of the lease surrendered<sup>12</sup>.

See also Tarjomani v Panther Securities Ltd (1982) 46 P & CR 32 (cited in PARA 633 note 1 post). Before the Statute of Frauds (1677) s 3 (repealed and replaced by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53) oral surrenders were valid (Sleigh v Bateman (1596) Cro Eliz 487; Farmer d Earl v Rogers (1755) 2 Wils 26 at 27), but since then all oral surrenders, and oral agreements for the determination of a tenancy which are equivalent to a surrender (Thomson v Wilson (1818) 2 Stark 379), are void (Matthews v Sawell (1818) 8 Taunt 270; Taylor v Chapman (1795) Peake Add Cas 19; Mollett v Brayne (1809) 2 Camp 103). An agreement between the landlord and the tenant that the landlord is to have immediate possession operates as a surrender, if otherwise suitable for this purpose (Williams v Sawyer (1821) 3 Brod & Bing 70); and the terms of an agreement to purchase the reversion may suffice to show the intention of the parties to surrender an existing tenancy (Turner v Watts (1927) 97 LJB 92; affd (1928) 97 LJB 403, CA). As to the effect of an agreement to purchase the reversion apart from special terms see, however, PARA 636 post. The landlord's consent is always required as the agreement of both parties is essential to a surrender: see Colles v Evanson (1865) 19 CBNS 372. An assignment of the residue of the term by the tenant to the landlord, even if only by way of mortgage, is equivalent to a surrender (Cottee v Richardson (1851) 7 Exch 143), as is a demise by the tenant to the landlord for the whole term (Loyd v Langford (1677) 2 Mod Rep 174; Smith v Mapleback supra); and, if rent is reserved on this redemise, it is recoverable only as a contractual sum (Smith v Mapleback supra).

(iii) Surrender by Operation of Law

633. In general.

Delivery of possession by the tenant to the landlord and his acceptance of possession effect a surrender by operation of law, also referred to, especially in modern caselaw, as implied surrender<sup>1</sup>. The surrender in this case depends upon the agreement by the landlord and the tenant that the term is to cease and upon the change of possession in pursuance of the agreement<sup>2</sup>. The change of possession is essential<sup>3</sup>; and the parties to the lease must act towards each other in a manner that is inconsistent with a continuation of the lease<sup>4</sup>. A consent given by the landlord to the tenant to quit the premises during the tenancy, for example in the middle of a quarter where the tenant holds under an annual tenancy determinable at a quarter's notice, will not of itself operate as a surrender as there is no delivery of possession; but, where the tenant gives up possession following the consent, and the landlord accepts it, the surrender by operation of law is complete<sup>5</sup>. An implied surrender may be effectual under the Settled Land Act 1925<sup>6</sup>.

There is a delivery of possession sufficient to effect a surrender where the tenant returns the keys of the premises and the landlord accepts them with the intention of changing the possession<sup>7</sup>. The landlord's consent to the delivery of the keys is, however, essential, and it is not sufficient that they are delivered to one of his employees who does not return them<sup>8</sup>. If there is no consent at the time, the surrender is not complete until the landlord takes possession in such a manner as to estop him from denying that the tenancy is at an end<sup>9</sup>. He does not thus take possession by taking action to dispossess trespassers<sup>10</sup>, or attempting to relet the premises<sup>11</sup>, or by entering to do necessary repairs<sup>12</sup>, or by making occasional use of a part of the premises<sup>13</sup>. Where the tenant quits the premises without the landlord's consent and the landlord changes the locks of the premises with a view only to securing the premises and maintaining them in repair, he does not accept possession so as to effect a surrender<sup>14</sup>. If, however, after the tenant has quitted the premises, the landlord relets them to another tenant who goes into occupation, a surrender is effected from the time of reletting, unless the landlord gives notice to the tenant that the reletting is on his account<sup>15</sup>. Acts of omission by the landlord cannot be the unequivocal conduct sufficient for the purposes of an implied surrender<sup>16</sup>.

Where the elements of surrender are satisfied, the subsequent assertion by the tenant that he had no intention of leaving permanently is irrelevant<sup>17</sup>.

1 In this case the law gives effect to the intention of the parties as appearing from their acts, and cures the informality of the surrender: see Cannan v Hartley (1850) 9 CB 634. Directing the occupier to acknowledge the landlord as his landlord, ie to attorn to the landlord, is a sufficient delivery of possession by the tenant to the landlord: Gray v Balls, Field v Merrison (1861) 5 LT 395. As to surrender by operation of law generally see notes to Thursby v Plant (1669) 1 Saund 230. Cf Tarjomani v Panther Securities Ltd (1982) 46 P & CR 32 (insufficient evidence to establish surrender); Chamberlaine v Scally (1992) 26 HLR 26, [1992] EGCS 90, CA (no surrender where tenant moved out but retained her keys and left her possessions and two cats in the premises with her former cohabitee, returning to visit on a weekly basis); Mattey Securities Ltd v Ervin (1998) 77 P & CR 160, [1998] 2 EGLR 66, CA (no surrender where tenant's assignee went into administration and landlord accepted rent from a company that took over assignee's business); Re a debtor (No 325 of 1997) Bhogal v Cheema [1998] 2 EGLR 50, [1998] 29 EG 117 (no implied surrender and regrant); Rysaffe Trustee Co (CI) Ltd v Ataghan Ltd [2006] All ER (D) 35 (Sep) (agricultural tenancy the terms of which reserved to the landlord the right to resume possession of and determine the tenancy for the purposes, inter alia, of quarrying; later cessation of use of land for agricultural purposes and use for quarrying activity gave rise to legitimate inference that agricultural tenancy had been terminated; held that there had been an informal surrender by operation of law). For an unusual case where the intention was held by one person alone see Allen v Rochdale Borough Council [2000] Ch 221, [1999] 3 All ER 443, CA (council was both the landlord as bare trustee and tenant in its own right, but not in possession; lease not revealed to either purchaser of land or beneficiary of the land; held that there was an implied surrender at the date of sale of the freehold).

2 Phené v Popplewell (1862) 12 CBNS 334 at 342; Easton v Penny (1892) 67 LT 290 at 292; Edward H Lewis & Son Ltd v Morelli [1948] 1 All ER 433 (revsd on another point [1948] 2 All ER 1021, CA); Hoggett v Hoggett (1979) 39 P & CR 121, CA. A delivery up of part of the premises will be a surrender as to that part: see Holme v Brunskill (1878) 3 QBD 495, CA. Where part of land subject to a lease is sold, a surrender takes effect to the extent of the land sold and the retained land remains subject to the lease: Allen v Rochdale Borough Council [2000] Ch 221, [1999] 3 All ER 443, CA.

3 Whitehead v Clifford (1814) 5 Taunt 518. Thus there cannot be a surrender by a conditional agreement which is not followed by the tenant giving up possession: Coupland v Maynard (1810) 12 East 134 at 140. An agreement to deliver up possession at a future date does not effect an immediate surrender by operation of law, as it is said that a surrender must take effect at once and cannot take effect at a future date: see PARA 630 ante. Such an agreement can, however, take effect as an agreement to surrender, and, if the agreement is acted upon by the delivery and acceptance of possession, there will at that time be a surrender by operation of law. An insufficient notice to quit given by the tenant to the landlord will not operate as a surrender even if accepted by the landlord if the tenant retains possession after the notice: Johnstone v Hudlestone (1825) 4 B & C 922; Doe d Murrell v Milward (1838) 3 M & W 328. Where, however, there is a delivery and acceptance of possession following the giving of the invalid notice to quit by the tenant, there is a surrender by operation of law even though the landlord is induced to accept possession by the tenant's conduct, so long as the conduct is not fraudulent: Gray v Owen [1910] 1 KB 622, DC (tenant held to be liable in damages for the landlord's loss of rent). A grant of a new tenancy following the delivery of an invalid notice to quit erroneously believed valid will mean that the previous tenancy is surrendered: Hodges v Lawrance (1854) 18 JP 347.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(3) SURRENDER/(iii) Surrender by Operation of Law/634. Surrender by grant of new lease to tenant.

634. Surrender by grant of new lease to tenant.

A surrender by operation of law takes place when the tenant takes a new lease from the landlord to commence during the term of the old lease, even though the new lease is for a shorter term than the residue of the old term<sup>1</sup>. This surrender is founded upon estoppel, and takes place without regard to the intention of the parties<sup>2</sup>. The landlord has no power to grant the new lease except upon the footing that the old lease is surrendered; and the tenant, being a party to the grant of the new lease, is estopped from denying the surrender<sup>3</sup>. Consequently the acceptance of the new lease operates as a surrender of the old one<sup>4</sup>; and the result is the same even though the new lease is a future lease<sup>5</sup>, or even if the new lease is made orally and the old lease was by deed<sup>6</sup>. It is essential to such a surrender that the new lease should be valid and should take effect at once as a lease; hence, there is no implied surrender by the acceptance by the tenant of a new lease which is void<sup>7</sup>, or which is voidable and is in fact avoided<sup>8</sup>; or by a mere agreement for a new lease<sup>9</sup>, unless the agreement for a new lease has been acted upon<sup>10</sup> or, probably, is an agreement which will be specifically enforced and takes effect in equity as a lease<sup>11</sup>.

Where the property is mortgaged and the mortgagor has no power to let without the consent of the mortgagee, as the new lease is not effective against the mortgagee for want of consent, its acceptance cannot operate as against the mortgagee as a surrender of the old one: Barclays Bank Ltd v Stasek [1957] Ch 28, [1956] 3 All ER 439. See also MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 351.

8 The implied surrender is subject to an implied condition that the surrender is to be void if the new lease is made void (Doe d Earl of Egremont v Courtenay (1848) 11 QB 702 at 712; Easton v Penny (1892) 67 LT 290; Zick v London United Tramways Ltd [1908] 2 KB 126 at 132, CA; Canterbury Corp v Cooper (1908) 99 LT 612; affd (1909) 100 LT 597, CA); that is, if it is void in toto (Brinkley v M'Munn (1893) 32 LR 532). TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(3) SURRENDER/(iii) Surrender by Operation of Law/635. Variation of terms of lease.

635. Variation of terms of lease.

Where the terms of the relationship between the landlord and the tenant are altered by agreement, it is necessary to decide whether the alteration amounts to the creation of a new tenancy upon the altered terms, and thus of necessity the surrender by operation of law of the previous tenancy, or whether the alteration merely continues the previous tenancy in a varied form. Certain agreed alterations necessarily involve the surrender of the previous tenancy and its replacement by a new tenancy. The only way in which new land may be added to the demised premises is by the process of surrender by operation of law of the old lease and the grant of a new lease to include both the old and the new premises<sup>1</sup>. Equally the duration of a lease can be extended only by the surrender of the existing lease and its replacement by a new lease for the longer term<sup>2</sup>. As a matter of law the parties can achieve this intention only by the fiction of a surrender and regrant.

Other agreed alterations do not necessarily involve a surrender and regrant. If the parties wish, they may increase the rent payable under a tenancy without creating a new tenancy; and the old tenancy continues at the increased rent<sup>3</sup>. The rent may be reduced in the same way<sup>4</sup>. Other minor variations may be effected without a surrender and regrant<sup>5</sup>. Where the agreement between the parties does not affect the terms of an existing tenancy, there is no reason to imply a surrender and regrant<sup>6</sup>. Where, however, the parties intend that their altered relationship is to amount to a new tenancy, there will be a surrender of the previous tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

1 Jenkin R Lewis & Son Ltd v Kerman [1971] Ch 477, [1970] 3 All ER 414, CA. A part of the premises within an existing tenancy may, however, be surrendered, leaving the tenancy validly subsisting as regards the remainder of the premises: Holme v Brunskill (1878) 3 QBD 495, CA.

2 Re Savile Settled Estates, Savile v Savile [1931] 2 Ch 210. Where, however, a lease is granted for a term certain and during that term the parties agree that the lease is to be varied so that the tenant has an option to extend the term, that variation will amount to the surrender of the old lease and the grant of a new lease with the added option: Baker v Merckel [1960] 1 QB 657, [1960] 1 All ER 668, CA. In Joseph v Joseph [1967] Ch 78, [1966] 3 All ER 486, CA, it was held that the introduction of new parties, a shorter term and a new rent involved a surrender and regrant.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(3) SURRENDER/(iii) Surrender by Operation of Law/636. Surrender by change in nature of tenant's occupation.

636. Surrender by change in nature of tenant's occupation.

A surrender is implied when the tenant remains in occupation of the premises in a capacity inconsistent with his being tenant, as, for example, where he becomes the landlord's employee<sup>1</sup>, or where the parties agree that the tenant is in future to occupy the premises rent-free for life as a licensee<sup>2</sup>. An agreement by the tenant to purchase the reversion does not of itself effect a surrender, as the purchase is conditional on a good title being made by the landlord<sup>3</sup>.

Where a service occupancy exists, the employer is regarded as occupying the property vicariously through the employee: see PARA 15 ante. A tenant who arranges to surrender his tenancy to his landlord, and whose employer agrees to accept a new tenancy from the landlord, will be estopped from denying, as he has had the advantage of his employer being substituted for him as tenant, that in fact a surrender has taken place by operation of law: Metcalfe v Boyce [1927] 1 KB 758, DC.

2 Foster v Robinson [1951] 1 KB 149, [1950] 2 All ER 342, CA. Such an arrangement will often be effected by an express surrender, as in Mathew v Bobbins (1980) 41 P & CR 1, [1980] 2 EGLR 97, CA.

3 Doe d Gray v Stanion (1836) 1 M & W 695 at 701; Tarte v Darby (1846) 15 M & W 601; Ellis v Wright (1897) 76 LT 522, CA; Leek and Moorlands Building Society v Clark [1952] 2 QB 788, [1952] 2 All ER 492, CA; Nightingale v Courtney [1954] 1 QB 399, [1954] 1 All ER 362, CA. Where, however, the terms of the agreement to purchase are such as to render its performance incompatible with a continuance of the tenancy, the agreement will be held to operate as either an express surrender or a surrender by operation of law of the existing tenancy: Turner v Watts (1928) 97 LJB 403, CA; cf Cockwell v Romford Sanitary Steam Laundry Ltd [1939] 4 All ER 370, CA. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(3) SURRENDER/(iii) Surrender by Operation of Law/637. Surrender by lease to third person with tenant's consent.

637. Surrender by lease to third person with tenant's consent.

The grant by the landlord of a new lease to a third person, with the tenant's consent<sup>1</sup>, operates as a surrender of the old lease, provided the old tenant gives up possession to the new tenant at or about the time of the grant of the new lease<sup>2</sup>. The same effect is produced where the landlord, with the tenant's consent, accepts another person as tenant<sup>3</sup>, and that other person takes possession<sup>4</sup>, unless the landlord reserves his rights against the original tenant<sup>5</sup> or is induced to accept the new tenant by the fraud of the original tenant<sup>6</sup>. Receipt of rent from a person in possession may be evidence of the landlord's acceptance of him as tenant, whether he is a stranger<sup>7</sup>, or whether he was already in possession as subtenant<sup>8</sup>.

1 See Edward H Lewis & Son Ltd v Morelli [1948] 1 All ER 433.

2 Wallis v Hands [1893] 2 Ch 75. The change of possession gives the notoriety which is necessary to raise the estoppel upon which the surrender depends (Lyon v Reed (1844) 13 M & W 285 at 309; Creagh v Blood (1845) 3 Jo & Lat 133 at 160), and this change is essential to the implied surrender (Davison v Gent (1857) 1 H & N 744). See also Tower Hamlets London Borough Council v Ayinde (1994) 26 HLR 631, CA (statement by tenant that he had moved and offer of tenancy to new tenant). It follows that mere negotiations for a lease to a third person do not cause a surrender: Dawson v Lamb (1853) 3 Car & Kir 269. The change of possession need not be physical; it may be effected by a change in the position of the tenant: Metcalfe v Boyce [1927] 1 KB 758, DC. The principle applies also where the tenant was a mere statutory tenant: Collins v Cloughton [1959] 1 All ER 95, [1959] 1 WLR 145, CA.

There will be no surrender, however, if it is the intention of the parties that the lease is to continue to exist: Clifford v Reilly (1869) IR 4 CL 218. Where the landlords are executors, acceptance of the new tenant by one only will not suffice: Turner v Hardey (1842) 9 M & W 770.

The principle was applied to a surrender of a freehold interest, a lease for lives, in Lynch's Lessee v Lynch (1843) 6 ILR 131 (doubted in Creagh v Blood (1845) 3 Jo & Lat 133). An exchange between two tenants who hold under different landlords, made with the consent of the landlords, operates as a surrender of the old tenancies and the creation of a new tenancy as to each holding: Bees v Williams (1835) 2 Cr M & R 581.

(iv) Effect of Surrender

638. Effect on subtenants.

The surrender of the term does not destroy the rights of subtenants. As regards subtenants, and as regards third persons generally, the surrender operates only subject to their rights, and the term is treated as continuing so far as is required for the preservation of those rights<sup>1</sup>. Thus an equitable charge created over the leasehold interest does not become inoperative because the lease has been surrendered<sup>2</sup>. This principle makes it necessary to provide for the substitution of a new reversion for the leasehold reversion which has been surrendered, and also, in the case of a surrender and renewal, for the validity of the renewed lease as against the subtenants. Under the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>3</sup>, the estate of the head landlord is deemed to be the reversion on the underlease to the extent and for the purpose of preserving such incidents to and obligations on the surrendered leasehold reversion as, but for the surrender, would have subsisted<sup>4</sup>. Further, a lease may be surrendered with a view to the acceptance of a new lease in place of it without a surrender of any underlease derived out of it<sup>5</sup>. A new lease may be granted and accepted, in place of any lease so surrendered, without any such surrender of an underlease, and the new lease operates as if all underleases derived out of the surrendered lease had been surrendered before the surrender of that lease was effected<sup>6</sup>.

The lessee under the new lease and any person deriving title under him is entitled to the same rights and remedies in respect of the rent reserved by, and the covenants, agreements and conditions contained in, any underlease as if the original lease had not been surrendered but was or remained vested in him<sup>7</sup>. Each underlessee and any person deriving title under him is entitled to hold and enjoy the land comprised in his underlease, subject to the payment of any rent reserved by, and to the observance of the covenants, agreements and conditions contained in, the underlease, as if the lease out of which the underlease was derived had not been surrendered<sup>8</sup>.

The lessor<sup>9</sup> granting the new lease and any person deriving title under him is entitled to the same remedies, by distress or entry in and upon the land comprised in any such underlease for rent reserved by, or for breach of any covenant, agreement or condition contained in, the new lease, so far only as the rents reserved by, or the covenants, agreements or conditions contained in, the new lease do not exceed or impose greater burdens than those reserved by or contained in the original lease out of which the underlease is derived, as he would have had:

- 1288 (1) if the original lease had remained on foot; or
- 1289 (2) if a new underlease derived out of the new lease had been granted to the underlessee or a person deriving title under him, as the case may require<sup>10</sup>.

A surrender followed by a new lease to the same tenant remaining in possession does not destroy the tenant's right to remove fixtures<sup>11</sup>.

Although a forfeiture destroys the rights of subtenants (see PARA 627 ante) if the landlord accepts a surrender after a cause of forfeiture has accrued, the above rule prevails and the rights of subtenants are preserved: Great Western Rly Co v Smith (1876) 2 ChD 235, CA; affd sub nom Smith v Great Western Rly Co (1877) 3 App Cas 165. The same result appears to follow where the landlord has no notice of the facts entitling him to forfeit the term at the date of the surrender: Parker v Jones [1910] 2 KB 32. Service of a notice to quit by either a tenant or a landlord by pre-arrangement with the other is not tantamount to a surrender of the tenancy, as unlike a surrender it does not need the consent of the receiving party to have effect: Barrett v Morgan [2000] 2 AC 264, [2000] 1 All ER 481, HL. See also Pennell v Payne [1995] QB 192, [1995] 2 All ER 592, CA (service of upwards notice to quit by tenant under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 determined the subtenancy as well); PW & Co v Milton Gate Investments Ltd (BT Property Ltd, Pt 20 defendant) [2003] EWHC 1994 (Ch), [2004] Ch 142, [2004] 3 EGLR 103 (break clause not a surrender provision).

Where one spouse or civil partner holds a lease of a dwelling house and the other spouse or civil partner has home rights under the Family Law Act 1996 s 30 (as amended) having effect as a charge under s 31 (as amended), the surrender of the lease does not destroy the right of occupation but has effect subject to the charge: see s 31(9) (as amended); and MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 72 (2009) PARAS 285-286.

3 See the text and notes 4-10 infra.

4 Where a reversion expectant on a lease is merged, the estate or interest which as against the lessee for the time being confers the next vested right to the land is deemed the reversion for the purpose of preserving the same incidents and obligations as would have affected the original reversion had there been no merger thereof: Law of Property Act 1925 s 139(1). The reference to the 'estate or interest which as against the lessee for the time being confers the next vested right to the land' is to the reversion in which the surrendered lease has merged. For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 145 note 1 ante; for the meaning of 'lessee' see PARA 145 note 3 ante; and for the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

Under s 139 a tenant to whom a landlord has granted a fresh lease, subject to the unexpired portion of a subtenant's term after the surrender of the original lease by the former tenant, is entitled to sue for the rent due from the subtenant for the unexpired portion of his term and also for possession on the expiry of the notice to quit given by the original tenant: Plummer and John v David [1920] 1 KB 326.

5 Law of Property Act 1925 s 150(1). Section 150 applies both to express and implied surrender; but it does not affect the powers of the court to give relief against forfeiture: s 150(6). The court could not compel a surrender of an underlease for the purpose of a renewal of the head lease: Colchester v Arnott (1700) 2 Vern 383. In Re Grosvenor Settled Estates, Duke of Westminster v McKenna [1932] 1 Ch 232 at 241, it was held that a tenant for life under the Settled Land Act 1925 acting under s 42(1) could take advantage of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 150 without getting in the subleases. This removed the doubt expressed in Doe d Palk v Marchetti (1831) 1 B & Ad 715 as to the enforceability by the landlord of a right of re-entry for breach of covenants in the new lease co-extensive with those in the old lease against the subtenant. The intention of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 150 is to place all parties as to every matter in the same situation as if no surrender had taken place: see Doe d Palk v Marchetti supra at 721 per Lord Tenterden CJ.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(3) SURRENDER/(iv) Effect of Surrender/639. Effect on liability for rent and breaches of covenant.

639. Effect on liability for rent and breaches of covenant.

The surrender of a lease stops the subsequent accrual of rent<sup>1</sup>. Where the lease is by deed with a covenant for payment of rent, rent accrued before the surrender may be recovered on the covenant<sup>2</sup>; otherwise it is recoverable on the agreement or in a claim for use and occupation<sup>3</sup>.

The surrender of the lease does not affect the liability of the tenant<sup>4</sup>, or of the landlord<sup>5</sup>, for breaches of covenant committed prior to the surrender.

2 A-G v Cox, Pearce v A-G (1850) 3 HL Cas 240. Where a lease is surrendered after a rent review date, but before the reviewed rent has been determined, the surrender does not prevent the landlord having the rent reviewed and recovering the rent as reviewed: see Torminster Properties Ltd v Green [1983] 2 All ER 457, [1983] 1 WLR 676, CA.

3 Shaw v Lomas (1888) 59 LT 477; and see PARA 284 ante.

It has been held that where rent is payable in advance, but the parties thought it was payable in arrear, and the lease is surrendered before the expiry of a rent period, the tenant is not entitled to repayment of rent in respect of the part of that period falling after the surrender becomes operative (William Hill (Football) Ltd v Willen Key & Hardware Co Ltd (1964) 190 Estates Gazette 867, 108 Sol Jo 482); but cf Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln City Council [1999] 2 AC 349, [1998] 4 All ER 513, HL, reversing the former rule of law that money paid under a mistake of law could not be recovered.

(4) MERGER

640. Merger of term at law and in equity.

At common law where a term of years becomes vested in the owner for the time being of the reversion immediately expectant on the term, the term is merged in the reversion<sup>1</sup>. Thus a person cannot at law be reversioner to himself<sup>2</sup>. For this purpose the reversion is deemed to be the greater estate, notwithstanding that it is in fact shorter than the term; hence a term of 1,000 years can be merged in a reversionary term of 500 years<sup>3</sup>. Even at common law there was no merger if the interests were held by one person in different rights or capacities, at any rate if the union was not due to his own act<sup>4</sup>. Where the term merges, the covenants attached to it are extinguished<sup>5</sup>.

The position in equity is different; it is clear that in equity there is no merger where the reversion and the term are held by the same person in different rights, as, for example, where the reversion is vested in him as administrator, and the term beneficially<sup>6</sup>. Even where the reversion and the term are held by the same person in the same right, the question of merger is governed in equity by the intention of the parties; and there is no merger if it is intended that the term should be kept alive<sup>7</sup>. In the absence of any direct evidence of intention<sup>8</sup>, it will be presumed that merger is not intended if it is to the party's interest, or only consistent with his duty, that merger should not take place; and, in the absence of any evidence of intention or indication of where a party's interest or duty lies, the common law doctrines will operate<sup>9</sup>.

There is no merger by operation of law only of any estate the beneficial interest in which would not be deemed to be merged or extinguished in equity<sup>10</sup>.

1 Burton v Barclay (1831) 7 Bing 745 at 746.

2 Doe d Rawlings v Walker (1826) 5 B & C 111 at 121. The term and the reversion are concurrent estates and cannot exist together. It is different where the same person has successive estates, the one following immediately on the other; so that, if the tenant grants to his subtenant the residue of the term from the determination of the sublease, the subterm is not merged in the residue of the head term: Hyde v Warden (1877) 3 Ex D 72 at 84, CA.

It may be that, where the parties to the surrender are the parties with the benefit and burden of a restrictive covenant and they expressly declare their intention that the covenant is to continue in force, it is not extinguished by the surrender: see Birmingham Joint Stock Co v Lea (1877) 36 LT 843, distinguished in Golden Lion Hotel (Hunstanton) Ltd v Carter supra.

6 Chambers v Kingham (1878) 10 ChD 743.

7 This principle is more usually operative in respect of charges, but it applies also to estates: Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Rhodes [1903] 1 Ch 631, CA. As to merger of estates and charges generally see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 764 et seq.

8 Where the intention of the parties is expressed, the court will give effect to that intention even though the intention may have been expressed in ignorance of the true interests of the parties: see Golden Lion Hotel (Hunstanton) Ltd v Carter [1965] 3 All ER 506, [1965] 1 WLR 1189 (express declaration of merger resulted in the loss of the benefit of a restrictive covenant). It is common practice to insert into deeds an express declaration against merger where that is desired.

9 Forbes v Moffatt (1811) 18 Ves 384 at 390; Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Rhodes [1903] 1 Ch 631, CA; Ingle v Vaughan Jenkins [1900] 2 Ch 368; Theellusson v Liddard [1900] 2 Ch 635; Re Fletcher, Reading v Fletcher [1917] 1 Ch 339, CA. Merger is sometimes avoided by taking a conveyance of the term to a trustee (Belaney v Belaney (1867) 2 Ch App 138); but the insertion in the conveyance to the landlord of a declaration against merger is equally effectual. See generally EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 764.

641. Effect of merger on underlease.

At common law the merger of a term in the reversion destroyed the covenants in an underlease<sup>1</sup>; but now by statute, where a reversion expectant on a lease<sup>2</sup> is merged, the estate or interest which as against the lessee<sup>3</sup> for the time being confers the next vested right to the land<sup>4</sup> is deemed the reversion for the purpose of preserving the same incidents and obligations as would have affected the original reversion had there been no merger thereof<sup>5</sup>.

(5) DISCLAIMER

(i) Corporate and Individual Insolvency

642. Right to disclaim.

A trustee in bankruptcy may disclaim any lease which is part of his bankrupt's property<sup>1</sup>; and a liquidator may disclaim by notice of disclaimer any lease which is a part of the property of a company being wound up<sup>2</sup>.

Any person interested in the property may serve a notice in writing on the liquidator or, as the case may be, the trustee requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not; and, if the liquidator or, as the case may be, the trustee does not disclaim within 28 days of such notice, or such longer period as the court may allow, a notice of disclaimer may not be given<sup>3</sup>.

A disclaimer of a lease does not take effect unless a copy of the disclaimer has been served, so far as the liquidator or, as the case may be, the trustee is aware of their address, on every person claiming under the company or, as the case may be, the bankrupt as underlessee or mortgagee and either no application for a vesting order is made within 14 days or, where such an application has been made, the court directs that the disclaimer is to take effect<sup>4</sup>.

In relation to tenancies granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>5</sup>, where:

1290 (1) a company which is being wound up, or a trustee in bankruptcy, is as a result of one or more assignments<sup>6</sup> the tenant<sup>7</sup> of part only of the premises demised by a tenancy<sup>8</sup>; and

1291 (2) the liquidator of the company or the trustee in bankruptcy exercises his power<sup>9</sup> to disclaim property demised by the tenancy, the power is exercisable only in relation to the part of the premises referred to in head (1) above<sup>10</sup>.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(5) DISCLAIMER/(i) Corporate and Individual Insolvency/643. Effect of disclaimer.

643. Effect of disclaimer.

A disclaimer by a trustee in bankruptcy operates so as to determine, as from the date of the disclaimer, the bankrupt's rights, interests and liabilities and his estate in or in respect of the property disclaimed, and discharges the trustees from all personal liability in respect of that property as from the date of the commencement of his trusteeship, but does not, except so far as is necessary for the purpose of releasing the bankrupt, the bankrupt's estate and the trustee from any liability, affect the rights or liabilities of any other person<sup>1</sup>.

A disclaimer by a liquidator operates so as to determine, from the date of the disclaimer, the rights, interests and liabilities of the company in or in respect of the property disclaimed, but does not, except so far as is necessary for the purpose of releasing the company from liability, affect the rights or liabilities of any other person<sup>2</sup>.

In accordance with these principles, when a head lease is disclaimed, an undertenant is freed from his covenants to the underlandlord but must perform the covenants in the head lease or he will become liable to distress or forfeiture<sup>3</sup>. The head lease is not, therefore, to be regarded as totally extinguished and it is still proper to describe the underlease as an underlease<sup>4</sup>.

Where at the time of the disclaimer the lease is still vested in the original tenant, then as between landlord and tenant it is for all practical purposes brought to an end; but a surety's liability does not determine with the ending of the lessee's primary liability<sup>5</sup>.

Where the lease has passed to an assignee, the practical effect of a disclaimer differs according to whether or not the lease was granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>6</sup>. In the case of a lease granted before that date, the disclaimer does not extinguish any continued liability of the original tenant to the landlord for the rent and on the covenants in the lease<sup>7</sup>. Where liability remains, the original tenant will normally be entitled to an indemnity from his immediate assignee and usually either he or a subsequent assignee will be entitled to prove in the bankruptcy or liquidation for his loss<sup>8</sup>. These principles are the same whether the disclaimer is by a trustee in bankruptcy or a liquidator<sup>9</sup>, but are now subject to the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 restricting the liability of the former tenant or his guarantor for rent or service charge on assignment or subsequent variation of the lease<sup>10</sup>. In the case of a tenancy granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>11</sup>, the original tenant will have been released from the burden of tenant covenants on assignment<sup>12</sup>.

The court has power to vest the disclaimed lease in any person who claims any interest in it or who is under the liability not discharged by the disclaimer<sup>13</sup>. The power may conveniently be used to vest the lease in an undertenant or a mortgagee of the leasehold interest<sup>14</sup> or, where the disclaimed lease was vested in an assignee, in the original tenant.

It has been held that a right given to the tenant to remove fixtures during the term by the provisions of the lease cannot be exercised after a disclaimer<sup>15</sup>. Where, however, the court directs<sup>16</sup> that a disclaimer is to take effect, it may make such orders with respect to fixtures, tenant's improvements and other matters arising out of the lease as it thinks fit<sup>17</sup>.

(ii) War Damage and Requisitioning of Land

644. War damage.

The Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Acts 1939 and 1941<sup>1</sup> which are not expressed to be temporary legislation<sup>2</sup>, provide that by means of notices and counter-notices a lease of land which is affected by war damage<sup>3</sup> may be disclaimed or retained on altered terms. The Acts bind the Crown<sup>4</sup>, and contracting out is forbidden<sup>5</sup>. Special provisions apply to agricultural and mining leases, ground leases, multiple leases and short tenancies. Powers of entry are conferred by the Acts to facilitate the carrying out of urgent repairs to, or the removal of furniture and property from, war damaged land<sup>6</sup>. Notwithstanding that he has served a notice of disclaimer, any tenant of any land which is unfit by reason of war damage is entitled to enter upon the land for the purpose of taking any measures necessary to preserve or remove any furniture or other goods belonging to or used by him<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Ie the Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 and the Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) (Amendment) Act 1941: see s 19. In addition to making provision for the disclaimer or retention of leases of war damaged land, these Acts also provide relief from repairing obligations and from the obligation to insure against war damage.

2 The Acts contain no provision which expressly provides for their termination or expressly limits their application to the 1939-45 war.

645. General effect of war damage legislation.

Where land comprised in a lease becomes unfit<sup>1</sup> for use by the tenant by reason of war damage, he may serve on the landlord a notice electing to disclaim the lease or a notice electing to retain the lease on altered terms<sup>2</sup>. Notices must be in writing and must comply with the statutory provisions regarding service<sup>3</sup>. The effect of a notice of disclaimer is that the lease disclaimed is deemed to have been surrendered as from the date of service of the notice<sup>4</sup>. The effect of a notice of retention is that the lease becomes subject to an implied covenant that the tenant will render the land fit as soon as is reasonably practicable; and no rent is payable until the premises are rendered fit<sup>5</sup>. If the tenant serves no notice, the landlord may serve notice on the tenant requiring him to elect which notice he should serve<sup>6</sup>. If the tenant fails to comply with the landlord's notice, he is deemed to have served a notice of retention<sup>7</sup>. Where a notice of disclaimer is served, the landlord may serve on the tenant a notice to avoid disclaimer<sup>8</sup>. The effect of a notice to avoid disclaimer is that the notice of disclaimer ceases to be valid and the lease is modified so that there is an implied covenant by the landlord that the land will be rendered fit as soon as is reasonably practicable; and no rent is payable until the land is rendered fit<sup>9</sup>. The court has jurisdiction to decide whether the land is unfit by reason of war damage<sup>10</sup>.

4 Ibid s 8(1). All subleases are also deemed to have been surrendered except a sublease entitling a person to actual occupation of the land comprised in the disclaimed lease or of any part of it and in respect of which no notice of disclaimer has been served: s 8(2)(b). Rent is apportioned up to the date of the deemed surrender: see the Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) (Amendment) Act 1941 s 13. The court has power to modify the operation of a notice of disclaimer: see the Landlord and Tenant (War Damage) Act 1939 s 9 (as amended).

5 See ibid s 10(1)(a), (b), (2). The court may direct a rent to be paid if satisfied that a part of the land is capable of beneficial occupation or that there has been unreasonable delay in rendering the land fit: see s 10(1)(c), (d).

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(5) DISCLAIMER/(ii) War Damage and Requisitioning of Land/646. Disclaimer after requisition.

646. Disclaimer after requisition.

The Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1942 contains provisions authorising the disclaimer of certain leases<sup>1</sup> comprising land<sup>2</sup> which has been requisitioned<sup>3</sup>. These provisions apply only to a lease which:

- 1292 (1) provides that the term thereby created will expire, or may be determined, at a date not later than five years after the material date<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1293 (2) provides, whatever form of words may be used, that the term thereby created will expire, or may be determined, at the end, or not later than 12 months after the end, of any war in which Her Majesty may be engaged<sup>5</sup>.

The Act binds the Crown, and applies to land belonging to Her Majesty, or forming part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall, or belonging to a government department, or held in trust for Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department<sup>6</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease' means a lease, underlease or other tenancy, assignment operating as a lease or underlease, or an agreement for such lease, underlease, tenancy or assignment: Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1942 s 13(1).

2 For these purposes, 'land' includes, without prejudice to any of the provisions of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 3, land covered with water, and parts of houses and buildings: Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1942 s 13(1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a).

3 Ie requisitioned under emergency powers within the meaning of the Compensation (Defence) Act 1939 s 17(1) (as amended). As to the distinction between requisitioning of land and compulsory purchase of land see COMPULSORY ACQUISITION OF LAND vol 18 (2009) PARA 501.

4 For these purposes, 'material date', in relation to any occasion on which possession of the land or any part of the land comprised in a lease has been taken in the exercise of emergency powers, means 26 March 1942, or if later, the date on which the land or part of the land was so taken: Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1942 s 13(1).

5 Ibid s 11.

6 Ibid s 12. In addition to authorising the disclaimer of certain leases, the Act adjusts the rights of landlord and tenant in regard to fixtures and removable buildings and also the liabilities of the parties where the landlord has undertaken to pay rates, to execute improvements or to provide services. The rights of the parties under repairing covenants are modified by the Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1944: see PARA 480 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(5) DISCLAIMER/(ii) War Damage and Requisitioning of Land/647. General effect of legislation.

647. General effect of legislation.

The statutory provisions relating to the disclaimer of certain leases<sup>1</sup> of requisitioned land apply where the land is requisitioned and the land or the main part was, immediately before the requisition, being used by the tenant or a member of the tenant's family as his residence, or for the purpose of his business, or partly as his residence and partly for purposes of his business<sup>2</sup>. The tenant may, within three months from the material date<sup>3</sup>, serve on the landlord a notice of disclaimer stating that he disclaims the lease<sup>4</sup>; but a notice of disclaimer may not be served unless at the time when it is served possession of the land to which it relates is retained in the exercise of emergency powers<sup>5</sup>. The notice must be in writing and served in the specified manner<sup>6</sup>. Where a notice of disclaimer has been served, the landlord may, at any time within one month from the service of the notice, apply to the court to determine whether the notice is of no effect on the ground that the above conditions are not fulfilled, and, if any such application is made, it lies with the tenant to show that those conditions are fulfilled, and, unless it is decided by the court on such an application that the notice is of no effect, the conditions are deemed to be fulfilled<sup>7</sup>.

Where a notice of disclaimer has been served, and the court has not decided that it is of no effect, the notice becomes effective subject to any order of the court, at the expiration of one month from the service of the notice<sup>8</sup>. Where a notice of disclaimer has become effective, the lease disclaimed is deemed to have been surrendered as from the material date and all interests in or derived out of the term created by the lease disclaimed are deemed to have been extinguished from that date<sup>9</sup>.

Where any lease is deemed to have been surrendered, the compensation payable<sup>10</sup> in respect of any period after the date on which the surrender is deemed to have taken effect is payable to the landlord<sup>11</sup>.

Where any lease is deemed to have been surrendered, the rent payable in respect of the period during which the surrender is deemed to have taken effect is apportionable, whether the rent under the lease is payable in advance or otherwise, and any rent paid by the tenant in respect of that period in excess is recoverable by him: s 6(1). Where a notice of disclaimer has been served, the court may (1) on the application of any person having a mortgage or charge in respect of the term created by the lease disclaimed, vest the lease in that person on such terms as the court thinks just which may include adaptations or modifications of the terms of the lease; (2) on the application of the landlord or tenant, make such adaptations or modifications as the court thinks just of any term of the lease relating to repairing obligations and, in particular, require the tenant to pay such sum as it thinks just in respect of any dilapidations which have already occurred and for which the tenant is liable or would, but for the disclaimer, become liable; (3) on the application of the landlord or the tenant, make such adaptations or modifications as the court thinks just of any term of the lease imposing any liability on either party which will take effect on the surrender of the lease; and any such application may be made at any time before the notice of disclaimer becomes effective: s 2(4).

648. Derelict land.

Where a landlord, having power to serve a notice to quit<sup>1</sup>, on an application to the county court satisfies the court:

- 1294 (1) that he has taken all reasonable steps to communicate with the person last known to him to be the tenant, and has failed to do so<sup>2</sup>;
- 1295 (2) that during the period of six months ending with the date of the application neither the tenant nor any person claiming under him has been in occupation of the property comprised in the tenancy<sup>3</sup> or any part of it<sup>4</sup>; and
- 1296 (3) that during that period either no rent was payable by the tenant or the rent payable has not been paid<sup>5</sup>, the court may, if it thinks fit, by order determine the tenancy as from the date of the order<sup>6</sup>.

Section 54 applies where the interest of the landlord, or any other interest in the land in question, belongs to Her Majesty in right of the Crown or the Duchy of Lancaster or to the Duchy of Cornwall, or belongs to a government department or is held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department, in like manner as if that interest were an interest not so belonging or held: s 56(6). As to the similar power for justices to put a landlord in possession of deserted premises under the Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 16 see PARA 649 post.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(6) DERELICT LAND AND DESERTED PREMISES/649. Recovery of deserted premises.

649. Recovery of deserted premises.

If any tenant holding any lands, tenements or hereditaments at a rack rent, or at a rent three-quarters of the yearly value of the demised premises:

- 1297 (1) is in arrear for a half-year's rent<sup>1</sup>; and 1298 (2) has deserted the demised premises and left them uncultivated or unoccupied<sup>2</sup> and so that there is no sufficient distress to meet the arrears of rent,

the landlord, his bailiff or receiver may request<sup>3</sup> two or more justices to go upon and view the premises<sup>4</sup>, and affix a notice that they will return to take a second view after a period of at least 14 days<sup>5</sup>. If on the second view the tenant, or some person on his behalf, does not appear and pay the rent in arrear, or if there is not sufficient distress on the premises, the justices may put the landlord into possession<sup>6</sup> of the demised premises and the lease of them to that tenant is, as to any demise contained in it only, thenceforth void<sup>7</sup>. An appeal lies to the High Court<sup>8</sup>. A successful appeal gives no claim for trespass against the justices so long as the statutory procedure has been followed<sup>9</sup>; but the landlord is liable if he has improperly procured the interference of the justices<sup>10</sup>.

1 The Deserted Tenements Act 1817 altered the period of arrears from one year to half a year. It is not necessary that the landlord should have an express power of re-entry: see the Deserted Tenements Act 1817; and Edwards v Hodges (1855) 15 CB 477 at 490. Cf Ex p Pilton (1818) 1 B & Ald 369.

2 It is immaterial that the landlord knows where the tenant is, if no one is found in possession (Ex p Pilton (1818) 1 B & Ald 369); but premises are not deserted if the tenant's wife and family are there (cf Ashcroft v Bourne (1832) 3 B & Ad 684).

3 The request need not be on oath: Basten v Carew (1825) 3 B & C 649.

4 Within the metropolitan police district, a district judge (magistrates' courts) is not required to view the premises but may send a constable to do so: see the Metropolitan Police Courts Act 1840 s 13 (as amended); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 580.

5 Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 16 (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), (3), Sch 8 para 3, Sch 10). There must be 14 clear days: Creak v Brighton Justices (1858) 1 F & F 110.

6 If the magistrates are not satisfied that the case is within the statute, a mandatory order will not be made to compel them to give possession: Ex p Fulder (1840) 8 Dowl 535. As to mandatory orders see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 703 et seq.

7 Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 16 (as amended: see note 5 supra).

649 Recovery of deserted premises

NOTE 8--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(i) Entry/650. Liability to restore possession.

(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION

(i) Entry

650. Liability to restore possession.

A lease usually contains a covenant on the tenant's part to deliver up the premises on the determination of the term. In the absence of such a covenant or of any express stipulation, the tenant is under an implied contract to restore possession to the landlord<sup>1</sup>. The damages for breach of this express or implied obligation<sup>2</sup> are not limited to the value of the land but are the amount of the real damage sustained by the landlord<sup>3</sup>. This will include the rent of the premises during the time the landlord is kept out of possession<sup>4</sup>; the reasonable damages and costs incurred by the landlord in respect of claims against him naturally arising out of the tenant's failure to deliver possession<sup>5</sup>; and also, where a subtenant or assignee is in possession and is not protected by statute<sup>6</sup>, the costs of proceedings brought against him to recover possession<sup>7</sup>. The landlord may sue for the recovery of chattels which form part of the demised premises and which have been wrongfully removed during the tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

1 Henderson v Squire (1869) LR 4 QB 170 at 173; and see Harding v Crethorn (1793) 1 Esp 56. The rule applies where the lease is determined by surrender: D'Arcy v Lord Castlemaine and Cameron [1909] 2 IR 474, Ir CA. The tenant cannot by the use and enjoyment of the demised land acquire against the landlord an easement in it distinct from such use and enjoyment (Outram v Maude (1881) 17 ChD 391 at 404; and see EASEMENTS AND PROFITS A PRENDRE vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 89); nor can he, by holding over and paying to the landlord the amount of the rates, taxes and outgoings in respect of the premises, but not the rent, acquire a title to the freehold by adverse possession (Neall v Beadle (1912) 107 LT 646). In such a case he may be deemed to hold as tenant from year to year.

2 It is not a breach of the obligation if the tenant holds over after the expiry of his tenancy under statutory authority, as, eg, a statutory tenant under the Rent Act 1977 or under the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954.

3 Watson v Lane (1856) 11 Exch 769 at 774. Where one of two joint tenants holds over, both will be liable if the other assents to the holding over, but otherwise only the one who holds over: Tancred v Christy (1843) 12 M & W 316, Ex Ch; Draper v Crofts (1846) 15 M & W 166.

4 Henderson v Squire (1869) LR 4 QB 170. The landlord is entitled to complete possession, and, if the tenant retains physical possession of part, may recover mesne profits based on the rental of the whole: see Guthrie v McCrindle (1949) 65 TLR 192. It will be immaterial that the landlord did not intend to relet the premises, so that he cannot prove any actual loss of rent: Swordheath Properties Ltd v Tabet [1979] 1 All ER 240, [1979] 1 WLR 285, CA (plaintiff company sued licensees of its former tenant who had remained in occupation as trespassers). The same principle applies to the assessment of mesne profits strictly so called, which are merely a specific category of damages for trespass recoverable from a former tenant.

5 Eg where he has contracted to let the premises, but cannot place the new tenant in possession: Bramley v Chesterton (1857) 2 CBNS 592.

6 Where an undertenant is entitled to remain in possession by statute (eg under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24 (as amended) (see PARA 713 post) or the Rent Act 1977 s 137 (as amended) (see PARAS 975-977 post) and the tenant has done all that lies in his power to give vacant possession (eg serving notice to quit on the undertenant), he will not be liable for rent or for the use and occupation of the premises for such period as the undertenant continues in possession (Reynolds v Bannerman [1922] 1 KB 719; approved in Watson v Saunders-Roe Ltd [1947] KB 437, CA); nor will the tenant be liable for mesne profits since the former subtenant will have become the landlord's direct tenant. If the tenant arranges to continue his tenancy, the undertenant, if he remains in possession, will usually be presumed to continue the underlease so as to be liable to the tenant for rent: Levy v Lewis (1861) 9 CBNS 872.

7 Henderson v Squire (1869) LR 4 QB 170; Henderson v Van Cooten [1922] WN 340 (caretaker installed by the tenant refused to vacate the premises). While an undertenant wrongfully remains in occupation, the landlord may treat the tenant as still in possession (Harding v Crethorn (1793) 1 Esp 56; cf Roe v Wiggs (1806) 2 Bos & PNR 330), and may recover rent from him for the period of the undertenant's occupation (Ibbs v Richardson (1839) 9 Ad & El 849; Thames Manufacturing Co Ltd v Perrotts (Nichols & Peyton) Ltd (1984) 50 P & CR 1 (tenant liable on covenants where assignee wrongfully remains in occupation); but see now paras 289-291, 578 et seq ante).

8 Petre v Ferrers (1891) 61 LJ Ch 426. In the case of a furnished letting, a tenant who has agreed to deliver up the house and chattels in as good state and order as the same were in at the date of the letting will be liable for damage done by burglars: Phillimore v Lane (1925) 133 LT 268.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(i) Entry/651. Landlord's right of re-entry.

651. Landlord's right of re-entry.

Where a lease has ended and the landlord has a contractual right to retake possession, his right of re-entry is subject to two substantial statutory restrictions<sup>1</sup>. Where neither of these restrictions applies, the landlord may simply re-enter, as, for example, where the tenant has abandoned possession<sup>2</sup> or where there is no residential occupier and the landlord can effect his entry without violence<sup>3</sup>. A landlord who has obtained judgment for possession is not bound to call in the help of the sheriff or bailiff to put him in possession if he can enter peaceably and lawfully without that help<sup>4</sup>.

2 Lacey v Lear (1802) Peake Add Cas 210; Wildbor v Rainforth (1828) 8 B & C 4.

3 See Williams v Taperell (1892) 8 TLR 241. Re-entry after the determination of the term is merely the exercise of the landlord's right of property, and is to be distinguished from a re-entry on a default of the tenant which determines or defeats the tenant's title: Butcher v Poole Corpn [1943] KB 48 at 53, [1942] 2 All ER 572 at 577, CA.

4 Aglionby v Cohen [1955] 1 QB 558, [1955] 1 All ER 785.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(i) Entry/652. Unauthorised violent entry.

652. Unauthorised violent entry.

Any person who, without lawful authority, uses or threatens violence<sup>1</sup> for the purpose of securing entry into any premises<sup>2</sup> for himself or for any other person is guilty of an offence provided that there is someone present on those premises at the time who is opposed to the entry which the violence is intended to secure and the person using or threatening the violence knows that this is the case<sup>3</sup>. This does not, however, apply to a person who is a displaced residential occupier<sup>4</sup> or a protected intending occupier<sup>5</sup> of the premises in question or who is acting on behalf of such an occupier; and if the accused adduces sufficient evidence that he was, or was acting on behalf of, such an occupier he must be presumed to be, or to be acting on behalf of, such an occupier unless the contrary is proved by the prosecution<sup>6</sup>. Subject to that, the fact that a person has any interest in or right to possession or occupation of any premises does not constitute lawful authority for the use or threat of violence by him or anyone else for the purpose of securing his entry into those premises<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale, or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 It is immaterial for these purposes (1) whether the violence in question is directed against the person or against property; and (2) whether the entry which the violence is intended to secure is for the purpose of acquiring possession of the premises in question or for any other purpose: Criminal Law Act 1977 s 6(4).

2 For these purposes 'premises' means any building, any part of a building under separate occupation, any land ancillary to a building, the site comprising any building or buildings together with any land ancillary thereto: ibid s 12(1)(a).

3 Ibid s 6(1). As to damages for unlawful eviction see PARAS 654-655 post.

4 Subject to ibid s 12(4), any person who was occupying any premises as a residence immediately before being excluded from occupation by anyone who entered those premises, or any access to those premises, as a trespasser is a displaced residential occupier of the premises for these purposes so long as he continues to be excluded from occupation of the premises by the original trespasser or by any subsequent trespasser: ss 6(7), 12(3). A person who was himself occupying the premises in question as a trespasser immediately before being excluded from occupation is not, however, by virtue of s 12(3) a displaced residential occupier of the premises for these purposes: s 12(4). A person who by virtue of s 12(3) is a displaced residential occupier of any premises is to be regarded for these purposes as a displaced residential occupier also of any access to those premises; and 'access' means, in relation to any premises, any part of any site or building within which those premises are situated which constitutes an ordinary means of access to those premises (whether or not that is its sole or primary use): s 12(1)(b), (5).

5 For the purposes, an individual is a protected intending occupier of any premises at any time if at that time he falls within ibid s 12A(2), (4) or (6) (as added): ss 6(7), 12A(1) (s 6(7) amended, and s 12A added, by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 ss 72(1), (5), 74). A person who is a protected intending occupier of any premises is to be regarded for these purposes as a protected intending occupier also of any access to those premises: Criminal Law 1977 s 12A(11) (as so added).

An individual is a protected intending occupier of any premises if (1) he has in those premises a freehold interest or a leasehold interest with not less than two years still to run; (2) he requires the premises for his own occupation as a residence; (3) he is excluded from occupation of the premises by a person who entered them, or any access to them, as a trespasser; and (4) he or a person acting on his behalf holds a written statement (a) which specifies his interest in the premises; (b) which states that he requires the premises for occupation as a residence for himself; and (c) with respect to which the requirements in s 12A(3) (as added) are fulfilled: s 12A(2) (as so added). Those requirements are that the statement is signed by the person whose interest is specified in it in the presence of a justice of the peace or commissioner for oaths and that the justice of the peace or commissioner for oaths has subscribed his name as a witness to the signature: s 12A(3) (as so added). A person is guilty of an offence if he makes a statement for the purposes of head (4) supra or head (iv) infra which he knows to be false in a material particular or if he recklessly makes such a statement which is false in a material particular: s 12A(8) (as so added). A person guilty of an offence under s 12A(8) (as so added) is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale or to both: s 12A(10) (as so added). As to the standard scale see PARA 52 note 6 ante.

An individual is also a protected intending occupier of any premises if (i) he has a tenancy of those premises (other than a tenancy falling within s 12A(2)(a) (as added) (see head (1) supra) or s 12A(6)(a) (as added) (see head (A) infra) or a licence to occupy those premises granted by a person with a freehold interest or a leasehold interest with not less than two years still to run in the premises; (ii) he requires the premises for his own occupation as a residence; (iii) he is excluded from occupation of the premises by a person who entered them, or any access to them, as a trespasser; and (iv) he or a person acting on his behalf holds a written statement which states that he has been granted a tenancy of those premises or a licence to occupy those premises, specifies the interest in the premises of the person who granted that tenancy or licence to occupy ('the landlord'), states that he requires the premises for occupation as a residence for himself and with respect to which the requirements in s 12A(5) (as added) are fulfilled: s 12A(4) (as so added). Those requirements are that the statement is signed by the landlord and by the tenant or licensee in the presence of a justice of the peace or commissioner for oaths and that the justice of the peace or commissioner for oaths has subscribed his name as a witness to the signatures: s 12A(5) (as so added).

An individual is also a protected intending occupier of any premises if (A) he has a tenancy of those premises (other than a tenancy falling within s 12A(2)(a) or (4)(a) (as added: see heads (1), (i) supra) or a licence to occupy those premises granted by an authority to which this provision applies; (B) he requires the premises for his own occupation as a residence; (C) he is excluded from occupation of the premises by a person who entered the premises, or any access to them, as a trespasser; and (D) there has been issued to him by or on behalf of the authority referred to in head (A) supra above a certificate stating that he has been granted a tenancy of those premises or a licence to occupy those premises as a residence by the authority and that the authority which granted that tenancy or licence to occupy is one to which this provision applies, being of a description specified in the certificate: s 12A(6) (as so added). Section 12A(6) (as so added) applies to the following authorities, ie any body mentioned in the Rent Act 1977 s 14 (as amended) (landlord's interest belonging to local authority etc: see PARA 884 post); the Housing Corporation; and a registered social landlord within the meaning of the Housing Act 1985 (see s 5(4), (5) (as amended); and HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 67): Criminal Law Act 1977 s 12A(7) (as so added; amended by the Government of Wales Act 1998 ss 140, 152, Sch 16 para 3(2), Sch 18 Pt V; the Housing Act 1996 (Consequential Provisions) Order 1996, SI 1996/2325, art 5(1), Sch 2, PARA 8). The Criminal Law Act 1977 also applies to the Secretary of State or to the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister if the tenancy or licence is granted by him or by it under the Housing Associations Act 1985 Pt III (ss 74-102) (as amended) (see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 18 et seq): Criminal Law Act 1977 s 12A(7A) (added by the Government of Wales Act 1998 s 140, Sch 16 para 3(3)). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante; and as to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

UPDATE

652 Unauthorised violent entry

NOTE 5--See Transfer of Housing Corporation Functions (Modifications and Transitional Provisions) Order 2008, SI 2008/2839.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(i) Entry/653. Residential occupiers.

653. Residential occupiers.

Where any premises are let as a dwelling<sup>1</sup> on a lease which is subject to a right of re-entry or forfeiture, it is not lawful to enforce that right otherwise than by proceedings in the court<sup>2</sup> while any person is lawfully residing in the premises or part of them<sup>3</sup>.

Where any premises:

1299 (1) have been let as a dwelling under a tenancy<sup>4</sup> which is neither a statutorily protected tenancy<sup>5</sup> nor an excluded tenancy<sup>6</sup>; or

1300 (2) are subject to any restricted contract which creates a licence<sup>7</sup>; or

1301 (3) are occupied as a dwelling under a licence, other than an excluded licence<sup>a</sup>, and the tenancy ('the former tenancy') or, as the case may be, the licence has come to an end but the occupier<sup>9</sup> continues to reside in the premises or part of them, it is not lawful for the owner<sup>10</sup> to enforce against the occupier, otherwise than by proceedings in the court<sup>11</sup>, his right to recover possession of the premises<sup>12</sup>. A mortgagee is not, however, prevented by these provisions from enforcing his right to possession against a tenant of the mortgagor where the tenancy is not binding on the mortgagee<sup>13</sup>.

The above provisions are binding on the Crown<sup>14</sup>; but they do not apply to any premises being a caravan stationed on a protected site<sup>15</sup>. The fact that the landlord has committed an offence under the above provisions does not of itself give the tenant a civil remedy in damages<sup>16</sup>.

If for the purpose of any proceedings, whether civil or criminal, brought or intended to be brought under the above provisions, any person serves upon any agent of the landlord<sup>17</sup> named as such in the rent book or other similar document, or the person who receives the rent of the dwelling, a notice in writing requiring the agent or other person to disclose to him the full name and place of abode or place of business of the landlord, that agent or other person must comply with the notice forthwith<sup>18</sup>. If any such agent or other person fails or refuses so to comply with a notice so served on him, he is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, unless he shows to the satisfaction of the court that he did not know, and could not with reasonable diligence have ascertained, such of the facts required by the notice to be disclosed as were not disclosed by him<sup>19</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'let as a dwelling' means 'let wholly or partly as a dwelling' and so applies to premises which are let for mixed residential and business purposes; there is no reason why the statutory protection against eviction without court proceedings ought not to apply to a tenant for whom the premises represent not only his home but also his place of business: Pirabakaran v Patel [2006] EWCA Civ 685, [2006] 23 EG 165 (CS), [2006] All ER (D) 380 (May). For the meaning of 'let' see PARA 215 note 2 ante; and note 8 infra.

2 For these purposes, 'the court' means (1) the county court, in relation to premises with respect to which the county court has for the time being jurisdiction in claims for the recovery of land; and (2) the High Court, in relation to other premises: Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 9(1). A county court now has jurisdiction to hear and determine any such claim: see the County Courts Act 1984 s 21(1) (amended by the High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 2(8), Schedule Pt I).

3 Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 2. No specific penalty is provided, but an unlawful act under s 2 may also amount to an offence of unlawful eviction or unlawful harassment: see s 1 (as amended); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 608-609. As to damages for unlawful eviction see PARAS 654-655 post.

4 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 215 note 2 ante; and note 8 infra. Where there is a licence granted to a person who is not an employee of the licensor, the prohibition on eviction without due process of law under ibid s 3 (as amended) does not apply; and, if the licensee's belongings are evicted after the licensee has been duly evicted by notice, no offence is committed under s 1 (as amended): see R v Blankley [1979] Crim LR 166.

The Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3 (as amended) also applies, with the necessary modifications, where the owner's right to recover possession arises on the death of the tenant under a statutory tenancy within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 post) or the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARAS 1146-1149 post): Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(3). For the meaning of 'the owner' see note 10 infra.

As to the special provisions affecting agricultural employees see s 4 (as amended); and PARAS 1194-1195 post.

5 For these purposes, 'statutorily protected tenancy' means (1) a protected tenancy within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 post) or a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt I (ss 1-22) (as amended) (see PARA 1196 et seq post) applies; (2) a protected occupancy or statutory tenancy as defined in the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARA 1144 et seq post); (3) a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies; (4) a tenancy of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 which is a tenancy in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323); (5) an assured tenancy (see PARA 1011 et seq post) or assured agricultural occupancy (see PARA 1183 et seq post) under the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45)

(as amended); (6) a tenancy to which the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 186, Sch 10 (as amended) (see PARA 1237 et seq post) applies; (7) a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 8(1) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 61; the Housing Act 1988 s 33; the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 194(1), Sch 11 para 54; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 29).

6 For these purposes, references to an excluded tenancy do not apply to a tenancy entered into before 15 January 1989 or a tenancy entered into on or after that date but pursuant to a contract made before that date, but, subject thereto, 'excluded tenancy' and 'excluded licence' are to be construed in accordance with the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3A (as added and amended) (see PARA 215 ante): s 3(2C) (s 3(2B), (2C) added by the Housing Act 1988 s 30(2)).

7 The Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(1), (2) (as amended) applies in relation to any restricted contract, within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 986 post), which creates a licence and is entered into on or after 28 November 1980 as it applies in relation to a restricted contract which creates a tenancy: Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(2A) (added by the Housing Act 1980 s 69(1)).

8 The Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(1), (2) (as amended) applies in relation to any premises occupied as a dwelling under a licence, other than an excluded licence, as it applies in relation to premises let as a dwelling under a tenancy; and in s 3(1), (2) (as amended) the expressions 'let' and 'tenancy' are to be construed accordingly: s 3(2B) (as added: see note 6 supra). It does not, however, apply to a licence of accommodation secured by a local authority for a homeless person in discharge of its duty under the Housing Act 1996 s 188(1) (see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 286): Desnousse v Newham London Borough Council [2006] EWCA Civ 547, [2006] 3 WLR 349, [2006] All ER (D) 256 (May), following Mohamed v Manek and Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea (1995) 94 LGR 211, (1995) 27 HLR 439, CA.

9 For these purposes, 'the occupier', in relation to any premises, means any person lawfully residing in the premises or part of them at the termination of the former tenancy: Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(2).

10 For these purposes, 'the owner', in relation to any premises, means the person who, as against the occupier, is entitled to possession thereof: ibid s 8(3).

11 Any powers of a county court in proceedings for recovery of possession of any premises in the circumstances mentioned in ibid s 3(1) (as amended: see note 12 infra) may be exercised with the leave of the judge by any district judge, except in so far as rules of court otherwise provide: s 9(2); Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1), (3). The jurisdiction of the High Court in proceedings to enforce a lessor's right of re-entry or forfeiture, or to enforce a mortgagee's right of possession in a case where the former tenancy was not binding on the mortgagee, is unaffected: Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 9(3). See also Peachey Property Corp'n Ltd v Robinson [1967] 2 QB 543, [1966] 2 All ER 981, CA.

12 Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(1) (amended by the Housing Act 1988 s 30(1)). No specific penalty is provided, but an unlawful act under the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3 (as amended) may also amount to an offence of unlawful eviction or unlawful harassment under s 1 (as amended) (as to which see note 3 supra). The leave of the court is needed to begin proceedings to enforce a right of re-entry or forfeiture against a tenant who has made a claim under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 (see PARA 1434 post) or who is participating in a claim to exercise the right to collective enfranchisement under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 Pt I Ch I (ss 1-38) (as amended) (see PARA 1596 post) or who has made a claim to acquire a new lease under Pt I Ch II (ss 39-62) (as amended) (see PARA 1687 post).

14 In so far as the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 requires the taking of proceedings in the court for the recovery of possession or confers any powers on the court, it is binding, except in the case of s 4(10) (see PARA 1195 post), on the Crown: s 10.

15 Caravan Sites Act 1968 s 5(5) (amended by the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 12(1), Sch 1 para 3). For the meaning of 'protected site' see PARA 1281 post. As to the protection of residential occupiers of caravan sites generally see the Caravan Sites Act 1968 Pt I (ss 1-5) (as amended); and PARAS 1281-1284 post.

17 For these purposes, 'landlord' includes (1) any person from time to time deriving title under the original landlord; (2) in relation to any dwelling house, any person other than the tenant who is or, but for the Rent Act 1977 Pt VII (ss 98-107) (as amended) (see PARAS 942 et seq, 959, 972, 1002 et seq post) would be, entitled to possession of the dwelling house; and (3) any person who grants to another the right to occupy the dwelling in question as a residence and any person directly or indirectly deriving title from the grantor: Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 7(3) (amended by the Housing Act 1988 s 140(1), (2), Sch 17 Pt I para 26, Sch 18).

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(i) Entry/654. Damages for unlawful eviction.

654. Damages for unlawful eviction.

The statutory right to damages for unlawful eviction<sup>1</sup> applies if, at any time after 9 June 1988, a landlord<sup>2</sup> ('the landlord in default') or any person acting on his behalf unlawfully deprives the residential occupier of any premises of his occupation of the whole or part of the premises<sup>3</sup>. That right also applies if at any time after that date a landlord ('the landlord in default') or any person acting on his behalf:

- 1302 (1) attempts unlawfully to deprive the residential occupier of any premises of his occupation of the whole or part of the premises; or
- 1303 (2) knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the conduct is likely to cause the residential occupier of any premises:
- 113
- 138. (a) to give up his occupation of the premises or any part of them; or
- 139. (b) to refrain from exercising any right or pursuing any remedy in respect of the premises or any part of them,
- 114
- 1304 does acts likely to interfere with the peace or comfort of the residential occupier or members of his household, or persistently withdraws or withholds services reasonably required for the occupation of the premises as a residence, and, as a result, the residential occupier gives up his occupation of the premises as a residence<sup>4</sup>.

Where the above provisions apply, the landlord in default is liable to pay damages, assessed on the statutory basis<sup>5</sup>, to the former residential occupier<sup>6</sup> in respect of his loss of the right to occupy the premises in question as his residence<sup>7</sup>. The right of a residential occupier to enforce any liability which otherwise arises in respect of his loss of the right to occupy premises as his residence is not affected; but damages may not be awarded both in respect of such a statutory liability<sup>8</sup> and in respect of a liability on account of the same loss<sup>9</sup>. No liability arises<sup>10</sup> if, before the date on which the proceedings to enforce the liability are finally disposed of<sup>11</sup>, the former residential occupier is reinstated in the premises in question in such circumstances that he becomes again the residential occupier of them, or if, at the request of the former residential occupier, a court<sup>12</sup> makes an order, whether in the nature of an injunction or otherwise, as a result of which he is so reinstated<sup>13</sup>.

If, in proceedings to enforce a liability so arising, it appears to the court:

1305 (i) that prior to the event which gave rise to the liability, the conduct of the former residential occupier or any person living with him in the premises concerned was such that it is reasonable to mitigate the damages for which the landlord in default would otherwise be liable<sup>14</sup>; or

1306 (ii) that, before the proceedings were begun, the landlord in default offered to reinstate the former residential occupier in the premises in question and either it was unreasonable of the former residential occupier to refuse that offer or, if he had obtained alternative accommodation before the offer was made, it would have been unreasonable of him to refuse that offer if he had not obtained that accommodation, the court may reduce the amount of damages which would otherwise be payable to such an amount as it thinks appropriate<sup>15</sup>.

In proceedings to enforce such a liability it is a defence for the defendant to prove that he believed, and had reasonable cause to believe:

1307 (A) that the residential occupier had ceased to reside in the premises in question at the time when he was deprived of occupation or, as the case may be, when the attempt was made or the acts were done as a result of which he gave up his occupation of those premises; or

1308 (B) that, where the liability would otherwise arise by virtue only of the doing of acts or the withdrawal or withholding of services, he had reasonable grounds for doing the acts or withdrawing or withholding the services in question<sup>16</sup>.

1 Ibid under the Housing Act 1988 s 27: see the text and notes 2-16 infra. As to the basis of assessment of damages see PARA 655 post.

2 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a residential occupier, means the person who, but for the occupier's right to occupy, would be entitled to the occupation of the premises and any superior landlord under whom that person derives title: ibid s 27(9)(c); and see Jones and Lee v Miah and Miah (1992) 24 HLR 578, CA. 'Residential occupier', in relation to any premises, has the same meaning as in the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 1 (as amended) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 608-609): Housing Act 1988 s 27(9)(a). 'The right to occupy', in relation to a residential occupier, includes any restriction on the right of another person to recover possession of the premises in question: s 27(9)(b). See also note 6 infra.

3 Ibid s 27(1). Eviction without due process of law is prohibited by the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3 (as amended), and re-entry under a lease is similarly restricted by s 2: see PARA 653 ante.

4 Housing Act 1988 s 27(2).

5 Ibid assessed on the basis set out in ibid s 28 (as amended): see PARA 655 post.

6 For these purposes, 'former residential occupier', in relation to any premises, means the person who was the residential occupier until he was deprived of or gave up his occupation as mentioned in ibid s 27(1) or (2) (see the text and notes 1-4 supra); and, in relation to a former residential occupier, 'the right to occupy' and 'landlord' are to be construed accordingly: s 27(9)(d).

7 Ibid s 27(3). Any liability arising by virtue of s 27(3) is to be in the nature of a liability in tort and, subject to s 27(5) (see the text and notes 8-9 infra), is additional to any liability arising apart from s 27, whether in tort, contract or otherwise: s 27(4). The occupier may choose whether to accept an offer of reinstatement or claim damages: Tagro v Cafane [1991] 2 All ER 235, [1991] 1 WLR 378, CA. Damages under the Housing Act 1988 ss 27, 28 (as amended) can only be obtained from the landlord and not from his agent as a joint tortfeasor: Sampson v Wilson [1996] Ch 39, (1995) 70 P & CR 359, CA.

8     le a liability arising by virtue of the Housing Act 1988 s 27.

9     Ibid s 27(5). Damages awarded at common law for the loss of the right to occupy premises fall to be set off against damages awarded under ss 27, 28 (as amended): Nwokorie v Mason (1993) 26 HLR 60, sub nom Mason v Nwokorie [1994] 1 EGLR 59, CA.

10    le under the Housing Act 1988 s 27(3): see the text and notes 5-7 supra.

11    For these purposes, proceedings to enforce a liability are finally disposed of on the earliest date by which the proceedings, including any proceedings on or in consequence of an appeal, have been determined and any time for appealing or further appealing has expired, except that, if any appeal is abandoned, the proceedings are to be taken to be disposed of on the date of the abandonment: ibid s 27(6).

12    A county court has jurisdiction to hear and determine any question arising under these provisions: ibid s 40(1).

13    Ibid s 27(6); and see Tagro v Cafane [1991] 2 All ER 235, [1991] 1 WLR 378, CA. The former residential occupier can only obtain one form of redress, so he is entitled either to damages under the 1988 Act, or to a declaration that he remains in possession of the property, and must elect which remedy he prefers at trial: Osei-Bonsu v Wandsworth London Borough Council [1999] 1 All ER 265 at 280, [1999] 1 WLR 1011 at 1026, CA, per Simon Brown LJ.

14    Domestic violence may be relevant conduct for the purposes of head (1) in the text: Osei-Bonsu v Wandsworth London Borough Council [1999] 1 All ER 265, [1999] 1 WLR 1011, CA.

15    Housing Act 1988 s 27(7). 'Conduct' is not limited to serious acts of misfeasance, but is equivalent to 'behaviour' and includes acts and omissions, and an intention on the part of the former residential occupier, provided that intention is evidenced by action or inaction. Failure to pay rent will also lead to a reduction in damages, even where the court has made a separate order for payment of the arrears: Regalgrand Ltd v Dickerson (1996) 74 P & CR 312, (1996) 29 HLR 620, CA.

16    Housing Act 1988 s 27(8). It is no defence for the landlord that it has reasonable cause to believe the tenant has ceased to reside in the premises, where that belief is mistaken as to the validity of a joint tenant's purported termination of the tenancy: Osei-Bonsu v Wandsworth London Borough Council [1999] 1 All ER 265, [1999] 1 WLR 1011, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(i) Entry/655. Measure of damages.

655. Measure of damages.

The basis for the assessment of damages for unlawful eviction<sup>1</sup> is the difference in value, determined as at the time immediately before the residential occupier<sup>2</sup> ceased to occupy the premises in question as his residence, between:

1309 (1) the value of the interest of the landlord in default<sup>3</sup> determined on the assumption that the residential occupier continues to have the same right to occupy<sup>4</sup> the premises as before that time; and 1310 (2) the value of that interest determined on the assumption that the residential occupier has ceased to have that right<sup>5</sup>.

For the purposes of such valuations, it is to be assumed:

- 1311 (a) that the landlord in default is selling his interest on the open market to a willing buyer;
- 1312 (b) that neither the residential occupier nor any member of his family<sup>6</sup> wishes to buy; and
- 1313 (c) that it is unlawful to carry out any substantial development<sup>7</sup> of any of the land in which the landlord's interest subsists or to demolish the whole or part of any building on that land<sup>8</sup>.

1 le the basis of assessment referred to in the Housing Act 1988 s 27(3): see PARA 654 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'residential occupier' has the same meaning as in ibid s 27(9) (see PARA 654 note 2 ante): s 28(4).

3 In relation to any premises, any reference to the interest of the landlord in default is a reference to his interest in the building in which the premises in question are comprised, whether or not that building contains any other premises, together with its curtilage: ibid s 28(2). For these purposes, 'landlord in default' has the same meaning as in s 27 (see PARA 654 ante) (s 28(4)); and 'landlord' has the same meaning as in s 27(9) (see PARA 654 note 2 ante) (s 28(4)).

4 For these purposes, 'the right to occupy' has the same meaning as in ibid s 27(9) (see PARA 654 note 2 ante): s 28(4).

5 Ibid s 28(1). A valuation of the unincumbered interest should take into account the existence of other residential occupancies: Melville v Bruton (1997) 29 HLR 319, [1996] 13 LS Gaz R 26 CA, applied in King v Jackson (1997) 30 HLR 541, [1998] 1 EGLR 30 CA.

6 The Housing Act 1985 s 113 (as amended) (meaning of 'members of a person's family': see PARA 1319 note 5 post) applies for these purposes: Housing Act 1988 s 28(5).

7 The reference to substantial development of any of the land in which the landlord's interest subsists is a reference to any development other than (1) development for which planning permission is granted by a general development order for the time being in force and which is carried out so as to comply with any condition or limitation subject to which planning permission is so granted; or (2) a change of use resulting in the building referred to in ibid s 28(2) (see note 3 supra) or any part of it being used as, or as part of, one or more dwelling houses: s 28(6). For these purposes, 'general development order' has the meaning given in the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 s 56(6) (see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(1) (Reissue) PARA 221); Housing Act 1988 s 28(6) (amended by the Planning (Consequential Provisions) Act 1990 s 4, Sch 2 para 79(1)).

(ii) Proceedings for Possession

656. Jurisdiction.

A claim by a landlord to recover possession may be begun in the High Court or in a county court<sup>1</sup>. It is no longer possible to recover possession in a magistrates' court<sup>2</sup>, except in respect of deserted premises in certain circumstances<sup>3</sup>.

Where a possession claim is started electronically<sup>4</sup>, proceedings will be issued in the appropriate county court by reference to the post code provided by the claimant and that court has jurisdiction to hear and determine the claim and to carry out enforcement of any judgment irrespective of whether the property is within or outside the jurisdiction of that court<sup>5</sup>.

- 1 See PARA 660 post.
- 2 It was formerly possible to recover possession in a magistrates' court under the Small Tenements Recovery Act 1838 (repealed).
- 3 See PARA 649 ante.
- 4 See PARA 661 post.
- 5 See PARA 661 note 11 post.

The pre-action protocol for certain possession claims based on rent arrears.

657. The pre-action protocol for certain possession claims based on rent arrears.

As from 2 October 2006, a pre-action protocol<sup>1</sup> applies to residential possession claims by social landlords such as local authorities, registered social landlords<sup>2</sup> and housing action trusts<sup>3</sup> which are based solely on claims for rent arrears. The protocol does not apply to claims in respect of long leases or to claims for possession where there is no security of tenure. The protocol reflects the guidance on good practice given to social landlords in the collection of rent arrears. It recognises that it is in the interests of both landlords and tenants to ensure that rent is paid promptly and to ensure that difficulties are resolved wherever possible without court proceedings. Its aim is to encourage more pre-action contact between landlords and tenants and to enable court time to be used more effectively. Courts ought to take into account whether the protocol has been followed when considering what orders to make and registered social landlords and local authorities ought also to comply with guidance issued from time to time by the Housing Corporation<sup>4</sup> and the Department for Communities and Local Government<sup>5</sup>.

The pre-action protocol makes provision with regard to:

- 1314 (1) initial contact between the landlord and the tenant<sup>6</sup>;
- 1315 (2) the position after the service of statutory notices by the landlord<sup>7</sup>;
- 1316 (3) alternative dispute resolution<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1317 (4) court proceedings<sup>9</sup>.

Where court proceedings are taken, then not later than ten days before the date set for the hearing, the landlord ought to provide the tenant with up to date rent statements and disclose what knowledge he possesses of the tenant's housing benefit position to the tenant.<sup>10</sup> He should inform the tenant of the date and time of any court hearing and the order applied for. The landlord should advise the tenant to attend the hearing as the tenant's home is at risk; and records of such advice should be kept<sup>11</sup>. If the tenant complies with an agreement made after the issue of proceedings to pay the current rent and a reasonable amount towards arrears, the landlord should agree to postpone court proceedings so long as the tenant keeps to such agreement<sup>12</sup>; and if the tenant ceases to comply with the agreement, the landlord should warn the tenant of the intention to restore the proceedings and give the tenant clear time limits within which to comply<sup>13</sup>.

If the landlord unreasonably fails to comply with the terms of the protocol, the court may impose one or more of the following sanctions:

- 1318 (a) it may make an order for costs;
 1319 (b) in cases other than those brought solely on mandatory grounds, it may adjourn, strike out or dismiss claims<sup>14</sup>.

If the tenant unreasonably fails to comply with the terms of the protocol, the court may take such failure into account when considering whether it is reasonable to make possession orders<sup>15</sup>.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/658. Notice to landlord of adverse claims.

658. Notice to landlord of adverse claims.

If the tenant is sued for possession by a person claiming adversely to the landlord, he must give notice to the landlord or his bailiff or receiver<sup>1</sup>. The landlord may then obtain an order adding him as a defendant<sup>2</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 145; and the County Courts Act 1984 s 137(1). If the tenant fails to give notice, he is liable to forfeit to the person of whom he holds the premises an amount equal to the value of three years' improved or rack rent of the premises, to be recovered by proceedings in any court having jurisdiction in respect of claims of such amount: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 145; and the County Courts Act 1984 s 137(2). The rent is not the rent reserved, but such a rent as that at which premises could fairly be let at the time of service of the writ or summons: Crocker v Fothergill (1819) 2 B & Ald 652 (decided on similar wording in the Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 12 (repealed)).

2 As to the joinder and substitution of parties see CPR Pt 19; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 210 et seq. The landlord must rely on his own title and must not set up any defect in the claimant's title as against the tenant: Doe d Davies v Creed (1829) 5 Bing 327; Doe d Mee v Litherland (1836) 4 Ad & El 784. As to the caution to be exercised in the use of pre-CPR authorities, however, see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 33.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/659. Interim possession proceedings.

659. Interim possession proceedings.

An application for an interim possession order may only be made where the following conditions are satisfied:

- 1320 (1) the only claim made is a possession claim against trespassers for the recovery of premises;
- 1321 (2) the claimant:
- 115
- 140. (a) has an immediate right to possession of the premises; and
- 141. (b) has had such a right throughout the period of alleged unlawful occupation; and
- 142. (c) the claim is made within 28 days of the date on which the claimant first knew, or ought reasonably to have known, that the defendant, or any of the defendants, was in occupation<sup>1</sup>.
- 116

Such an application may not be made against a defendant who entered or remained on the premises with the consent of a person who, at the time consent was given, had an immediate right to possession of the premises<sup>2</sup>.

Interim possession proceedings are thus not proceedings between landlord and tenant and are considered elsewhere in this work<sup>3</sup>.

2 See CPR 55.21(2).

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/660. Possession proceedings; general rules for starting the claim.

660. Possession proceedings; general rules for starting the claim.

The procedure set out in the following rules<sup>1</sup> must be used where the claim includes:

- 1322 (1) a possession claim<sup>2</sup> brought by a landlord or former landlord, a mortgagee<sup>3</sup> or a licensor or former licensor;
- 1323 (2) a possession claim against trespassers<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1324 (3) a claim by a tenant seeking relief from forfeiture<sup>5</sup>.

The rules are subject to any enactment or practice direction which sets out special provisions with regard to any particular category of claim<sup>6</sup>. They do not apply where the claimant uses the procedure relating to accelerated possession claims of property let on an assured shorthold tenancy<sup>7</sup>, nor where the claimant seeks an interim possession order<sup>8</sup> except where the court orders otherwise or rules relating to such an order<sup>9</sup> so provide<sup>10</sup>.

The claim must be started in the county court for the district in which the land is situated unless the condition for bringing it in the High Court applies<sup>11</sup> or an enactment provides otherwise<sup>12</sup>. The relevant practice direction refers to circumstances which may justify starting the claim in the High Court<sup>13</sup>. Only exceptional circumstances justify starting a claim in the High Court<sup>14</sup>. Circumstances which may, in an appropriate case, justify starting a claim in the High Court are if:

- 1325 (a) there are complicated disputes of fact;
- 1326 (b) there are points of law of general importance; or
- 1327 (c) the claim is against trespassers and there is a substantial risk of public disturbance or of serious harm to persons or property which properly require immediate determination<sup>15</sup>.

The value of the property and the amount of any financial claim may be relevant circumstances, but these factors alone will not normally justify starting the claim in the High Court<sup>16</sup>.

If a claimant starts a claim in the High Court and the court decides that it should have been started in the county court, the court will normally either strike the claim out or transfer it to the county court on its own initiative. This is likely to result in delay and the court will normally disallow the costs of starting the claim in the High Court and of any transfer<sup>17</sup>.

Where, in a possession claim against trespassers, the claimant does not know the name of a person in occupation or possession of the land, the claim must be brought against 'persons unknown' in addition to any named defendants<sup>18</sup>.

The claim form and form of defence sent with it must be in the forms set out in the relevant practice direction<sup>19</sup>.

The particulars of claim must be filed<sup>20</sup> and served with the claim form<sup>21</sup>. In a possession claim the particulars of claim must:

- 1328 (i) identify the land to which the claim relates;
- 1329 (ii) state whether the claim relates to residential property;
- 1330 (iii) state the ground on which possession is claimed;
- 1331 (iv) give full details about any mortgage or tenancy agreement; and
- 1332 (v) give details of every person who, to the best of the claimant's knowledge, is in possession of the property<sup>22</sup>.

Additional requirements are specified if the claim:

- 1333 (A) relates to residential property let on a tenancy<sup>23</sup>;

- 1334 (B) is a possession claim by a mortgagee<sup>24</sup>;
- 1335 (C) is a possession claim against trespassers<sup>25</sup>;
- 1336 (D) is a possession claim in relation to a demoted tenancy where the landlord is a housing action trust or a local housing authority<sup>26</sup>.

Certain possession claims may be started electronically<sup>27</sup>.

1 le CPR Pt 55 s I (CPR 55.1-55.10A): see the text and notes 2-21 infra; and PARA 661 et seq post.

2 For these purposes, 'a possession claim' means a claim for the recovery of possession of land (including buildings or parts of buildings): CPR 55.1(a).

3 For these purposes, 'mortgage' includes a legal or equitable mortgage and a legal or equitable charge and 'mortgagee' is to be interpreted accordingly: CPR 55.1(c). As to possession claims by mortgagees see further CPR 55.10; and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 550.

4 'A possession claim against trespassers' means a claim for the recovery of land which the claimant alleges is occupied only by a person or persons who entered or remained on the land without the consent of a person entitled to possession of that land but does not include a claim against a tenant or subtenant whether his tenancy has been terminated or not: CPR 55.1(b). As to such claims see further TORT.

5 CPR 55.2(1). A claim which is not a possession claim may be brought under the procedure set out in CPR Pt 55 s I if it is started in the same claim form as a possession claim which, by virtue of CPR 55.2(1), must be brought in accordance with CPR Pt 55 s I: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 1.7. For examples see PARAS 1.8, 1.9. As to the procedure where a demotion claim or a suspension claim (or both) is made in the same claim form in which a possession claim is started see CPR 65.12; and PARA 1066 post.

6 CPR 55.2(2)(a).

7 le the procedure set out in CPR Pt 55 s II (CPR 55.11-55.19): see PARA 1129 post.

9 le CPR Pt 55 s III.

10 CPR 55.2(2)(b), (c).

11 le unless CPR 55.3(2) applies. The claim may be started in the High Court if the claimant files with his claim form a certificate stating the reasons for bringing the claim in that court verified by a statement of truth in accordance with CPR 22.1(1) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 613): CPR 55.3(2).

18 CPR 55.3(4). As to service on trespassers see CPR 55.6; and Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 4.1.

19 CPR 55.3(5). The claimant must use the appropriate claim form and particulars of claim form set out in Practice Direction--Forms PD 4 Table 1 (see Forms N5, N5A, N5B). The defence must be in form N11, N11B, N11M or N11R, as appropriate: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 1.5.

22 Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 2.1.

23 Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 2.2. If the claim includes a claim for non-payment of rent the particulars of claim must set out: (1) the amount due at the start of the proceedings; (2) in schedule form, the dates and amounts of all payments due and payments made under the tenancy agreement for a period of two years immediately preceding the date of issue, or if the first date of default occurred less than two years before the date of issue, from the first date of default and a running total of the arrears; (3) the daily rate of any rent and interest; (4) any previous steps taken to recover the arrears of rent with full details of any court proceedings; and (5) any relevant information about the defendant's circumstances, in particular: (a) whether the defendant is in receipt of social security benefits; and (b) whether any payments are made on his behalf directly to the claimant under the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 2.3. If the claimant wishes to rely on a history of arrears which is longer than two years, he should state this in his particulars and exhibit a full (or longer) schedule to a witness statement: para 2.3A.

If the claimant knows of any person (including a mortgagee) entitled to claim relief against forfeiture as underlessee under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(4) (see PARA 627 ante) (or in accordance with the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 38, or the County Courts Act 1984 s 138(9C) (as added) (see PARAS 628-629 ante), the particulars of claim must state the name and address of that person and the claimant must file a copy of the particulars of claim for service on him: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 2.4.

660 Possession proceedings; general rules for starting the claim

NOTE 23--Supreme Court Act 1981 now cited as Senior Courts Act 1981: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1 (in force 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/661. Electronic issue of certain possession claims.

661. Electronic issue of certain possession claims.

A practice direction may make provision for a claimant to start certain types of possession claim in certain courts by requesting the issue of a claim form electronically<sup>1</sup>. The practice direction may, in particular:

- 1337 (1) provide that only particular provisions apply in specific courts;
- 1338 (2) specify:
- 117
- 143. (a) the type of possession claim which may be issued electronically;

144. (b) the conditions that a claim must meet before it may be issued electronically;
- 118
- 1339 (3) specify the court where the claim may be issued;
- 1340 (4) enable the parties to make certain applications or take further steps in relation to the claim electronically;
- 1341 (5) specify the requirements that must be fulfilled in relation to such applications or steps;
- 1342 (6) enable the parties to correspond electronically with the court about the claim;
- 1343 (7) specify the requirements that must be fulfilled in relation to electronic correspondence;
- 1344 (8) provide how any fee payable on the filing<sup>2</sup> of any document is to be paid where the document is filed electronically<sup>3</sup>.

The practice direction may disapply or modify the normal rules about possession claims<sup>4</sup> as appropriate in relation to possession claims started electronically<sup>5</sup>.

The relevant practice direction provides for a scheme ('Possession Claims Online') to operate in specified county courts<sup>6</sup> enabling claimants and their representatives to start certain possession claims<sup>7</sup> by requesting the issue of a claim form electronically via the PCOL website<sup>8</sup> and, where a claim has been started electronically, enabling the claimant or defendant and their representatives to take further steps in the claim electronically as specified in the practice direction<sup>9</sup>.

A claim may be started online if:

- 1345 (i) it is brought under the relevant rules relating to possession claims<sup>10</sup>;
- 1346 (ii) it includes a possession claim for residential property by:
- 119
145. (A) a landlord against a tenant, solely on the ground of arrears of rent, but not a claim for forfeiture of a lease; or
146. (B) a mortgagee against a mortgagor, solely on the ground of default in the payment of sums due under a mortgage,
- 120
- 1347 relating to land within the district of a specified court;
- 1348 (iii) it does not include a claim for any other remedy except for payment of arrears of rent or money due under a mortgage, interest and costs;
- 1349 (iv) the defendant has an address for service in England and Wales; and
- 1350 (v) the claimant is able to provide a postcode for the property<sup>11</sup>.

A claim must not, however, be started online if a defendant is known to be a child<sup>12</sup> or patient<sup>13</sup>.

The particulars of claim must be included in the online claim form and may not be filed separately. It is not necessary to file a copy of the tenancy agreement, mortgage deed or mortgage agreement with the particulars of claim<sup>14</sup>.

Provision is made with regard to security and the payment of fees<sup>15</sup> and with regard to electronic signatures<sup>16</sup>. If the PCOL website specifies that a court accepts electronic communications relating to claims brought using Possession Claims Online the parties may communicate with the court using the messaging service facility, available on the PCOL website<sup>17</sup>. A facility will be provided on that website for parties or their representatives to view the case record electronically<sup>18</sup>.

Certain applications in relation to a possession claim started online may be made electronically<sup>19</sup>.

6 'Specified court' means a county court specified on the PCOL website as one in which Possession Claims Online is available: Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 1.2(2).

7 Ie under CPR Pt 55: see PARA 660 ante, PARA 662 et seq post.

8 'PCOL website' means the website www.possessionclaim.gov.uk which may, at the date at which this title states the law, be accessed via Her Majesty's Courts Service website (www.hmcourts-service.gov.uk) and through which Possession Claims Online will operate: see Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 1.2(1). The PCOL website contains further details and guidance about the operation of Possession Claims Online and, in particular, sets out (1) the specified courts; and (2) the dates from which Possession Claims Online will be available in each specified court: paras 2.1, 2.2. The operation of Possession Claims Online in any specified court may be restricted to taking certain of the steps specified in the practice direction, and in such cases the PCOL website will set out the steps which may be taken using Possession Claims Online in that specified court: para 2.3.

9 Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 1.1.

10 Ie under CPR Pt 55 s I (paras 1-10A): see the text and notes 1-5 supra; and PARA 660 ante, PARA 662 et seq post.

11 Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 5.1. A claimant may request the issue of a claim form by (1) completing an online claim form at the PCOL website; (2) paying the appropriate issue fee electronically at the PCOL website or by some other means approved by Her Majesty's Courts Service: para 6.1. The requirement for a statement of truth under CPR Pt 22 (statements of truth: see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 613 et seq) applies to any online claims and defences and application notices: Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 8.1.

When an online claim form is received, an acknowledgment of receipt will automatically be sent to the claimant. The acknowledgment does not constitute notice that the claim form has been issued or served: para 6.5. When the court issues a claim form following the submission of an online claim form, the claim is 'brought' for the purposes of the Limitation Act 1980 and any other enactment on the date on which the online claim form is received by the court's computer system. The court will keep a record, by electronic or other means, of when online claim forms are received: Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 6.6. When the court issues a claim form it will (a) serve a printed version of the claim form and a defence form on the defendant; and (b) send the claimant notice of issue by post or, where the claimant has supplied an email address, by electronic means: para 6.7. The claim is deemed to be served on the fifth day after the claim was issued irrespective of whether that day is a business day or not: para 6.8. Where the period of time within which a defence must be filed ends on a day when the court is closed, the defendant may file his defence on the next day that the court is open: para 6.9. The claim form must have printed on it a unique customer identification number or a password by which the defendant may access the claim on the PCOL website: para 6.10. PCOL will issue the proceedings in the appropriate county court by reference to the post code provided by the claimant and that court has jurisdiction to hear and determine the claim and to carry out enforcement of any judgment irrespective of whether the property is within or outside the jurisdiction of that court: para 6.11.

12 'Child' means a person under 18: CPR 2.3(1), 21.1(2)(a).

13 Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 5.2. 'Patient' means a person who by reason of mental disorder within the meaning of the Mental Health Act 1983 is incapable of managing and administering his property and affairs: CPR 2.3(1), 21.1(2)(b). As to mental disorder and legal incapacity generally see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 596 et seq.

14 Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 6.2. The particulars of claim must be included in the online claim form and may not be filed separately. It is not necessary to file a copy of the tenancy agreement, mortgage deed or mortgage agreement with the particulars of claim: para 6.2. The particulars of claim must include a history of the rent or mortgage account, in schedule form setting out (1) the dates and amounts of all payments due and payments made under the tenancy agreement, mortgage deed or mortgage agreement either from the first date of default if that date occurred less than two years before the date of issue or for a period of two years immediately preceding the date of issue; and (2) a running total of the arrears: para 6.3. If the claimant wishes to rely on a history of arrears which is longer than two years, he should state this in his particulars and exhibit a full (or longer) schedule to a witness statement: para 6.4.

15 See Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B paras 3-4.

16 For these purposes, any provision of the Civil Procedure Rules 1998 ('the CPR') which requires a document to be signed by any person is satisfied by that person entering his name on an online form: Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 9.1.

9 A defendant wishing to file (1) a defence; or (2) a counterclaim (to be filed together with a defence) to a claim which has been issued through the PCOL system may, instead of filing a written form, do so by (a) completing the relevant online form at the PCOL website; and (b) if the defendant is making a counterclaim, paying the appropriate fee electronically at the PCOL website or by some other means approved by Her Majesty's Courts Service: Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 7.1. Where a defendant files a defence by completing the relevant online form, he must not send the court a hard copy: para 7.2. When an online defence form is received, an acknowledgment of receipt will automatically be sent to the defendant. The acknowledgment does not constitute notice that the defence has been served: para 7.3. The online defence form will be treated as being filed (i) on the day the court receives it, if it receives it before 4 pm on a working day; and (ii) otherwise, on the next working day after the court receives the online defence form: para 7.4. A defence is filed when the online defence form is received by the court's computer system. The court will keep a record, by electronic or other means, of when online defence forms are received: para 7.5. For the meaning of 'the PCOL website' see PARA 661 note 8 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/664. Hearing and allocation of claims.

664. Hearing and allocation of claims.

At the hearing fixed in accordance with the relevant rule<sup>1</sup> or at any adjournment of that hearing, the court may:

- 1354 (1) decide the claim; or
- 1355 (2) give case management directions<sup>2</sup>.

Where the claim is genuinely disputed on grounds which appear to be substantial, case management directions given under head (2) above will include the allocation of the claim to a track or directions to enable it to be allocated<sup>3</sup>.

Except where the claim is allocated to the fast track or the multi-track, or where the court orders otherwise, any fact that needs to be proved by the evidence of witnesses at a hearing referred to above may be proved by evidence in writing<sup>4</sup>. Except in a possession claim against trespassers<sup>5</sup>, all witness statements must be filed<sup>6</sup> and served<sup>7</sup> at least two days before the hearing<sup>8</sup>. If the maker of a witness statement does not attend a hearing and the other party disputes material evidence contained in his statement, the court will normally adjourn the hearing so that oral evidence can be given<sup>9</sup>.

Where the claimant serves the claim form and particulars of claim<sup>10</sup>, he must produce at the hearing a certificate of service of those documents<sup>11</sup>.

The House of Lords has recently summarised the practical position where a local authority brings possession proceedings<sup>12</sup>, stating that it is not necessary for a local authority to plead or prove in every case that domestic law complies with the Convention right<sup>13</sup> to respect for private and family life but that courts ought to proceed on the assumption that domestic law strikes a fair balance and is compatible with that Convention right. Only in exceptional circumstances will there be a seriously arguable case that the court ought not to make a possession order on the grounds that the law which requires it to be made is Convention-incompatible<sup>14</sup> or that the local authority's exercise of its power to seek a possession order is an unlawful act<sup>15</sup>; and deciding whether the defendant has a seriously arguable case on one or both of those grounds does not call for a full-blown trial but ought to be decided summarily<sup>16</sup>. The procedure to be followed and the extent to which the court is bound by a domestic precedent which is apparently inconsistent with Strasbourg authority have already been discussed<sup>17</sup>. A defence which is based only on the occupier's personal circumstances ought, however, to be struck out<sup>18</sup>.

1 le in accordance with CPR 55.5(1): see PARA 662 ante.

2 CPR 55.8(1). As to case management see generally CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 246 et seq.

3 CPR 55.8(2). When the court decides the track for a possession claim, the matters to which it must have regard include: (1) the matters set out in CPR 26.8 as modified by the relevant practice direction (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 270); (2) the amount of any arrears of rent or mortgage instalments; (3) the importance to the defendant of retaining possession of the land; (4) the importance of vacant possession to the claimant; and (5) if applicable, the alleged conduct of the defendant: CPR 55.9(1). The court will only allocate possession claims to the small claims track if all the parties agree: CPR 55.9(2). Where a possession claim has been allocated to the small claims track the claim must be treated, for the purposes of costs, as if it were proceeding on the fast track except that trial costs are to be in the discretion of the court and must not exceed the amount that would be recoverable under CPR 46.2 (amount of fast track costs: see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1776) if the value of the claim were up to £3,000: CPR 55.9(3). Where all the parties agree the court may, when it allocates the claim, order that CPR 27.14 (costs on the small claims track: see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 285) applies and, where it does so, CPR 55.9(3) does not apply: CPR 55.9(4).

4 CPR 55.8(3). The general rule is that any fact which needs to be proved by the evidence of witnesses is to be proved (1) at trial, by their oral evidence given in public; and (2) at any other hearing, by their evidence in writing; but this is subject to any provision to the contrary: see CPR 32.2(1), (2).

Each party should wherever possible include all the evidence he wishes to present in his statement of case, verified by a statement of truth: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 5.1. If relevant the claimant's evidence should include the amount of any rent or mortgage arrears and interest on those arrears. These amounts should, if possible, be up to date to the date of the hearing (if necessary by specifying a daily rate of arrears and interest). However, CPR 55.8(4) (see the text and notes 5-8 infra) does not prevent such evidence being brought up to date orally or in writing on the day of the hearing if necessary: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 5.2. If relevant the defendant should give evidence of: (a) the amount of any outstanding social security or housing benefit payments relevant to rent or mortgage arrears; and (b) the status of: (i) any claims for social security or housing benefit about which a decision has not yet been made; and (ii) any applications to appeal or review a social security or housing benefit decision where that appeal or review has not yet concluded: Practice Direction--Possession Claims PD 55 para 5.3.

5 In a possession claim against trespassers all witness statements on which the claimant intends to rely must be filed and served with the claim form: CPR 55.8(5).

6 For the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 660 note 20 ante.

7 As to service generally see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 138 et seq.

664 Hearing and allocation of claims

NOTE 11--CPR 55.8(6) amended: SI 2008/2178.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/665. Restricted discretion of the court in making orders for possession.

665. Restricted discretion of the court in making orders for possession.

Where a court makes an order for the possession of land, except where:

- 1356 (1) the order is made in a claim<sup>1</sup> by a mortgagee for possession; or
- 1357 (2) the order is made in a claim for forfeiture of a lease<sup>2</sup>; or
- 1358 (3) the court had power to make the order only if it considered it reasonable to make it<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1359 (4) the order relates to a dwelling house which is the subject of a restricted contract<sup>4</sup>; or
- 1360 (5) the order is made in proceedings for possession of premises let under a rental purchase agreement<sup>5</sup>, the giving up of possession may not be postponed, whether by the order or any variation, suspension or stay of execution, to a date later than 14 days after the making of the order, unless it appears to the court that exceptional hardship would be caused by requiring possession to be given up by that date; and in any event not postponed to a date later than six weeks after the making of the order<sup>6</sup>.

These provisions also apply to consent orders<sup>7</sup>.

1 The statutory wording is 'action' but an action is now generally known as a claim: see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 18.

2 Where an order for possession has been made on mandatory grounds under the Housing Act 1988 (see PARA 1106 et seq post), the exception under head (2) in the text does not apply as the tenancy has already been brought to an end: Artesian Residential Investments Ltd v Beck [2000] QB 541, [1999] 3 All ER 113, CA, applied in Procureur v Alexander [2004] EWHC 607 (Ch), [2004] All ER (D) 406 (Feb).

3 The exception under head (3) in the text cannot apply where an order for possession has been made on mandatory grounds: see the cases cited in note 2 supra.

4 Ie within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 s 19 (as amended): see PARA 986 post.

5 Ie proceedings brought as mentioned in the Housing Act 1980 s 88(1): see PARA 602 ante.

6 Ibid s 89(1), (2). As to the court's wider discretion in possession proceedings under the Rent Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1988 see PARAS 972, 1117 post; and as to the court's discretion to set aside or vary a possession order where leave is given to the qualifying tenant of a flat to participate in a claim to exercise the right to collective enfranchisement or to claim a new lease under the Leasehold Reform Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 see PARAS 1592, 1684 post.

Once the period fixed by the order has expired, there is no power to extend it unless the Rent Act 1977 or similar statutory provisions apply: Moore v Lambeth County Court Registrar [1969] 1 All ER 782, [1969] 1 WLR 141, CA. The Housing Act 1980 s 89 is not restricted to orders made in the county court but applies equally to orders made in the High Court: Hackney London Borough Council v Side by Side (Kids) Ltd [2003] EWHC 1813

(QB), [2004] 2 All ER 373, [2004] 1 WLR 363, applied in Procureur v Alexander [2004] EWHC 607 (Ch), [2004] All ER (D) 406 (Feb).

7 Hackney London Borough Council v Side by Side (Kids) Ltd [2003] EWHC 1813 (QB), [2004] 2 All ER 373, [2004] 1 WLR 363.

UPDATE

665 Restricted discretion of the court in making orders for possession

NOTE 6--The 1980 Act s 89(1) does not empower the court to postpone an order for possession of land occupied by trespassers: Boyland and Son Ltd v Rand (2007) Times, 18 January, CA. The restriction on postponement of the giving up of possession applies only to the court which made the order for possession, not to an appellate court: Admiral Taverns (Cygnet) Ltd v Daniel [2008] EWCA Civ 1501, [2009] 4 All ER 71.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(ii) Proceedings for Possession/666. Enforcement of possession orders.

666. Enforcement of possession orders.

Judgement for recovery of possession<sup>1</sup> is enforced in the High Court by a writ of possession<sup>2</sup> and in a county court by a warrant of possession<sup>3</sup>. Where the court has made an order for possession in a claim started online<sup>4</sup> and the claimant is entitled to the issue of a warrant of possession without requiring the permission of the court, he may request the issue of a warrant by completing an online request form<sup>5</sup>. Similarly, where the court has issued a warrant of possession the defendant may apply electronically for the suspension of the warrant<sup>6</sup>.

The enforcement of judgments and orders is considered in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>7</sup>.

1 Judgment may include mesne profits up to the date on which the landlord obtains possession: Southport Tramways Co v Gandy [1897] 2 QB 66, CA. It is immaterial that the claimant has claimed too much by his writ, or has in fact claimed on a wrong basis, where eg the figure is based on double value: Southport Tramways Co v Gandy supra. Where recovery of possession is claimed for the breach of a covenant, the mesne profits are assessable from the date of the landlord's election to determine the tenancy, eg by the service, not the issue, of proceedings claiming possession on the ground that the lease is forfeited: Canas Property Co Ltd v KL Television Services Ltd [1970] 2 QB 433, [1970] 2 All ER 795, CA, not following Elliott v Boynton [1924] 1 Ch 236, CA, on this point. See also Tingey v F Claydon (Wapping) Ltd (1962) 185 Estates Gazette 79; and see Maryland Estates Ltd v Bar-Joseph [1998] 3 All ER 193, [1999] 1 WLR 83, CA. As to the calculation of mesne profits see Guthrie v McCrindle (1949) 65 TLR 192; Clifton Securities Ltd v Huntley [1948] 2 All ER 283. As to mesne profits generally see PARA 285 ante. Where a tenant of residential premises fails to deliver up possession at the end of the term and remains in occupation as a trespasser, the landlord, in the absence of special factors, is entitled to damages based on the annual letting value of the premises without bringing evidence as to his actual loss: Swordheath Properties Ltd v Tabet [1979] 1 All ER 240, [1979] 1 WLR 285, CA. See also Associated Deliveries v Harrison (1984) 50 P & CR 91, CA; Ministry of Defence v Ashman (1993) 66 P & CR 195, 25 HLR 513, CA.

2 See CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARAS 1267, 1274-1276. The writ may be issued notwithstanding that the landlord's estate has terminated, unless this would be unjust and futile: Knight v Clarke (1885) 15 QBD 294, CA. Thus, where the landlord obtains judgment for possession and sells his estate before executing the judgment, the benefit of the order for possession does not automatically pass to the purchaser, and the correct procedure is for the vendor to enforce the judgment supported by the purchaser: Chung Kwok Hotel Co Ltd v Field [1960] 3 All ER 143, [1960] 1 WLR 1112, CA. It is uncertain whether the benefit of an order for possession may be expressly assigned, the point being expressly left undecided in Chung Kwok Hotel Co Ltd v Field supra. As to entry without the sheriff's assistance see Aglionby v Cohen [1955] 1 QB 558, [1955] 1 All ER 785; and PARA 651 ante. As to the caution to be exercised in the use of pre-CPR authorities see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 184.

3 See CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1292.

4 See PARA 661 ante.

5 Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 12.1. He must complete an online request form at the PCOL website and pay the appropriate fee electronically at the PCOL website or by some other means approved by Her Majesty's Courts Service: para 12.1. Such a request will be treated as being filed (1) on the day the court receives the request, if it receives it before 4 pm on a working day; and (2) otherwise, on the next working day after the court receives the request: para 12.2. For the meaning of 'the PCOL website' see PARA 661 note 8 ante; and for the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 660 note 20 ante.

6 Where the court has issued a warrant of possession, the defendant may apply electronically for the suspension of the warrant, provided that: (1) the application is made at least five clear days before the appointment for possession; and (2) the defendant is not prevented from making such an application without the permission of the court: Practice Direction--Possession Claims Online PD 55B para 13.1. The defendant may apply electronically for the suspension of the warrant by completing an online application for suspension at the PCOL website and paying the appropriate fee electronically at the PCOL website or by some other means approved by Her Majesty's Courts Service: para 13.2. When an online application for suspension is received, an acknowledgment of receipt will automatically be sent to the defendant. The acknowledgment does not constitute a notice that the online application for suspension has been served: para 13.3. Where an application must be made within a specified time, it is so made if the online application for suspension is received by the court's computer system within that time. The court will keep a record, by electronic or other means, of when online applications for suspension are received: para 13.4. When the court receives an online application for suspension it must (a) serve a copy of the online application for suspension indorsed with the date of the hearing by post on the claimant at least two clear days before the hearing; and (b) send the defendant notice of service and confirmation of the date of the hearing by post; provided that where either party has provided the court with an email address for service, service of the application and/or the notice of service and confirmation of the hearing date may be effected by electronic means: para 13.5. As to the suspension of warrants see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1363 et seq; and as to the statutory restriction on suspension of possession orders see PARA 665 ante.

7 See generally CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1223 et seq.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(iii) Claim for Double Rent or Double Value/667. Claim for double rent.

(iii) Claim for Double Rent or Double Value

667. Claim for double rent.

If a tenant<sup>1</sup> gives notice to quit<sup>2</sup> at a time mentioned in the notice, and does not deliver up possession at the time so mentioned, he is liable thenceforward, during all the time that he continues in possession<sup>3</sup>, to pay to the landlord double the rent payable under the tenancy<sup>4</sup>. The landlord has the same remedies for the double rent as he had, before the notice, for the single rent<sup>5</sup>, but the tenant may leave at any time and stop the double rent without giving a fresh notice to quit<sup>6</sup>.

1 The Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 18 applies to all tenants, including weekly tenants, who have power to determine the tenancy by notice. Sullivan v Bishop (1826) 2 C & P 359 contra was decided on the erroneous assumption that that Act was similar to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 s 1 (as amended): see PARA 668 post. There are material distinctions between the two statutes. In Johnstone v Hudlestone (1825) 4 B & C 922 at 931 it was held that the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 must be construed by itself; but see Oliver Ashworth (Holdings) Ltd v Ballard (Kent) Ltd [2000] Ch 12, [1999] 2 All ER 791, CA (in the case of ambiguity, the 1737 Act must be read with the 1730 Act, for they are part of a single code); and see Cutting v Derby (1776) 2 Wm Bl 1075 at 1077; Timmins v Rowllison (1765) 1 Wm Bl 533.

2 The notice may be oral or in writing (Timmins v Rowllison (1765) 1 Wm Bl 533), but it must be certain; a notice to quit upon a contingency will not do, even if the contingency happens (Farrance v Elkington (1811) 2 Camp 591 at 592). See also DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 987. In proceedings founded on the statute the terms of the tenancy and of the notice to quit must be so shown that the tenant's power to determine the tenancy by notice, and the sufficiency of the notice, may appear: Humberstone v Dubois (1842) 10 M & W 765.

3 Anon (1773) Lofft 275; Booth v Macfarlane (1831) 1 B & Ad 904.

4 Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 18. See also DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 987. Section 18 applies only where (1) the tenant has in fact become a trespasser by holding over after his own notice to quit; and (2) the landlord has treated the tenant as a trespasser: Oliver Ashworth (Holdings) Ltd v Ballard (Kent) Ltd [2000] Ch 12, [1999] 2 All ER 791, CA.

A tenant of premises protected by the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act 1915 (repealed) was held nonetheless liable for double rent, as it was held that such a rent did not constitute an increase of rent within s 1: Flannagan v Shaw [1920] 3 KB 96, CA. This decision was assumed in Barton v Fincham [1921] 2 KB 291 at 299, CA, per Scrutton LJ, and Northcott v Roche (1921) 37 TLR 364, to be still of effect and binding where the premises were protected by the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act 1920 (repealed). See Laity v Pearce (1946) 13 LJCCR 154, distinguishing Flannagan v Shaw supra, on the ground that there was no evidence that the landlord had been misled to his detriment by the notice to quit, and holding that the tenant was not liable for double rent; cf Prideaux v Williams (1946) 13 LJCCR 37, which applied Flannagan v Shaw supra. The former rent restriction legislation is now contained in the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 808 et seq post); and, although the authorities cited supra are in conflict, it would appear that in principle a tenant who ends his protected tenancy by serving a notice to quit should be able to hold over as a statutory tenant without any liability to pay double rent. Where, however, a protected tenant so serves notice, the landlord may be able to obtain an order for possession without proof of alternative accommodation: see PARA 953 post.

5 Timmins v Rowllison (1765) 1 Wm Bl 533; Soulsby v Neving (1808) 9 East 310, 314; Humberstone v Dubois (1842) 10 M & W 765. Where after the expiry of the notice to quit the landlord assigns the reversion, the assignee may sue for the double rent, as he is the landlord within the statute: Northcott v Roche (1921) 37 TLR 364. Such double rent is not in the nature of a penalty: Northcott v Roche supra, disagreeing with the opinion to the contrary expressed in Flannagan v Shaw [1920] 3 KB 96, CA.

6 Booth v Macfarlane (1831) 1 B & Ad 904.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/14. TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(iii) Claim for Double Rent or Double Value/668. Claim for double value.

668. Claim for double value.

If a tenant for any term of life, lives or years<sup>1</sup>, or any person who gets possession of the premises under or by collusion with such tenant, wilfully<sup>2</sup> holds over the premises after the determination of the term, and after demand made and notice in writing given for delivery of possession<sup>3</sup> by the reversioner or his lawfully authorised agent<sup>4</sup>, the person so holding over is liable to pay to the reversioner at the rate of double the yearly value of the premises<sup>5</sup>. The notice may be given either before<sup>6</sup> or after<sup>7</sup> the determination of the term, and it is not necessary that the demand and notice should be distinct<sup>8</sup>. Moreover, as a notice to quit involves in itself a demand for possession, it is a sufficient notice for this purpose<sup>9</sup>.

1 A tenant from year to year holds for a 'term' (Doe d Hull v Wood (1845) 14 M & W 682 at 686), and the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 applies to such a tenant (see Ryal v Rich (1808) 10 East 48), but not to a weekly tenant (Lloyd v Rosbee (1810) 2 Camp 453) or other tenant for less than a year (Wilkinson v Hall (1837) 3 Bing NC 508).

2 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 does not apply where the holding over is under a bona fide mistake or under a fair claim of right; it must be contumacious in the sense that the tenant knows that he has no right to keep possession: French v Elliott [1959] 3 All ER 866, [1960] 1 WLR 40 (where there was held to be a sufficient muddle on both sides to prevent the holding over being wilful). See also Wright v Smith (1805) 5 Esp 203; Soulsby v Neving (1808) 9 East 310 at 313; Hirst v Horn (1840) 6 M & W 393; Swinfen v Bacon (1861) 6 H & N 846, Ex Ch; Rawlinson v Marriott (1867) 16 LT 207. Hence it does not apply where a subtenant holds over without the consent of the tenant: Rands v Clark (1870) 19 WR 48. Nor did it apply where the tenants held over under the provision of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act 1915 (repealed): Crook v Whitbread (1919) 88 LJB 959, DC. See also Hopper v Hart [1922] EGD 171; Bateson v Beswick [1920] EGD 272. Where a tenant holds over as a statutory tenant under the Rent Act 1977, his conduct can hardly be said to be wilful so as to attract the liability for double value.

TERMINATING LEASES; RECOVERING POSSESSION/(7) LANDLORD'S REMEDIES FOR TENANT'S FAILURE TO DELIVER POSSESSION/(iii) Claim for Double Rent or Double Value/669. Nature of remedy.

669. Nature of remedy.

A claim for double value may be brought only by the landlord or the reversioner<sup>1</sup>; and he may bring it notwithstanding that he has obtained judgment for recovery of possession<sup>2</sup>. The claim may be brought in the county court<sup>3</sup> or in the High Court, but double value cannot be distrained for<sup>4</sup>. The double value is reckoned from the determination of the tenancy, if the notice was given before the determination<sup>5</sup>, and from the giving of the notice, if given afterwards<sup>6</sup>; and is calculated on the yearly value of the premises and not also on the value of incidental advantages<sup>7</sup>. If the landlord accepts a single rent for the period covered by his claim to double value, it is a question of fact whether he has waived the claim, or whether he takes the amount of the single rent in part satisfaction of it<sup>8</sup>. This principle can, however, only apply as a common law election between rights and so it was not applicable where the rent was paid while both parties considered the notice to quit invalid<sup>9</sup>.

1 Harcourt v Wyman (1849) 3 Exch 817. An assignee of the reversion assigned after expiry of a notice to quit given to the assignor is entitled to sue (Northcott v Roche (1921) 37 TLR 364), but a claim for double value may not be brought by a tenant under a future lease to commence after the determination of the first lease, as such future lease does not pass the reversion (Blatchford v Cole (1858) 5 CBNS 514). A claim for double value may not be brought by the administrator of the landlord's executor until he has taken out administration de bonis non to the landlord, notwithstanding that the tenant has attorned to him: Tingrey v Brown (1798) 1 Bos & P 310.

2 As the claim is for double value, not double rent, it does not recognise a tenancy in the tenant: Soulsby v Neving (1808) 9 East 310. The headnote to Wright v Smith (1805) 5 Esp 203 to the contrary appears to be erroneous.

(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies

A. INTRODUCTION

701. The protection and the legislation.

Tenants of business premises were afforded a measure of security of tenure under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>1</sup>, but it was principally only those tenants who could demonstrate that they had 'adherent goodwill' (so that compensation at the end of their tenancy would be inadequate) who could obtain the renewal of their leases under that Act. The first protection afforded generally to business tenants was conferred as a temporary measure by the Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951<sup>2</sup> whilst a more permanent code was prepared for their protection. That code was embodied in Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>3</sup> which, although now extensively amended<sup>4</sup>, continues to apply and which came into operation on 1 October 1954<sup>5</sup>. The protection given to business tenants takes the form of continuing the tenancy automatically until it is terminated by certain steps being taken<sup>6</sup>, and by giving the tenant a right to apply for a new tenancy<sup>7</sup>. A tenant who is refused a new tenancy on certain grounds is enabled to obtain a limited amount of compensation<sup>8</sup>.

The legislation applies, with some modifications, where an interest of the Crown is involved<sup>9</sup>, and there are modifications also for special cases<sup>10</sup>, as where the public interest is involved.

Substantial reform of the 1954 legislation was proposed by the Law Commission in 1992<sup>11</sup>. Government consultation exercises were carried out in 1996 and 2001 and proposals for reform by means of a regulatory reform order<sup>12</sup> were laid before Parliament on 22 July 2002. Following concerns expressed by the relevant House of Lords committee as to the proposals for contracting out of the statutory protection<sup>13</sup>, a fresh government consultation exercise was carried out. The Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003 was then made on 1 December 2003, to come into effect on 1 June 2004<sup>14</sup>. That order makes a number of amendments to the 1954 Act and in particular:

- 1361 (1) permits the landlord and tenant to contract out of the statutory protection without having to obtain the agreement of the court, provided that the prescribed notice requirements are satisfied<sup>15</sup>;
- 1362 (2) makes changes to the procedure for continuation, termination and renewal of tenancies<sup>16</sup>; and
- 1363 (3) allows the tenant as well as the landlord to apply for the determination of an interim rent<sup>17</sup>.

1 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 5 (repealed).

2 The Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951 Pt II (ss 10-15) (repealed), as extended by the Leasehold Property Act and Long Leases (Scotland) Act Extension Act 1953 (repealed), enabled a tenant of shop premises to apply for a new tenancy at the end of a subsisting tenancy.

3 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended). The Acts mentioned in note 2 supra were repealed by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 ss 45, 68(1), Sch 7. Transitional provisions were enacted (see s 68(2), Sch 9 paras 8-11), but these are now spent, save that, where immediately before 1 October 1954 a tenancy was being continued by the Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951 s 11(3) (repealed), the tenancy did not come to an end and the continuance by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24 (now as amended) applied: Sch 9 para 11. The prohibition on taking further steps in proceedings pending on 1 October 1954 for a new lease (see Sch 9 para 8) did not extend to an appeal: see Etam Ltd v Forte [1955] 1 QB 239, [1954] 3 All ER 311, CA.

4 Prior to 1 June 2004, the main amendments since 1954 were those made by the Law of Property Act 1969 which came into force on 1 January 1970 (see s 31(2)) and the Landlord and Tenant (Licensed Premises) Act 1990 taking effect on different dates according to circumstances (see PARA 775 post). On 1 June 2004, however, the extensive amendments made by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, came into force: see reg 1(3).

5 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 70(2). The Act does not extend to Scotland or Northern Ireland: s 70(3).

6 See PARA 713 post.

7 See PARA 720 post.

8 See PARAS 758-761 post. In the case of a compulsory acquisition, if the amount of the compensation which would have been payable under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37 (as amended) (see PARA 759 post) if (1) the tenancy had come to an end in circumstances giving rise to compensation thereunder; and (2) the date at which the acquiring authority obtained possession had been the termination of the current tenancy, exceeds the amount of the compensation payable under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 121 (as amended) or the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965 s 20 (as amended) (see COMPULSORY ACQUISITION OF LAND vol 18 (2009) PARA 698 et seq) in the case of a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) applies, that compensation must be increased by the amount of the excess; and nothing in s 24 (as amended) (continuation of tenancies: see PARA 713 post) affects the operation of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 121 (as amended): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 39(2), (3) (amended by the Land Compensation Act 1973 ss 47, 86, Sch 3). ## UPDATE

701 The protection and the legislation

NOTE 12--Regulatory Reform Act 2001 replaced: see now the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/15. BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/A. INTRODUCTION/702. Forms of notice.

702. Forms of notice.

For most steps which a landlord or tenant may take<sup>1</sup> forms of notice<sup>2</sup> are prescribed by regulations<sup>3</sup> made by the Secretary of State as respects England<sup>4</sup> and by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>5</sup> as respects Wales<sup>6</sup>. Where a form is prescribed, it or a form which is substantially to the like effect must be used<sup>7</sup>; and whether wording is substantially to the like effect as the prescribed form will depend upon a comparison of the words used with the corresponding words in the prescribed form to see whether in their ordinary significance the words compared bear the same meaning<sup>8</sup>. It is immaterial whether any discrepancy between the form used and the form prescribed has actually misled the person to whom the form was addressed<sup>9</sup>, although the omission of a prescribed note which is irrelevant will not avoid the form, as the irrelevant matter would have been of no legal effect in that particular case<sup>10</sup>.

To be valid the notice must give the person to whom it is addressed the proper information which will enable him to deal in a proper way with the situation referred to in the notice<sup>11</sup>. Accompanying letters have been held sufficient to save notices by curing omissions or ambiguities<sup>12</sup> and obsolete forms of notice held to be valid where the use of the previously prescribed form did not mislead<sup>13</sup>. In general terms a liberal approach is applied by the courts to the question whether a notice complies with the regulations<sup>14</sup>. The omission of a prescribed warning to the tenant, however, renders a notice invalid<sup>15</sup>.

1 See under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954.

2 Where the form of a notice to be served on persons of any description is prescribed for any of the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, the form to be prescribed must include such an explanation of the relevant provisions of that Act as appears to the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, to the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister requisite for informing persons of that description of their rights and obligations under those provisions: s 66(2) (s 66(1), (2) amended by the Transfer of Functions (Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State) Order 1974, SI 1974/1896, arts 2, 3(2); and see note 5 infra). Different forms may be prescribed for the purposes of the operation of any provision of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 in relation to different cases: s 66(3).

3 The forms are currently prescribed by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part 2 (Notices) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1005, which came into force on 1 June 2004: reg 1.

4 See ibid preamble. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

5 The functions of the Secretary of State under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 are, so far as exercisable in relation to Wales, transferred to the Assembly or to the relevant Welsh minister except that in relation to ss 57(1)-(6), 58 (as amended) (see PARA 769 et seq post) the certification function is exercisable concurrently with any Minister of the Crown by whom it is exercisable: see the National Assembly for Wales (Transfer of Functions) Order 1999, SI 1999/672, art 2, Sch 1 (as amended); and see further PARA 27 note 4 ante.

6 The regulations must be made by statutory instrument subject, in the case of regulations made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 66(1), (5) (as amended: see note 2 supra).

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part 2 (Notices) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1005, reg 2(2).

8 Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd v Hayman [1975] 1 All ER 248, [1975] 1 WLR 177, CA, per Stephenson LJ. Use of the original prescribed form of notice after it had been replaced by a new form was still use of a form substantially to the like effect as that which was prescribed, because the principal difference between the two was the replacement of the word 'received' by the word 'given', and in the context in which they were used both words have the same meaning: Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd v Hayman supra; Snook v Schofield [1975] 1 EGLR 69, (1975) 234 Estates Gazette 197, CA. See also Morrow v Nadeem [1987] 1 All ER 237, [1986] 1 WLR 1381, CA, approving Barclays Bank Ltd v Ascott [1961] 1 All ER 782, [1961] 1 WLR 717; Tegerdine v Brooks (1977) 36 P & CR 261, CA.

9 In Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd v Hayman [1975] 1 All ER 248, [1975] 1 WLR 177, CA, this point was conceded, but it was the unanimous view of the court. In Bond v Graham [1975] 2 EGLR 63, (1975) 236 Estates Gazette 563, Shaw J appears to have attached importance to whether the tenant to whom the form was addressed 'could have been misled and was misled' by the discrepancy in the form used. Examples of deviations from the prescribed forms which have been held not to vitiate the document are Falcon Pines Ltd v Stanhope Gate Property Co Ltd (1967) 204 Estates Gazette 1243 (omission to fill in the space for the date on which the form was signed); Bond v Graham supra (obsolete rateable value limit for county court's jurisdiction included in the notes to the form). Cf British Railways Board v Aja Smith Transport Ltd [1981] 2 EGLR 69, (1981) 259 Estates Gazette 766. If, however, the form does not comply with the requirements of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 itself, that will be fatal, eg where it fails to state whether the landlord will oppose the grant of a new tenancy (Barclays Bank Ltd v Ascott [1961] 1 All ER 782, [1961] 1 WLR 717), although this defect in the form is cured where by specifying a ground of opposition the landlord makes it clear that he will oppose renewal of the tenancy (Lewis v MTC (Cars) Ltd [1974] 3 All ER 423, [1974] 1 WLR 1475; affd on other grounds without this question being reviewed [1975] 1 All ER 874, [1975] 1 WLR 457, CA) and, where the prescribed form itself does not comply with the statute, it has been held that, because the non-compliance meant that by using the form the landlord only was disadvantaged, he could waive a requirement imposed only for his benefit and so could validly use the form (Baglarbasi v Deedmethod Ltd [1991] 2 EGLR 71; Bridgers and Hamptons Residential v Stanford (1991) 63 P & CR 18, [1991] 2 EGLR 265, CA). A notice is also invalid where it is addressed to one of several joint tenants (so that it is not 'given' to 'the tenant') (Norton v Charles Deane Productions Ltd (1969) 214 Estates Gazette 559), although this defect can be waived by the intended addressees (Norton v Charles Deane Productions Ltd supra). BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/A. INTRODUCTION/703. Service of notices etc.

703. Service of notices etc.

Any notice, request, demand or other instrument given or made<sup>1</sup> under the Landlord and Tenant Acts 1927 and 1954 must be in writing<sup>2</sup>. It may be served either personally or by leaving it at the last-known place of abode in England or Wales of the person on whom it is to be served<sup>3</sup>, or by being sent by registered post or the recorded delivery service addressed to him there<sup>4</sup>. If the person to be served is a local or public authority, or a statutory<sup>5</sup> or public utility<sup>6</sup> company, service may be effected by sending the notice by registered post or the recorded delivery service to the secretary or other proper officer at the principal office of the authority or company; and a notice to be served on a landlord may be served on his duly authorised agent<sup>7</sup>.

The prescribed permitted modes of service are not exhaustive, and it will be sufficient if a notice is sent and is in fact received, whether one of the statutory methods of service is employed or not<sup>8</sup>. Notices which have to be 'given' and requests 'made' under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 are given or made when served (actually or constructively) in accordance with these provisions.

Unless or until a tenant<sup>9</sup> has received notice that the person previously entitled to the rents and profits of the holding ('the original landlord') has ceased to be so entitled, and also notice of the name and address of the person who has become entitled to the rents and profits, any claim, notice, request, demand or other instrument served by the tenant upon the original landlord is deemed to have been served upon or delivered to the landlord of the holding<sup>10</sup>.

1 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 uses the verb 'give' (see s 25(1)-(3), s 26(2) proviso, s 26(3) ('made in the prescribed form given to the landlord'), s 26(4), (6) (as amended), s 27(1), (2) (as amended)), except in s 66 (as amended) and in the provisions referring to tenants' requests for new tenancies, where the verb 'make' is used (see ss 26(1)-(5), 29(3) (as amended)). The Interpretation Act 1978 s 7, re-enacting the Interpretation Act 1889 s 26 (repealed), assimilates 'giving', 'sending' and other such expressions to serving, and clearly notices are 'given' and requests are 'made' for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 when the relevant document is actually or constructively served. See Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd v Hayman [1975] 1 All ER 248, [1975] 1 WLR 177, CA, where the Interpretation Act 1889 was not discussed but 'give' and 'receive' were held to be synonymous in that they described the same event from the viewpoint of the originator and the addressee of a notice respectively. This decision was followed in Snook v Schofield [1975] 1 EGLR 69, (1975) 234 Estates Gazette 197, CA.

2 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23(1) (s 23 applied by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 66(4)).

3 To leave a notice at the furthest place to which a member of the public or a postman could go constitutes service 'at' the place of abode: Trustees of Henry Smith's Charity v Kyriacou (1990) 22 HLR 66, [1989] 2 EGLR 110, CA.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23(1) (as applied: see note 2 supra); Recorded Delivery Service Act 1962 s 1(1). In the application of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (s 23-46) (as amended) 'place of abode' includes the business address of the person to be served: see Stylo Shoes Ltd v Prices Tailors Ltd [1960] Ch 396, [1959] 3 All ER 901; Price v West London Investment Building Society [1964] 2 All ER 318, [1964] 1 WLR 616, CA.

Where notice of the termination of a lease is served by a method authorised by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 (as so applied), the date of service is the date when the server entrusts the notice to the postal service for recorded delivery, as that provides certainty for those who are required to serve the documents; there is no indication in s 23 that there has to be some attempted or actual delivery: CA Webber (Transport) Ltd v Railtrack plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1167, [2004] 3 All ER 202, [2004] 1 WLR 320, applying Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd v Hayman [1975] 1 All ER 248, [1975] 1 WLR 177, CA, Chiswell v Griffon Land and Estates Ltd [1975] 2 All ER 665, [1975] 1 WLR 1118, CA, Galinski v McHugh (1988) 57 P & CR 359, [1989] 1 EGLR 109, CA, Railtrack plc v Gojra [1998] 1 EGLR 63, [1998] 08 EG 158, CA and Blunden v Frogmore Investments Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 573, [2002] 2 EGLR 29, [2002] All ER (D) 305 (Apr); approving Italica Holdings SA v Bayadea [1985] 1 EGLR 70, 273 Estates Gazette 888, Commercial Union Life Assurance Co Ltd v Moustafa [1999] 2 EGLR 44, [1999] 24 EG 155 and Beanby Estates v Egg Stores (Stamford Hill) [2003] EWHC 1252 (Ch), [2004] 3 All ER 184, [2003] All ER (D) 122 (May) and disapproving Lex Service plc v Johns (1989) 59 P & CR 427, [1990] 1 EGLR 92, CA. Moreover, it is neither unreasonable nor disproportionate to achieve certainty for landlords and tenants alike by interpreting the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 in this way, and in excluding the applicability of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 7 (which provides that service is effected when the notice is delivered); nor is such a construction incompatible with the application of the Human Rights Act 1998: CA Webber (Transport) Ltd v Railtrack plc supra, applying Application 44277/98 Stretch v United Kingdom [2004] LGR 401, [2003] All ER (D) 306 (Jun), ECtHR and Wilson v First County Trust Ltd [2003] UKHL 40, [2004] 1 AC 816, [2003] 4 All ER 97 (a consumer credit case).

Furthermore, valid postal service may be effected even though the intended recipient does not know of the notice and is not at fault in not knowing about it, since the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23(1) does not contain any exception for letters which are returned by the postal operator (cf the Law of Property Act 1925 s 196(4) (as amended): see PARA 621 ante); Blunden v Frogmore Investments Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 573, [2003] 2 P & CR 84, [2002] All ER (D) 305 (Apr).

9 For these purposes, unless the context otherwise requires, 'tenant' means any person entitled in possession to the holding under any contract of tenancy, whether the interest of such tenant was acquired by original contract, assignment, operation of law or otherwise: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 25(1).

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/A. INTRODUCTION/704. Duties of tenants and landlords to give information to each other; in general.

704. Duties of tenants and landlords to give information to each other; in general.

Where a person who is an owner of an interest in reversion expectant, whether immediately or not, on a tenancy<sup>1</sup> of any business premises<sup>2</sup> has, on or after 1 June 2004<sup>3</sup>, served on the tenant<sup>4</sup> a notice in the prescribed form<sup>5</sup> requiring him to do so, it is the duty of the tenant to give the appropriate person<sup>6</sup> in writing the specified information<sup>7</sup>. That information is:

- 1364 (1) whether the tenant occupies the premises or any part of them wholly or partly for the purposes of a business carried on by him;

- 1365 (2) whether his tenancy has effect subject to any subtenancy<sup>8</sup> on which his tenancy is immediately expectant and, if so:
- 121
- 147. (a) what premises are comprised in the subtenancy;
  - 148. (b) for what term it has effect or, if it is terminable by notice, by what notice it can be terminated;
  - 149. (c) what is the rent payable under it;
  - 150. (d) who is the subtenant;
  - 151. (e) to the best of his knowledge and belief, whether the subtenant is in occupation of the premises or of part of the premises comprised in the subtenancy and, if not, what is the subtenant's address;
  - 152. (f) whether an agreement is in force excluding in relation to the subtenancy the statutory provisions concerning the continuation and renewal of tenancies<sup>9</sup>; and
  - 153. (g) whether a notice of termination or objecting to renewal has been given<sup>10</sup>, or a request for a new tenancy has been made<sup>11</sup>, in relation to the subtenancy and, if so, details of the notice or request; and
- 122
- 1366 (3) to the best of his knowledge and belief, the name and address of any other person who owns an interest in reversion in any part of the premises<sup>12</sup>.

Where the tenant of any business premises who is a tenant under a tenancy granted for a term of years certain exceeding one year, or granted for a term of years certain and thereafter from year to year<sup>13</sup>, has, on or after that date, served on a reversioner<sup>14</sup> or a reversioner's mortgagee in possession<sup>15</sup> a notice in the prescribed form<sup>16</sup> requiring him to do so, it is the duty of the person on whom the notice is served to give the appropriate person in writing the specified information<sup>17</sup>. That information is:

- 1367 (i) whether he is the owner of the fee simple in respect of the premises or any part of them or the mortgagee in possession of such an owner;
  - 1368 (ii) if he is not, then, to the best of his knowledge and belief:
- 123
- 154. (A) the name and address of the person who is his or, as the case may be, his mortgagor's immediate landlord<sup>18</sup> in respect of those premises or of the part in respect of which he or his mortgagor is not the owner in fee simple;
  - 155. (B) for what term his or his mortgagor's tenancy has effect and what is the earliest date, if any, at which that tenancy is terminable by notice to quit<sup>19</sup> given by the landlord; and
  - 156. (C) whether a notice of termination or objecting to renewal has been given<sup>20</sup>, or a request for a new tenancy has been made<sup>21</sup>, in relation to the tenancy and, if so, details of the notice or request;
- 124
- 1369 (iii) to the best of his knowledge and belief, the name and address of any other person who owns an interest in reversion in any part of the premises;
  - 1370 (iv) if he is a reversioner, whether there is a mortgagee in possession of his interest in the premises and, if so, to the best of his knowledge and belief, what is the name and address of the mortgagee<sup>22</sup>.

A duty imposed on a person by the above provisions is a duty to give the information concerned within the period of one month beginning with the date of service of the notice and, if within the period of six months beginning with the date of service of the notice that person becomes aware that any information which has been given in pursuance of the notice is not, or is no longer, correct, to give the appropriate person correct information within the period of one month beginning with the date on which he becomes aware<sup>23</sup>. These provisions do not, however, apply to a notice served by or on the tenant more than two years before the date on which his tenancy would otherwise<sup>24</sup> come to an end by effluxion of time or could be brought to an end by notice to quit given by the landlord<sup>25</sup>.

A claim that a person has broken any duty so imposed may be made the subject of civil proceedings for breach of statutory duty<sup>26</sup>; and in any such proceedings a court may order that person to comply with that duty and may make an award of damages<sup>27</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 post.

2 For these purposes, 'business premises' means premises used wholly or partly for the purposes of a business: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40(8) (s 40 substituted by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 23, 29(6), except in relation to a notice served before 1 June 2004). An identical definition applied in relation to notices so served: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40(5) (as originally enacted). For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 post.

3 Ie the date the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, came into force: see PARA 701 ante.

4 As to service of notices see PARA 703 ante.

5 For the prescribed form of notice see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part 2 (Notices) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1005, regs 2(2), (3), Schs 1, 2, Form 4. Prior to 1 June 2004, the prescribed form of notice was the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part II (Notices) Regulations 1983, SI 1983/133, regs 2(1), 3(1), Schs 1, 2, Form 9 (amended by SI 1989/1548 and now revoked). As to the use of the prescribed forms generally see PARA 702 ante.

6 Except as provided by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40A (as added) (see PARA 705 post), the appropriate person for the purposes of s 40 (as substituted) and s 40A(1) (as added) is the person who served the notice under s 40(1) or (3) (as substituted): s 40(7) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

7 Ibid s 40(1) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). Prior to 1 June 2004, the tenant was under a duty, where any person having an interest in reversion in any business premises expectant, whether immediately or not, on a tenancy of those premises, served on him a notice in the prescribed form requiring him to do so, to notify that person in writing within one month of the service of the notice: (1) whether he occupied the premises or any part of them wholly or partly for the purposes of a business carried on by him; and (2) whether his tenancy had effect subject to any subtenancy on which his tenancy was immediately expectant: see s 40(1) (as originally enacted). In a case where head (2) supra applied, the tenant was also to notify the reversioner for what term the subtenancy had effect (or, if it was terminable by notice, by what notice it could be terminated), what was the rent payable under it, who the subtenant was and, to the best of his knowledge and belief, whether the subtenant was in occupation of the premises or of part of the premises comprised in the subtenancy, and if not, what was the subtenant's address: s 40(1)(b) (as originally enacted).

8 For these purposes, 'subtenant' includes a person retaining possession of any premises by virtue of the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARA 1138 post) or the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 974 et seq post) after the coming to an end of a subtenancy, and 'subtenancy' includes a right so to retain possession: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40(8) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). Prior to 1 June 2004, the definition of 'subtenant' for the purposes of s 40 (as originally enacted) did not include a person retaining possession of any premises by virtue of the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976.

9 Ie the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 ss 24-28 (as amended): see PARA 713 et seq post.

10 Ie under ibid s 25 (as amended) or s 26(6): see PARAS 716, 718 post.

11 Ie under ibid s 26 (as amended): see PARA 718 post.

12 Ibid s 40(2) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

13 Ie such a tenancy as is mentioned in ibid s 26(1) (as amended): see PARA 718 post.

14 For these purposes, 'reversioner' means any person having an interest in the premises, being an interest in reversion expectant (whether immediately or not) on the tenancy: ibid s 40(8) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

15 For these purposes, 'mortgagee in possession' includes a receiver appointed by the mortgagee or by the court who is in receipt of the rents and profits, and 'his mortgageor' is to be construed accordingly; and

'reversioner's mortgagee in possession' means any person being a mortgagee in possession in respect of such an interest: ibid s 40(8) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). 'Mortgage' includes a charge or lien and 'mortgagor' and 'mortgagee' are to be construed accordingly: s 69(1). Prior to 1 June 2004, the expressions 'mortgagee in possession' and 'his mortgagor' were defined in similar terms: see s 40(5) (as originally enacted).

16 For the prescribed form of notice see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part 2 (Notices) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1005, regs 2(2), (3), Schs 1, 2, Form 5. Prior to 1 June 2004, the prescribed form of notice was the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part II (Notices) Regulations 1983 Schs 1, 2, Forms 10, 11 (amended by SI 1989/1548 and now revoked).

17 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40(3) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). Prior to 1 June 2004, it was the duty of any person (1) having an interest in the premises, being an interest in reversion expectant, whether immediately or not, on the tenant's; or (2) being a mortgagee in possession in respect of such an interest in reversion, where the tenant of any business premises served on him a notice in the prescribed form requiring him to do so, to notify the tenant in writing within one month after service of the notice: (a) whether he was the owner of the fee simple in respect of those premises or any part of them or the mortgagee in possession of such an owner; and, if not (b) to the best of his knowledge and belief, the name and address of the person who was his or, as the case might be, his mortgagor's immediate landlord in respect of those premises or of the part in respect of which he or his mortgagor was not the owner in fee simple: s 40(2), (3) (as originally enacted). The information which any such person as is mentioned in head (1) supra was required to give included information whether there was a mortgagee in possession of his interest in the premises and, if so, what was the name and address of the mortgagee: s 40(3) (as originally enacted). In a case where head (b) supra applied, the reversioner or mortgagee in possession was also to notify the tenant for what term his or his mortgagor's tenancy had effect and what was the earliest date, if any, at which that tenancy was terminable by notice to quit given by the landlord: s 40(2), (4) (as originally enacted).

18 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 715 post.

19 For these purposes, 'notice to quit' means a notice to terminate a tenancy, whether a periodical tenancy or a tenancy for a term of years certain, given in accordance with the provisions, whether express or implied, of that tenancy: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1). For the meaning of 'term of years certain' see PARA 710 note 3 post.

20 See note 10 supra.

21 See note 11 supra.

22 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40(4) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

23 Ibid s 40(5) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

24 Ie apart from the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954.

25 Ibid s 40(6) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). A similar exclusion applied prior to 1 June 2004: see s 40(4) (as originally enacted).

26 As to breach of statutory duty see generally TORT.

27 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 40B (added by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 23, 29(6), except in relation to a notice served before 1 June 2004 (see PARA 701 ante)). No such specific provision was made prior to that date.

If a person on whom a notice requiring the specified information<sup>1</sup> has been served has transferred his interest in the premises or any part of them to some other person and gives the appropriate person<sup>2</sup> notice in writing<sup>3</sup> of the transfer of his interest and of the name and address of the person to whom he transferred it, then on giving the notice he ceases in relation to the premises or, as the case may be, to that part to be under any duty imposed by the statutory provisions<sup>4</sup> regarding the specified information<sup>5</sup>. If:

1371 (1) the person who served the notice requiring the specified information<sup>6</sup> ('the transferor') has transferred his interest in the premises to some other person ('the transferee'); and

1372 (2) the transferor or the transferee has given the person required to give the information notice in writing<sup>7</sup> of the transfer and of the transferee's name and address, the appropriate person for the statutory purposes<sup>8</sup> is the transferee<sup>9</sup>.

If a transfer such as is mentioned in head (1) above has taken place but neither the transferor nor the transferee has given a notice such as is mentioned in head (2) above, any duty imposed by the statutory provisions regarding the specified information<sup>10</sup> may be performed by giving the information either to the transferor or to the transferee<sup>11</sup>.

B. TENANCIES PROTECTED

706. Tenancies to which the statutory protection applies.

Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>1</sup> applies to any tenancy<sup>2</sup> where the property comprised in the tenancy is or includes premises<sup>3</sup> which are occupied<sup>4</sup> by the tenant and are so occupied for the purposes of a business<sup>5</sup> carried on by him<sup>6</sup> or for those and other purposes<sup>7</sup>. Occupation or the carrying on of a business:

- 1373 (1) by a company in which the tenant has a controlling interest<sup>8</sup>; or
- 1374 (2) where the tenant is a company, by a person with a controlling interest in the company, is, with effect from 1 June 2004<sup>9</sup>, to be treated for these purposes as equivalent to occupation or, as the case may be, the carrying on of a business by the tenant<sup>10</sup>; and accordingly references, however expressed, in Part II of the 1954 Act to the business of, or to use, occupation or enjoyment by, the tenant are to be construed as including references to the business of, or to use, occupation or enjoyment by, a company falling within head (1) above or a person falling within head (2) above<sup>11</sup>.

A property company, although carrying on the business of letting flats, will not be in occupation of a block of flats sublet by it<sup>12</sup>; but a tenant may be in occupation of premises for these purposes notwithstanding that he has permitted another to use the premises or even sublet to that other person, provided that the tenant himself retains a sufficient degree of control over the premises<sup>13</sup>.

Whether a tenant does retain sufficient control is a question of fact<sup>14</sup> to be decided by reference to the nature of the premises in question<sup>15</sup>. Where events have occurred over which the tenant had no control and which have led the tenant to absent himself from the premises, he will still be deemed to occupy the premises if he has continued to exert and claim his right to business occupancy<sup>16</sup>; but, if for reasons of business convenience or other cause<sup>17</sup> which is not involuntary the tenant ceases to trade, it again becomes a question of fact whether he is still in sufficient occupation<sup>18</sup>. If a break in the tenant's occupation occurs at a time when the tenancy is being continued by statute<sup>19</sup> or alternatively an application to the court is pending<sup>20</sup>, then such a break determines the statutory protection<sup>21</sup>. Thus, for the statutory provisions to apply to a tenancy it is not necessary that the whole of the property comprised in the tenancy should be used for business purposes; but the tenant's right to a new tenancy<sup>22</sup> is confined to the holding<sup>23</sup>, and the amount of compensation to which he may be entitled is measured with reference to the rateable value of the holding<sup>24</sup>, wherever that is possible<sup>25</sup>.

Where the business in question is not being carried on by the tenant in or from the premises, in order that it can be said that the tenant occupies the premises for the purposes of his business it is necessary that he occupy the premises, whether by himself or by his employees, for a purpose which is necessary to the furtherance of the business, as opposed to being merely for the convenience of the business<sup>26</sup>.

If the terms<sup>27</sup> of the tenancy include a prohibition, however expressed, against use for business purposes extending to the whole of the property and the tenant is carrying on a business in all or any part of the property in breach of that prohibition, the statutory protection does not apply to the tenancy unless the immediate landlord<sup>28</sup> or his predecessor in title has consented<sup>29</sup> to the breach or the immediate landlord has acquiesced<sup>30</sup> in it<sup>31</sup>.

1 le the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq ante; the text and notes 2-31 infra; and PARA 707 et seq post.

2 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means a tenancy created either immediately or derivatively out of the freehold, whether by a lease or underlease, by an agreement for a lease or underlease or by a tenancy agreement or in pursuance of any enactment, including the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, but does not include a mortgage term or any interest arising in favour of a mortgagor by his attorning tenant to his mortgagee, and references to the granting of a tenancy and to demised property are to be construed accordingly: s 69(1). The statutory protection extends to a tenancy by estoppel: Bell v General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corpn

Where a new lease has been granted under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 Pt I Ch II (ss 39-62) (as amended) (see PARA 1671 et seq post), after the term date of the lease the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) does not apply to any sublease directly or indirectly derived out of it: see the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 59(2); and PARA 1723 post.

A statutory tenancy decontrolled under the Rent Act 1957 (repealed) to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) would have applied but for s 43(1)(c) (repealed) was, if the statutory tenancy had been a tenancy within the 1954 Act, deemed to be within Pt II (as amended): Rent Act 1957 s 11, Sch 4 para 11 (repealed). See also PARA 713 note 19 post.

3 In Bracey v Read [1963] Ch 88, [1962] 3 All ER 472, it was held that 'premises' was not to be construed in the restricted sense of buildings or structures, but included any kind of property in respect of which a lease might be granted, so that gallops for training racehorses were premises. A mere right of way is not premises for this purpose (Land Reclamation Co Ltd v Basildon District Council [1979] 2 All ER 993, [1979] 1 WLR 767, CA); nor are concrete bases for advertising hoardings (Clear Channel UK Ltd v Manchester City Council [2005] EWCA Civ 1304, [2006] 1 EGLR 27, [2005] All ER (D) 112 (Nov)). An incorporeal right, such as the right to use parking spaces, may, however, constitute 'premises' for these purposes and is capable of being occupied within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 23(1): Pointon York Group plc v Poulton [2006] 29 EG 153 (CS), [2006] All ER (D) 175 (Jul).

4 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 23(1) speaks of occupation and not of possession. In order to 'occupy' the premises, for the purposes of s 23 (as amended), a tenant need not be physically present in the premises if he is using them in some other way as an incident in the ordinary course or conduct of business life, provided that the premises are occupied by no other business occupier and are not used for any non-business purpose: Pointon York Group plc v Poulton [2006] 29 EG 153 (CS), [2006] All ER (D) 175 (Jul). For the meaning of 'occupied' prior to the amendments made with effect from 1 June 2004 (see the text and notes 8-11 infra) see Lee-Verhulst (Investments) Ltd v Harwood Trust [1973] QB 204, [1972] 3 All ER 619, CA (where the proprietor of furnished apartments was held to have retained a sufficient degree of control over the premises to have retained occupation for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) regardless of whether the users of the apartments were subtenants or licensees); and see Linden v Department of Health and Social Security [1986] 1 All ER 691, [1986] 1 WLR 164 (whether it was suggested that the test was the need for an active manager); Hancock and Willis v GMS Syndicate Ltd (1982) 265 Estates Gazette 473, CA (threat of continuity broken by grant of exclusive licence, tenants retaining only the use of a wine cellar at the premises); Trans-Britannia Properties Ltd v Darby Properties Ltd [1986] 1 EGLR 151, CA (insufficient control retained by tenants over lock-up garages which they sublet for the tenants themselves still to be regarded as in occupation for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended)). Regular horticultural work on an open space which a local authority tenant permitted members of the public to use for exercise and recreation was, however, held to be sufficient (Wandsworth London Borough Council v Singh (1991) 62 P & CR 219, [1991] 2 EGLR 75, CA); as was the active management of premises sublet in units for light industrial use (William Boyer and Sons Ltd v Adams (1975) 32 P & CR 89, CA). See also Teasdale v Walker [1958] 3 All ER 307, [1958] 1 WLR 1076, CA (where the tenant entered into a sham transaction by which an 'employee' ran the business, so that the tenant was no longer in occupation of the premises for the purposes of his business, and the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 ceased to apply). See further Jones v Christy (1963) 107 Sol Jo 374, CA and J Reid (D and K) Co Ltd v Burdell Engineering Co Ltd (1958) 171 Estates Gazette 281, CA (where the actual occupation at the time of the application was by licensees whose licence had been terminated). 5 For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 post.

6 As to the position where the tenant is a trustee and the beneficiary carries on the business see PARA 763 post; and as to the position where the tenant is a company and the business is carried on by another company in the same group see PARA 766 post. It is sufficient that the tenant carries on business in partnership: see Re Crowhurst Park, Sims-Hilditch v Simmons [1974] 1 All ER 991 at 997, 998, [1974] 1 WLR 583 at 589 obiter per Goulding J. See also Wright v Mortimer (1996) 28 HLR 719, 72 P & CR D36, CA (art historian carrying out 30% of the work related to his writing in a residential flat but had no photocopier or fax machine there; held that as regards the application of the 1954 Act to a tenancy, the issue was the extent to which the business purposes could be said to be more than incidental to the occupation for residential purposes. The tenant did not have other premises at which he could carry out his business, but this did not mean that his business activities were automatically more than incidental to his residential occupation).

The court will strike out the application of a tenant who is not in occupation but who applies for a new lease: Domer v Gulf Oil (Great Britain) Ltd (1975) 119 Sol Jo 392.

8 For the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended), a person has a controlling interest in a company, if, had he been a company, the other company would have been its subsidiary; and for these purposes 'company' has the meaning given by the Companies Act 1985 s 735 and 'subsidiary' has the meaning given by s 736 (as substituted) (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 25): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 46(2) (added by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 17(2)).

The cases considered by reference to occupation and those considered by reference to whether there has been business use by the tenant, which is also a question of fact (see eg Kent Coast Property Investments Ltd v Ward [1990] 2 EGLR 86, CA) have often considered the same problems. 21 See note 20 supra.

22 See PARA 720 et seq post. The landlord may require the new tenancy to extend to the whole of the property comprised in the original tenancy: see PARAS 748-749 post.

23 For these purposes, 'the holding', in relation to a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) applies, means the property comprised in the tenancy, there being excluded any part of it which is occupied neither by the tenant nor by a person employed by the tenant and so employed for the purposes of a business by reason of which the tenancy is one to which those provisions apply: s 23(3). This is subject to s 32 (as amended) (see PARA 749 post): s 46(1) (numbered as such by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 17(1)). If part of the premises is occupied as a residence by the tenant or an employee in the business, that part will be included in the holding. As to rent-controlled property see PARA 708 post. The premises merely have to be occupied for the purposes of the tenant's business, so that the business may be carried out from other premises: see Hillil Property and Investment Co Ltd v Naraine Pharmacy Ltd (1979) 39 P & CR 67, [1979] 2 EGLR 65, CA. 27 For these purposes, 'terms', in relation to a tenancy, includes conditions: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1).

28 For the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 post.

29 As to consent and the manner in which it differs from acquiescence see Bell v Alfred Franks & Bartlet Co Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 356, [1980] 1 WLR 340, CA.

30 'Acquiescence' is not defined for these purposes. As a continuing breach is involved, it would seem that it must be conduct giving rise to the inference that the covenant has been abrogated or estopping the landlord from enforcing it: cf Wolfe v Hogan [1949] 2 KB 194, [1949] 1 All ER 570, CA; Court v Robinson [1951] 2 KB 60 at 74, CA. 31 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 23(4). A prohibition of use for a specified business or of use for any but a specified business is not within s 23 (as amended), but a prohibition against any trade, against any profession, against any employment or against any activity carried on by a body of persons, is: s 23(4). As to the position of illegal subtenants see note 2 supra.

706 Tenancies to which the statutory protection applies

NOTE 8--Definitions of 'company' and 'subsidiary' amended: SI 2009/1941.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/15. BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/B. TENANCIES PROTECTED/707. Meaning of 'business'.

707. Meaning of 'business'.

'Business' includes a trade, profession or employment, and includes any activity<sup>1</sup> carried on by a body of persons, whether corporate or incorporate<sup>2</sup>. Although the business of a property company may be the letting of premises<sup>3</sup>, in order that it can be said to occupy for the purposes of its business the premises which it has sublet, it must retain control over them<sup>4</sup>, and a letting of a dwelling house to a tenant for the purpose of the tenant making a profit from subletting is not of itself a letting for business purposes<sup>5</sup>. Whether an activity which is carried on by an individual tenant<sup>6</sup> is a trade, profession or employment so as to attract the statutory protection<sup>7</sup> is a question of degree to be decided in the light of all the circumstances existing<sup>8</sup>, so that in particular circumstances both the taking in of lodgers<sup>9</sup> and the carrying on for religious and non-profitable purposes of a Sunday School<sup>10</sup> have been held not to be business activities. Where a tenant takes a tenancy of premises for residential purposes but, while the tenancy remains contractual<sup>11</sup>, proceeds to use those premises wholly or in part for business purposes, that use for business purposes may bring the tenancy into the protection of Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 (and therefore out of the protection of the Rent Act 1977 or the Housing Act 1988<sup>12</sup>) if the business activities are sufficiently substantial, as opposed to being merely incidental to the tenant residing in the premises<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to what constitutes a 'business activity' see PARA 790 note 5 post and the cases there cited, especially Town Investments Ltd v Department of the Environment [1978] AC 359, [1977] 1 All ER 813, HL; and see further notes 2, 8-10 infra. See also Lee-Verhulst (Investments) Ltd v Harwood Trust [1973] QB 204, [1972] 3 All ER 619, CA, where Bagettes Ltd v GP Estates Ltd [1956] Ch 290, [1956] 1 All ER 729, CA was distinguished. No real limitation can be placed on the words 'any activity' (see Addiscombe Garden Estates Ltd v Crabbe [1958] 1 QB 513 at 529, [1957] 3 All ER 563 at 572, CA (tenant was a members' tennis club) so that 'business' has a different connotation according to whether the tenant is an individual or a 'body of persons'. Cf Hillil Property and Investment Co Ltd v Naraine Pharmacy Ltd (1979) 39 P & CR 67, [1979] 2 EGLR 65, CA, where a more restricted approach is suggested.

2 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 23(2). The board of governors of a teaching hospital 'occupied' premises used for the purposes of the hospital and carried on an activity there although accountable to the Minister of Health: Hills (Patents) Ltd v University College Hospital Board of Governors [1956] 1 QB 90, [1955] 3 All ER 365, CA. The tenancy of trustees of a tennis club is within the statutory protection where the property is occupied by a body of persons (the club or its members) for an activity, ie the tennis club: Addiscombe Garden Estates Ltd v Crabbe [1958] 1 QB 513, [1957] 3 All ER 563, CA (tennis club was an industrial and provident society); and see Hawkesbrook Leisure Ltd v Reece-Jones Partnership [2003] EWHC 3333 (Ch), [2004] 2 EGLR 61, [2004] 25 EG 172 (non-profit-making company limited by guarantee and managing sports grounds was in occupation for business purposes since it intended to make a surplus and the fact that it could not distribute its profits was irrelevant). The provision by a landlord company of accommodation, equipment and staff for another corporate body may in some circumstances amount to an activity by the landlord: see Willis v Association of Universities of the British Commonwealth [1965] 1 QB 140, [1964] 2 All ER 39, CA.

8 Lewis v Weldcrest Ltd [1978] 3 All ER 1226, [1978] 1 WLR 1107, CA (where it was said that the cases dealing with the meaning of 'business' in covenants against the use of residential premises for business purposes were not relevant, having regard to the different purposes behind such covenants and behind the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954; but this decision should be treated with caution as Town Investments Ltd v Department of the Environment [1978] AC 359, [1977] 1 All ER 813, HL, was not cited).

9 Lewis v Weldcrest Ltd [1978] 3 All ER 1226, [1978] 1 WLR 1107, CA.

10 Abernethie v AM and J Kleiman Ltd [1970] 1 QB 10, [1969] 2 All ER 790, CA (part of the premises used only for one hour per week). Cf Parkes v Westminster Roman Catholic Diocese Trustee (1978) 36 P & CR 22, CA (intention of diocesan trustee to occupy premises as parish community centre was intention to occupy for the purposes of a business).

11 If the tenancy has become a statutory tenancy under the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 post), it will not be a tenancy for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) and, therefore, will remain within the protection of the Rent Act 1977 for so long as residential use survives, or at least for so long as residential use remains the predominant or a substantial use: see PARAS 822-823, 831 post.

12 It would seem that, where a statutory periodic tenant (see PARA 1067 post) changes the use of the premises to a mixed use involving some business use, the tenancy would be brought into the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended), since the tenancy would no longer be an assured tenancy: see PARA 1029 post.

13 Cheryl Investments Ltd v Saldanha, Royal Life Saving Society v Page [1979] 1 All ER 5, [1978] 1 WLR 1329, CA (where the use of a flat also as an office was held to be sufficient to bring the tenancy within the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended); but the licence of the landlord to a physician to use part of his flat as a consulting room, coupled only with very occasional use as such, was held not to be sufficient). See also Gurton v Parrott (1990) 23 HLR 418, [1991] 1 EGLR 98, CA (premises used for the purpose of breeding and kennelling dogs and also for residential purposes held not to be within the statutory protection of business tenancies); Wright v Mortimer (1996) 28 HLR 719, 72 P & CR D36, CA (art historian carrying out 30% of the work related to his writing in a residential flat but had no photocopier or fax machine there; held that as regards the application of the 1954 Act to a tenancy, the issue was the extent to which the business purposes could be said to be more than incidental to the occupation for residential purposes. The tenant did not have other premises at which he could carry out his business, but this did not mean that his business activities were automatically more than incidental to his residential occupation). As to the position where the tenancy has already become a statutory tenancy under the Rent Act 1977 when the change of use occurs see PARA 822 note 2 post.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/B. TENANCIES PROTECTED/708. Tenancies excluded.

708. Tenancies excluded.

The statutory protection of business tenancies<sup>1</sup> does not apply to the following classes of tenancy:

- 1375 (1) a tenancy<sup>2</sup> of an agricultural holding<sup>3</sup> and certain related tenancies<sup>4</sup>;
- 1376 (2) a farm business tenancy<sup>5</sup>;
- 1377 (3) a tenancy created by a mining lease<sup>6</sup>;
- 1378 (4) a tenancy granted by reason that the tenant was the holder of an office, appointment or employment from the grantor of it and continuing only so long as the tenant holds the office, appointment or employment, or terminable by the grantor on the tenant's ceasing to hold it, or coming to an end at a time fixed by reference to the time at which the tenant ceases to hold it<sup>7</sup>;
- 1379 (5) a tenancy granted for a term certain not exceeding six months<sup>8</sup> unless:
  - 157. (a) the tenancy contains provision for renewing the term or extending it beyond six months from its beginning<sup>9</sup>; or
  - 158. (b) the tenant has been in occupation for a period which, together with any period during which any predecessor of the tenant in the carrying on of the business<sup>10</sup> carried on by the tenant was in occupation, exceeds 12 months<sup>11</sup>;
- 126
  - 1380 (6) a tenancy where the business for the purposes of which the tenant occupies the holding is of such a character that it is necessarily brought to an end by the separation of the holding from the remainder of the premises comprised in the lease, so that the business could not be carried on if the tenancy were renewed as to the holding alone<sup>12</sup>;
  - 1381 (7) a tenancy granted to a dockyard contractor<sup>13</sup> in respect of any land in a designated dockyard<sup>14</sup>;
  - 1382 (8) a tenancy granted to a contractor<sup>15</sup> in respect of any land in premises designated<sup>16</sup> under the Atomic Weapons Establishment Act 1991<sup>17</sup>;

- 1384 (10) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of any contract with another person for the provision or running, or the provision and running, by him, or, if the contract so provides, for the running by sub-contractors of his, of any prison or part of a prison<sup>19</sup> or of any secure training centre or part of a secure training centre<sup>20</sup>;
- 1385 (11) a lease or tenancy of land granted by the Secretary of State for the purposes of a removal centre contract under the immigration and asylum legislation<sup>21</sup>;
- 1386 (12) a lease granted in pursuance of a franchise agreement which creates a tenancy of any property which, whether in whole or in part, constitutes, or is comprised in, the railway network or a railway facility<sup>22</sup>;
- 1387 (13) a tenancy granted by the Secretary of State in any case where the property comprised in the tenancy is or includes premises which, in accordance with any agreement relating to the tenancy, whether contained in the instrument creating the tenancy or not, are to be occupied for the purposes of a vehicle testing business<sup>23</sup>;
- 1388 (14) a Concession lease<sup>24</sup> granted by the Secretary of State under the Channel Tunnel Act 1987<sup>25</sup>;
- 1389 (15) a development agreement lease<sup>26</sup> granted by the Secretary of State in connection with the Channel Tunnel Rail Link or a lease granted by him which is one on the grant of which a development agreement, or an agreement connected with such an agreement<sup>27</sup>, is conditional, or which contains a statement to the effect that it is granted for purposes connected with the construction or operation of the rail link<sup>28</sup>.

1     I.e. the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq ante, PARA 709 et seq post. Where the parties agree that ss 24-28 (as amended) shall not apply to the tenancy (see PARAS 710-712 post), the tenancy nevertheless remains one to which the remainder of Pt II (as amended) applies.

The following were also formerly excluded from protection as business tenancies under Pt II (as amended): (1) controlled tenancies prior to their conversion into regulated tenancies by the Housing Act 1980 s 64 (see PARA 848 post) or tenancies which would have been controlled tenancies if they had not been tenancies at a low rent (see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(c) (repealed)); (2) old-style assured tenancies under the Housing Act 1980 (to which, however, the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) were applied with modifications) (see PARA 890 post); and (3) tenancies of certain licensed premises (see s 43(1)(d) (repealed); and PARA 775 post).

2     For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

3     I.e. a tenancy of an agricultural holding which is a tenancy in relation to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies (see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(a) (as amended: see note 4 infra), s 69(1) (amended by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 100, Sch 14 para 22).

4     Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(a) (amended by the Agriculture Act 1958 s 8(1), Sch 1 para 29; the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 ss 99, 100, Sch 13 para 3, Sch 14 para 21; the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 10(a)). The related tenancies are tenancies which would be tenancies of agricultural holdings if the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 2(3) did not have effect or, in a case where approval was given under s 2(1), if that approval had not been given: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(a) (as so amended).

5     Ibid s 43(1)(aa) (added by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 Schedule para 10(b)). 'Farm business tenancy' has the same meaning as in the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1) (definition added by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 Schedule para 12).

6     Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(b). For these purposes, 'mining lease' means a lease for any mining purpose or purposes connected with it; and 'mining purposes' includes the sinking and searching for, winning, working, getting, making merchantable, smelting or otherwise converting or working for the purposes of any manufacture, carrying away and disposing of mines and minerals, in or under land, and the erection of buildings, and the execution of engineering and other works suitable for those purposes: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 25(1) (applied by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 46(1) (numbered as such by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 17(1)). 'Mines and minerals' includes all substances capable of being worked for profit below the top surface of land (except peat): O'Callaghan v Elliott [1966] 1 QB 601, [1965] 3 All ER 111, CA (decided under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended)).

7 Ibid s 43(2). If the tenancy is granted after 1 October 1954, this exception does not apply unless the tenancy is granted by a written instrument expressing the purpose for which it was granted: s 43(2) proviso. If the occupier has only a service occupancy (see PARA 15 ante) and not a tenancy, he will in any event be outside the statutory protection.

8 A weekly, monthly or other periodic tenancy, not being for a term certain, is not excluded by this provision.

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(3)(a) (s 43(3) amended by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 12(1)).

10 For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 ante.

11 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(3)(b) (as amended: see note 9 supra). Where a tenancy, on its expiry, falls outside the statutory protection by virtue of s 43(3) (as amended), it cannot be retrospectively revived and brought within that protection by a subsequent period of occupation as a tenant at will, licensee or trespasser: see Cricket Ltd v Shaftesbury plc [1999] 3 All ER 283, [1999] 2 EGLR 57.

12 See Bagettes Ltd v GP Estates Ltd [1956] Ch 290 at 301, [1956] 1 All ER 729 at 734, CA, per Jenkins LJ. This exception will apply where the holding consists solely of the common parts and service areas of buildings, the remainder of which have been sub-demised upon terms that the mesne tenant has retained no rights of occupation and day to day control over them, such as a block of flats (see Bagettes Ltd v GP Estates Ltd supra); in such cases it will be a question of fact in each case whether the terms of the sublettings and the conduct by the mesne tenant of its business leave the mesne tenant still in occupation for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 of other than the common parts and it will not be conclusive that he has granted subtenancies, as opposed to licences, to the occupiers of residential accommodation (Lee-Verhulst (Investments) Ltd v Harwood Trust [1973] QB 204, [1972] 3 All ER 619, CA; William Boyer & Sons Ltd v Adams (1975) 32 P & CR 89).

13 For these purpose, 'dockyard contractor' means a company which for the time being provides services which are designated dockyard services within the meaning of the Dockyard Services Act 1986 s 1(1) at a designated dockyard under contract with the Secretary of State or, by making the services of employees or property available, enables those services to be provided, whether by a company or by the Secretary of State: s 1(13).

15 For these purposes, 'contractor' means a company, formed under the Companies Act 1985 or the corresponding provisions of any earlier enactment, which carries on designated activities at designated premises under contract with the Secretary of State or, by making the services of employees or property available, enables such activities to be carried on at such premises, whether by a company or by the Secretary of State: Atomic Weapons Establishment Act 1991 s 1(4). For the meaning of 'designated activities' and 'designated premises' see note 16 infra.

16 For these purposes, 'designated', with reference to any activities or premises, means designated by an order under ibid s 1(1): s 1(4). The activities that may be so designated are any activities connected with the development, production or maintenance of nuclear devices or with research into such devices or their effect; and the premises that may be so designated are those which on 25 September 1991 formed part of the undertaking carried on by the Secretary of State and known as the Atomic Weapons Establishment: s 1(2).

23 See the Transport Act 1982 s 14(1); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 699.

24 For these purposes, 'Concession lease' means any lease granted by the Secretary of State to the Concessionaires in pursuance of the Concession; and references to a Concession lease include any provisions of a Concession agreement providing for the grant of a lease of any land by the Secretary of State to the Concessionaires: Channel Tunnel Act 1987 s 1(6).

25 See ibid s 16(2). The purpose of s 16 is to secure that the application of English law to any Concession lease does not have effect so as to prejudice the operation of the international arrangements, so far as relates to the provision for use by the Concessionaires of the land required in England for the construction and operation of the tunnel system by the grant to the Concessionaires of a Concession lease on terms determined in pursuance of those arrangements: s 16(1). See further RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 324.

26 For these purposes, 'development agreement lease' means a lease granted by the Secretary of State in pursuance of a development agreement, or an agreement connected with such an agreement, and references to a development agreement lease include any provisions of a development agreement, or an agreement connected with such an agreement, providing for the grant of a lease of any land by the Secretary of State: Channel Tunnel Rail Link Act 1996 s 40(3). 'Development agreement' means an agreement, including one entered into before the passing of the 1996 Act (ie before 18 December 1996) to which the Secretary of State is a party and under which another party has responsibilities in relation to the design, construction, financing or maintenance of the rail link: s 56(1).

27 For these purposes, an agreement is connected with a development agreement if the development agreement is expressed to be conditional upon it being entered into: ibid s 40(4).

C. CONTRACTING OUT

709. Restrictions on contracting out.

Unless it satisfies the statutory requirements<sup>1</sup>, any agreement, whether in writing or not<sup>2</sup> and whether contained in the instrument creating the tenancy or not, is void in so far as it purports to preclude the tenant from making an application or request for a new tenancy<sup>3</sup>, or provides for the termination or the surrender of the tenancy<sup>4</sup> in the event of his doing so, or imposes any penalty or disability on him in such an event<sup>5</sup>. An agreement purports to have such an effect if its legal consequences are that it produces such an effect, regardless of its language<sup>6</sup>. A clause which provides that the tenant is to reimburse the landlord in respect of all the landlord's expenses in consequence of furthering a notice to renew a business tenancy is equivalent to a penalty clause and is therefore void<sup>7</sup>. A clause which prevents the tenant from assigning or otherwise dealing with the tenancy until the tenant has first offered to surrender it and the landlord has refused the tenant's offer is not void<sup>8</sup>; but, where the tenancy is one to which the provisions of Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>9</sup> apply, any apparent agreement which results from the landlord accepting the offer made by the tenant is void unless the statutory requirements<sup>10</sup> are satisfied<sup>11</sup>.

Furthermore, any agreement, whether in writing or not<sup>12</sup>, whether contained in the instrument creating the tenancy or not and whether made before or after the termination of that tenancy, is void to the extent that it purports to exclude or reduce compensation<sup>13</sup> where, during the whole of the five years immediately preceding the date on which the tenant under such a tenancy is to quit the holding<sup>14</sup>, premises being or comprised in the holding have been occupied for the purposes of a business carried on by the occupier or for those and other purposes, and, if during those five years there was a change in the occupier of the premises, the person who was occupier immediately after the change was the successor to the business carried on by the person who was the occupier immediately before the change<sup>15</sup>. This does not, however, affect any agreement as to the amount of any such compensation which is made after the right to compensation has accrued<sup>16</sup>; and in any other case<sup>17</sup> such compensation may be excluded or modified by agreement<sup>18</sup>.

1     Ie the requirements of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 38A (as added): see PARAS 711-712 post. Prior to 1 June 2004, the agreement had to be authorised by the court: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 38(4) (as added; now repealed); and PARA 710 post.

2     References in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 to an agreement between the landlord and the tenant, except in s 38(1), 38(2) (as originally enacted or as amended), are to be construed as references to an agreement in writing between them: s 69(2). This provision does not appear to cover all methods of excluding the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 from the occupation of business premises, and it will not avoid (or bring into the statutory protection) a tenancy at will of such premises: Hagee (London) Ltd v AB Erikson and Larson (a firm) [1976] QB 209, [1975] 3 All ER 234, CA; Manfield & Sons Ltd v Botchin [1970] 2 QB 612, [1970] 3 All ER 143 (in both of which cases the tenancy at will was created by an instrument in writing); Wheeler v Mercer [1957] AC 416, [1956] AC 416, [1956] 3 All ER 631, HL (oral agreement created a tenancy at will). BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/C. CONTRACTING OUT/710. Permitted contracting out; agreements authorised before 1 June 2004.

710. Permitted contracting out; agreements authorised before 1 June 2004.

On the joint application of the persons who were to be the landlord<sup>1</sup> and the tenant in relation to a tenancy<sup>2</sup> to be granted for a term of years certain<sup>3</sup>, the court might, before 1 June 2004<sup>4</sup>, authorise an agreement excluding the statutory provisions as to the continuation and renewal of business tenancies<sup>5</sup> if the agreement was contained in or indorsed on the instrument creating the tenancy or such other instrument as the court might specify; and an agreement contained in or indorsed on an instrument pursuant to such an authorisation was valid notwithstanding the statutory restrictions<sup>6</sup> on contracting out<sup>7</sup>.

On the joint application of persons who were already the landlord and the tenant in relation to a tenancy to which the statutory provisions relating to security of business tenancies<sup>8</sup> applied, the court might authorise an agreement contained in or indorsed on such an instrument for the surrender of the tenancy on such date or in such circumstances and on such terms, if any, as might be specified in the agreement, and the agreement was then enforceable<sup>9</sup>.

The repeal of the above provisions has no effect in relation to an agreement which was so authorised by the court before 1 June 2004<sup>10</sup>. Further, if a person has, before that date, entered into an agreement to take a tenancy, any provision in that agreement which requires an order under the above provisions to be obtained in respect of the tenancy continues to be effective, notwithstanding the repeal of those provisions, and the court retains jurisdiction to make such an order<sup>11</sup>.

3 A term of years certain includes a term for a period which is certain but less than one year, eg nine months: Re Land and Premises at Liss, Hants [1971] Ch 986, [1971] 3 All ER 380. A tenancy with a break clause is a tenancy for a term of years certain within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended): Scholl Manufacturing Co Ltd v Clifton (Slim-Line) Ltd [1967] Ch 41 at 51, [1966] 3 All ER 16 at 20, CA, per Diplock LJ.

7 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 38(4)(a) (s 38(4) added by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 5; repealed by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, arts 2, 21(2), 28(2), Sch 6). For transitional provisions see the text and notes 10-11 infra. The exclusion was effected by the making of the agreement pursuant to the previous authorisation by the court, and not by that authorisation itself (Tottenham Hotspur Football and Athletic Co Ltd v Princegrove Publishers Ltd [1974] 1 All ER 17, [1974] 1 WLR 113); but, where a person went in and occupied premises as tenant under the agreement, but the agreement was not executed, his position was taken as if an instrument giving effect to the new tenancy upon the agreed terms (and therefore excluding the relevant statutory provisions) had been executed (Tottenham Hotspur Football and Athletic Co Ltd v Princegrove Publishers Ltd supra applying Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 ChD 9, CA). Where there was a condition that a tenancy agreement negotiated between the parties should be subject to the making of a court order under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 38(4) (as so added and repealed), implicit in that condition was a term that, unless and until the court order was obtained, no legally binding grant or acceptance of the tenancy should be made: Cardiothoracic Institute v Shrewdcrest Ltd [1986] 3 All ER 633 at 640, [1986] 1 WLR 368 at 377 per Knox J; and see the text and note 11 infra. Where the tenants had been party to an application to the county court, which was granted, to exclude the statutory protection, but at a time when it was intended that they would be sureties rather than tenants, and where the lease was subsequently granted to the tenants, it was held that the exclusion was valid: see Brighton and Hove City Council v Collinson [2004] EWCA Civ 678, [2004] 2 P & CR D29, [2004] All ER (D) 257 (Jun). Cf Metropolitan Police District Receiver v Palacegate Properties Ltd [2001] Ch 131, [2000] 3 All ER 663, CA (the court was not entitled to consider the fairness of the bargain which the parties proposed to make, but was instead concerned with whether the tenant understood that he was giving up protection; however, the landlord was not entitled to make wholesale changes to the draft tenancy submitted to the court when approval had been sought). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 38(4)(a) (as so added and repealed) was construed narrowly: see eg Nicholls v Kinsey [1994] QB 600, [1994] 1 EGLR 131, CA.

711. Permitted agreements to contract out before the tenancy is entered into; the current position.

The persons who will be the landlord<sup>1</sup> and the tenant in relation to a tenancy<sup>2</sup> to be granted for a term of years certain<sup>3</sup> which will be a tenancy to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 applies<sup>4</sup> may agree that the provisions of that Act as to the continuation and renewal of business tenancies<sup>5</sup> are to be excluded in relation to that tenancy<sup>6</sup>. Such an agreement is void unless:

- 1390 (1) the landlord has served on the tenant a notice in the prescribed form<sup>7</sup>, or substantially in that form<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1391 (2) the specified requirements<sup>9</sup> are met<sup>10</sup>.

The specified requirements are as follows<sup>11</sup>:

- 1392 (a) the notice referred to in head (1) above must<sup>12</sup> be served on the tenant<sup>13</sup> not less than 14 days before the tenant enters into the tenancy to which it applies, or, if earlier, becomes contractually bound to do so<sup>14</sup>;
- 1393 (b) if that notice requirement is met, the tenant, or a person duly authorised by him to do so, must, before the tenant enters into the tenancy to which the notice applies, or, if earlier, becomes contractually bound to do so, make a declaration in the prescribed form<sup>15</sup>, or substantially in the prescribed form<sup>16</sup>;
- 1394 (c) if that notice requirement is not met, the notice referred to in head (1) above must be served on the tenant before the tenant enters into the tenancy to which it applies, or, if earlier, becomes contractually bound to do so, and the tenant, or a person duly authorised by him to do so, must before that time make a statutory declaration in the prescribed form<sup>17</sup>, or substantially in the prescribed form<sup>18</sup>;
- 1395 (d) a reference to the notice and to either the declaration<sup>19</sup> or the statutory declaration<sup>20</sup> must be contained in or indorsed on the instrument creating the tenancy<sup>21</sup>;
- 1396 (e) the agreement that the relevant statutory provisions are to be excluded<sup>22</sup>, or a reference to the agreement, must be contained in or indorsed upon the instrument creating the tenancy<sup>23</sup>.

There is now no need for the court to authorise the agreement<sup>24</sup>. Any provision in a tenancy which requires an order by the court authorising the exclusion of the relevant statutory provisions<sup>25</sup> to be obtained in respect of any subtenancy is, so far as is necessary after 1 June 2004, to be construed as if it required the procedure mentioned above to be followed, and any related requirement is to be construed accordingly<sup>26</sup>.

712. Permitted agreements to contract out by surrendering a tenancy; the current position.

The persons who are the landlord<sup>1</sup> and the tenant in relation to a tenancy<sup>2</sup> to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 applies<sup>3</sup> may agree that the tenancy is to be surrendered on such date or in such circumstances as may be specified in the agreement and on such terms, if any, as may be so specified<sup>4</sup>. Such an agreement is void unless:

- 1397 (1) the landlord has served on the tenant a notice in the prescribed form<sup>5</sup>, or substantially in that form<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1398 (2) the specified requirements<sup>7</sup> are met<sup>8</sup>.

The specified requirements are as follows<sup>9</sup>:

- 1399 (a) the notice referred to in head (1) above must<sup>10</sup> be served on the tenant<sup>11</sup> not less than 14 days before the tenant enters into the agreement to surrender the tenancy<sup>12</sup> or, if earlier, becomes contractually bound to do so<sup>13</sup>;
- 1400 (b) if that notice requirement is met, the tenant or a person duly authorised by him to do so, must, before the tenant enters into the agreement or, if earlier, becomes contractually bound to do so, make a declaration in the prescribed form<sup>14</sup>, or substantially in the prescribed form<sup>15</sup>;
- 1401 (c) if that notice requirement is not met, the notice must be served on the tenant before the tenant enters into the agreement or, if earlier, becomes contractually bound to do so, and the tenant, or a person duly authorised by him to do so, must before that time make a statutory declaration in the prescribed form<sup>16</sup>, or substantially in the prescribed form<sup>17</sup>;
- 1402 (d) a reference to the notice and to the declaration<sup>18</sup> or to the statutory declaration<sup>19</sup> must be contained in or indorsed on the instrument creating the agreement<sup>20</sup>.

There is now no need for the court to authorise the agreement<sup>21</sup>. Any provision in a tenancy which requires an order by the court authorising the exclusion of the relevant statutory provisions<sup>22</sup> to be obtained in respect of any subtenancy is, so far as is necessary after 1 June 2004, to be construed as if it required the procedure mentioned above to be followed, and any related requirement is to be construed accordingly<sup>23</sup>.

Continuation of tenancies.

D. CONTINUATION AND TERMINATION OF TENANCIES

713. Continuation of tenancies.

A tenancy to which the statutory protection for business tenancies applies<sup>1</sup> does not come to an end unless terminated in accordance with the statutory provisions<sup>2</sup>; but that does not prevent the coming to an end of a tenancy by notice to quit<sup>3</sup> given by the tenant, by surrender<sup>4</sup> or forfeiture<sup>5</sup> or by the forfeiture of a superior tenancy unless the notice to quit was given before the tenant had been in occupation in right of the tenancy for one month<sup>6</sup>. Until 1 June 2004<sup>7</sup>, the tenancy could not come to an end by surrender if the instrument of surrender was executed before, or in pursuance of an agreement made before, the tenant had been in occupation in right of the tenancy for one month<sup>8</sup>.

Where the landlord<sup>9</sup> and tenant agree<sup>10</sup> for the grant to the tenant of a future tenancy of the holding<sup>11</sup>, or of the holding with other land, on terms and from a date specified in the agreement, the current tenancy<sup>12</sup> continues until that date but no longer, and is not a tenancy to which the statutory protection applies<sup>13</sup>. The tenancy, if continued, is continued as to the whole of the premises comprised in the tenancy, even if parts of the premises are not within the holding<sup>14</sup>. Special statutory provision is made in the case of reversionary tenancies<sup>15</sup>.

Where a tenancy originally granted for a term certain and continued by statute<sup>16</sup> ceases to be a tenancy to which the statutory protection applies, it does not come to an end for that reason only but may<sup>17</sup> be terminated by not less than three nor more than six months' notice in writing given by the landlord to the tenant<sup>18</sup>. Where the landlord gives notice to quit at a time when the tenancy is not one to which the statutory protection applies, the operation of the notice is not affected by reason that the tenancy subsequently becomes one to which that protection applies<sup>19</sup>.

The legal effect of the statutory continuance of a tenancy is fundamentally different from that of the creation of a statutory right of occupancy under the Rent Act 1977 for a statutory tenant under that Act. Such a statutory tenant has no estate but only a 'status of irremovability'<sup>20</sup>; but under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 (as under Part I also<sup>21</sup>) the common law tenancy is continued with a statutory variation as to the mode of determination<sup>22</sup>, so that an estate in land, and not a mere status, is enjoyed by the tenant<sup>23</sup>. The steps which may be taken under the Act to terminate a business tenancy are:

- 1403 (1) the service of a landlord's notice to terminate the tenancy<sup>24</sup>;
- 1404 (2) the making of a tenant's request for a new tenancy<sup>25</sup>; or
- 1405 (3) the service of a tenant's notice in respect of a fixed term<sup>26</sup>.

Nothing in the 2003 Order has effect, however, in relation to an agreement for the surrender of a tenancy which was made before 1 June 2004 and which fell within the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24(2)(b) (now repealed): Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, art 29(2)(a) (i).

10    The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(2) provides that the agreement must be in writing; but the further requirements of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 will also apply since otherwise no enforceable agreement for a lease will subsist: see PARA 79 ante. 22 Bowes-Lyon v Green [1963] AC 420, [1961] 3 All ER 843, HL, approving the dictum of Denning LJ in HL Bolton (Engineering) Co Ltd v TJ Graham & Sons Ltd [1957] 1 QB 159 at 168, [1956] 3 All ER 624 at 626, CA. The term 'business statutory tenancy' used by Sellers J in Castle Laundry (London) Ltd v Read [1955] 1 QB 586, [1955] 2 All ER 154, may be convenient but must not be confused with the 'statutory tenancy' under the Rent Restriction Acts (now the Rent Act 1977: see PARA 831 post) which is not a tenancy at all (Weinbergs Weatherproofs Ltd v Radcliffe Paper Mill Co Ltd [1958] Ch 437 at 446, [1957] 3 All ER 663 at 667), and it is more convenient and more accurate to speak of a 'continuation tenancy'. A term certain which for the time being attracts the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) acquires an indeterminate potential which enables the tenant to sub-demise the premises for a term which purports to be longer than his own, without thereby assigning: see William Skelton & Son Ltd v Harrison and Pinder Ltd [1975] QB 361, [1975] 1 All ER 182.

This continuation does not, however, prolong the liability in covenant of the original tenant after he has assigned the term (City of London Corp v Fell [1994] 1 AC 458, [1993] 4 All ER 968, HL) nor the liability of any surety for the period of the statutory continuation of the tenancy, in the absence of an express stipulation to the contrary within the surety's covenant (Junction Estates Ltd v Cope (1974) 27 P & CR 482; A Plesser & Co Ltd v Davis [1983] 2 EGLR 70, (1983) 267 Estates Gazette 1039). Even a covenant to pay the rent for any extension of the term will not suffice to render the covenantor, if he is not currently the tenant, liable for an interim rent determined by the court (see PARAS 731-733 post): City of London Corp v Fell supra. Continuation may prolong the liability of the tenant for the time being, even if he vacates the premises: see eg Long Acre Securities Ltd v Electro Acoustic Industries Ltd (1990) 61 P & CR 177, [1990] 1 EGLR 91, CA (where the landlord had served a notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 and the tenant chose to vacate before the date of termination specified in that notice). As to the position under the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 see PARAS 289-291, 578 et seq ante.

23 Where, however, the tenancy (whether contractual or statutory) of a dwelling which was subject to a controlled tenancy was taken out of control ('converted'), eg by the issue of a qualification certificate (see PARA 849 note 13 post), then, if the former controlled tenancy would have been a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) would have applied if it had not been controlled (ie would have applied if the tenancy had been contractual in cases where in fact it was a statutory tenancy), it had to be treated (whether it was a statutory tenancy or remained a contractual tenancy) as if it were a business tenancy continued after the expiry of a term certain: Rent Act 1977 s 108(3) (repealed).

The same result occurred on the decontrol of mixed business and residential premises by reason of their rateable value, and on the final conversion of all controlled tenancies to regulated tenancies (see the Housing Act 1980 s 64(2); and PARA 848 post). As to the decontrol of mixed statutory tenancies in 1957 see the Rent Act 1957 s 11(1), (7), Sch 4 para 11 (repealed). Former controlled tenancies which remained contractual tenancies passed into the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) because upon decontrol they ceased to be excluded from it by s 43(1)(c) (repealed). A measure of decontrol of mixed premises in 1972-74 was achieved by the Housing Finance Act 1972 s 35(8) (repealed), but that provision (and subsequently also the Rent Act 1977 s 108(3) (repealed)) was so phrased as to require controlled but still contractual tenancies to be treated as tenancies which have been continued by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24 (as amended) after the expiry of a term of years certain. As such tenancies may have been periodic, the change in the wording of the operative provisions of the 1957, 1972 and 1977 Acts may be significant in cases where it is desired to serve a notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 716 post) on such a former controlled tenant, as whether the tenancy has to be treated as still a contractual one or as a 'continuation tenancy' will affect the date by which the tenancy can be determined. These difficulties cannot be avoided by treating the phrase 'controlled tenancy' in the Rent Act 1977 s 108(3) (repealed) as not being required by its context to include protected (ie contractual) tenancies (see s 17 (repealed)), because that would have the effect of converting such contractual former controlled tenancies into regulated tenancies (see s 108(2) (repealed)), which is clearly not achieved by the statutory provisions.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/D. CONTINUATION AND TERMINATION OF TENANCIES/714. ## 714. Reversions.

Where a tenancy<sup>1</sup> ('the inferior tenancy') is continued<sup>2</sup> for a period such as to extend to or beyond the end of the term of a superior tenancy, the superior tenancy is deemed<sup>3</sup>, so long as it subsists, to be an interest in reversion expectant upon the termination of the inferior tenancy and, if there is no intermediate tenancy, to be the interest in reversion immediately expectant upon that termination<sup>4</sup>. In the case of a tenancy continuing<sup>5</sup> after the coming to an end of the interest in reversion immediately expectant upon its termination, the statutory provisions relating to the effect of the extinguishment of a reversion<sup>6</sup> have effect as if references to the surrender or merger of the reversion included references to the coming to an end of the reversion for any reason other than surrender or merger<sup>7</sup>.

Where a tenancy ('the continuing tenancy') is continued<sup>8</sup> beyond the beginning of a reversionary tenancy which was granted<sup>9</sup> so as to begin on or after the date on which the continuing tenancy would otherwise<sup>10</sup> have come to an end, the reversionary tenancy has effect as if it had been granted subject to the continuing tenancy<sup>11</sup>.

Where a tenancy ('the new tenancy') is granted<sup>12</sup> for a period beginning on the same date as a reversionary tenancy or for a period such as to extend before the beginning of the term of a reversionary tenancy, whenever granted, the reversionary tenancy has effect as if it had been granted subject to the new tenancy<sup>13</sup>.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/D. CONTINUATION AND TERMINATION OF TENANCIES/715. Meaning of 'the landlord'.

715. Meaning of 'the landlord'.

Although a notice to quit<sup>1</sup> served under the contractual provisions of the tenancy must be served by the immediate landlord<sup>2</sup>, in Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>3</sup> 'the landlord', in relation to a tenancy<sup>4</sup> ('the relevant tenancy'), means the person, whether or not he is the immediate landlord, who is the owner of that interest in the property comprised in the relevant tenancy<sup>5</sup> which for the time being fulfils the following conditions<sup>6</sup>, that is to say:

- 1406 (1) that it is an interest in reversion expectant, whether immediately or not, on the termination of the relevant tenancy<sup>7</sup>; and
- 1407 (2) that it is either the fee simple or a tenancy which will not come to an end within 14 months by effluxion of time, and, if it is such a tenancy, that no notice has been given by virtue of which it will come to an end within 14 months or any further time by which it may be continued under the statutory provisions relating to revocation by the court<sup>8</sup> or pending proceedings<sup>9</sup>, and is not itself in reversion expectant, whether immediately or not, on an interest which fulfils those conditions<sup>10</sup>. Thus it is the owner of the immediate reversion, if it fulfils these conditions, or of the reversion nearest to the immediate reversion which does so, who is the landlord<sup>11</sup>.

The Act does not require that the landlord, throughout the whole period after its machinery has been set in motion, should be the same person; it is, for example, sufficient if at the time when a landlord puts in a notice of objection he is then in fact the landlord<sup>12</sup>. Where there has been a change of landlord, the new landlord becomes the person to act as such for the purposes of all further steps under the Act<sup>13</sup>.

If at any time the landlord's interest is subject to a mortgage<sup>14</sup>, and the mortgagee is in possession or a receiver appointed by the mortgagee or by the court is in receipt of the rents and profits, anything authorised or required<sup>15</sup> to be done at that time by, to or with the landlord, or a landlord of a specified description, is deemed to be authorised or required to be done by, to or with that mortgagee instead of that landlord<sup>16</sup>.

2 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 44(2). This preserves the common law terminology in respect of such notices.

5 With effect from 1 June 2004, this reference to a person who is the owner of an interest such as is mentioned in the text is to be construed, where different persons own such interests in different parts of the property, as a reference to all those persons collectively: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 44(1A) (s 44(1) amended, and s 44(1A) added, by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 27(1), (2)).

Landlord's notice to terminate business tenancy.

716. Landlord's notice to terminate business tenancy.

The landlord<sup>1</sup> may terminate a business tenancy<sup>2</sup> by a notice given to the tenant in the prescribed form<sup>3</sup> specifying the date at which the tenancy is to come to an end ('the date of termination')<sup>4</sup>.

The notice must be signed by the landlord<sup>5</sup> or by a duly authorised agent<sup>6</sup>. A notice which is not in the prescribed form or substantially to the like effect will not be effective for the statutory purposes<sup>7</sup>, but may still be an effective exercise of an option to determine the term<sup>8</sup>. A notice does not have effect unless it is given not more than 12 nor less than six months before the date of termination specified in it<sup>9</sup>.

In the case of a tenancy which could otherwise<sup>10</sup> have been brought to an end by notice to quit<sup>11</sup> given by the landlord, the date of termination specified in a statutory notice<sup>12</sup> must not be earlier than the earliest date on which the tenancy could otherwise have been brought to an end by notice to quit given by the landlord on the date of the giving of the statutory notice<sup>13</sup>. In the case of any other tenancy, the statutory notice must not specify a date of termination earlier than the date on which the tenancy would otherwise have come to an end by effluxion of time<sup>14</sup>. A notice which is in the prescribed form may take effect both as a notice to quit in respect of a periodic tenancy and as a notice to terminate, and in such a case it need not specify as its date of termination only a date on which an ordinary notice to quit could expire<sup>15</sup>.

A statutory notice does not have effect unless it states whether the landlord is opposed to the grant of a new tenancy to the tenant<sup>16</sup>. A notice which states that the landlord is so opposed does not have effect unless it also specifies one or more of the statutory grounds<sup>17</sup> as the ground or grounds for his opposition<sup>18</sup>; and a notice which states that the landlord is not so opposed does not have effect unless it sets out the landlord's proposals as to:

- 1408 (1) the property to be comprised in the new tenancy, being either the whole or part of the property comprised in the current tenancy<sup>19</sup>;
- 1409 (2) the rent to be payable under the new tenancy; and
- 1410 (3) the other terms<sup>20</sup> of the new tenancy<sup>21</sup>.

The effect of a valid notice will be to terminate the current tenancy on the date of termination<sup>22</sup> unless the tenant takes the proper steps to apply to the court for a new tenancy, in which case the provisions as to the interim continuation of tenancies<sup>23</sup> will take effect. A notice to terminate may not be given if the tenant has already made a request for a new tenancy<sup>24</sup>.

A single notice can determine several tenancies<sup>25</sup>, but a notice cannot determine a tenancy as to part only of the premises comprised in the tenancy<sup>26</sup>.

Where a landlord has served an invalid notice, he is not estopped from relying upon a later valid notice<sup>27</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante.

2 I.e. a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) applies: see PARAS 706-708 ante. For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

3 For the prescribed form of notice ending a tenancy to which ibid Pt II (as amended) applies (1) where the landlord is not opposed to the grant of a new tenancy, see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part 2 (Notices) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1005, regs 2(2), (3), Schs 1, 2, Form 1; (2) where the landlord is opposed to the grant of a new tenancy and the tenant is not entitled under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 to buy the freehold or an extended lease, see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, Part 2 (Notices) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1005, Schs 1, 2, Form 2; (3) where the landlord is opposed to the grant of a new tenancy but the tenant may be entitled to buy the freehold or an extended lease, see Schs 1, 2, Form 7; (4) for use in the special cases discussed in PARA 763 et seq post, see Schs 1, 2, Forms 8-17 (amended by SI 2005/3226). It has been held that the landlord's use of the wrong form is not material if the tenant does not raise the issue of its validity (see Keepers and Governors of the Possessions Revenues and Goods of the Free Grammar School of John Lyon v Mayhew [1997] 1 EGLR 88, [1997] 17 EG 163, CA), but the decision in this case was based on the fact that the tenant had assumed the validity of the notice by issuing a counter-notice in accordance with the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25(5) (now repealed).

In relation to a landlord's notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 4 (see PARA 1212 post) or s 25 (as amended) or under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 186, Sch 10 para 4(1) (see PARA 1249 post) terminating a tenancy of premises which are a 'house' for the purposes of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 (see PARA 1390 post), if (1) no previous notice terminating the tenancy has been given under any of those provisions; and (2) in the case of a notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended), the tenancy is a long tenancy at a low rent for the purposes of the 1967 Act (see PARAS 1398-1404 post) and the tenant is not a company or other artificial person, the landlord's notice does not have effect unless it states (a) that, if a tenant has a right under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Pt I (ss 1-37) (as amended) (see PARA 1389 et seq post) to acquire the freehold or an extended lease of property comprised in the tenancy, notice of his desire to have the freehold or an extended lease cannot be given more than two months after the service of the landlord's notice; and (b) that in the event of a tenant having that right and giving such a notice within those two months, the landlord's notice will not operate and no further proceedings may be taken by him under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended); and (c) that, in the event of the tenant giving such a notice within those two months, the landlord will be entitled to apply to the court under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 s 17 (see PARAS 1485-1486 post) or s 18 (as amended) (see PARAS 1488-1490 post) and proposes to do so or, as the case may be, will not be entitled or does not propose to do so: s 22(1), Sch 3 para 10(1), (2), (2A) (Sch 3 para 10 amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 194(1), Sch 11 paras 11, 13; the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, art 28(1), Sch 5 paras 10, 13).

The landlord must also in the notice give the names and addresses of any other persons known or believed by him to have an interest superior to the tenancy terminated by the notice or to be the agent concerned with the property on behalf of a person having such an interest; and, for these purposes, 'an interest superior to the tenancy terminated by the notice' means the estate in fee simple and any tenancy superior to that tenancy, but includes also a tenancy reversionary on that tenancy: Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Sch 3 para 10(3).

Where a tenant's notice of his desire to have the freehold or an extended lease of a house and premises under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Pt I (as amended) is given after the service of a landlord's notice terminating the tenancy under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended), and the landlord's notice does not comply with the requirements of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Sch 3 para 10(2), no application made under s 17 or s 18 (as amended) with respect to the house and premises by the landlord giving the notice may be entertained by the court, other than an application under s 17 after the grant of an extended lease: Sch 3 para 10(4) (amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 Sch 11 para 13(5)(b)).

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25(1). Section 25(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Pt IV (ss 51-70) (as amended) as to the interim continuation of tenancies pending the disposal of applications to the court and, as from 1 June 2004, subject to s 29B(4) (as added) (see PARA 721 post): s 25(1) (amended by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 11). As to interim continuation see PARA 729 post.

Nothing in the 2003 Order has effect in relation to a notice given by the landlord to the tenant before 1 June 2004: see art 29(1)(a). A notice given under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as originally enacted) was of no effect unless it stated whether the landlord would oppose an application to the court for the grant of a new tenancy and, if so, also stated on which of the grounds mentioned in s 30 (as amended) he would do so: see s 25(6) (as originally enacted). It had also to require the tenant, within two months after the giving of the notice, to notify the landlord in writing whether or not the tenant would be willing to give up possession of the property comprised in the tenancy at the date of termination: see s 25(5) (repealed). Once given, the tenant's counter-notice could not be withdrawn: see Pennycook v Shaws (EAL) Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 100, [2004] Ch 296, [2004] 2 All ER 665.

The landlord's intention must be clear and unambiguous to a reasonable recipient of the notice: see Barclays Bank plc v Bee [2001] EWCA Civ 1126, [2002] 1 WLR 332, [2001] All ER (D) 123 (Jul) (decided under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 as originally enacted).

Cf Moss v Mobil Oil Co Ltd [1988] 1 EGLR 71, CA (two separate tenancies created by one lease). A distinction has to be drawn between a notice directed to only part of the premises comprised in the tenancy (albeit that part is the holding, as in Kaiser Engineering and Constructors Inc v ER Squibb & Sons Ltd supra), in which case the notice will fail; and a notice which misdescribes the premises by referring only to part of them, in which case, as long as the notice sufficiently identifies the tenancy, it will not be invalid: Castell Bros Ltd v A Jeffries (Hatton Garden) Ltd (1972) 222 Estates Gazette 1009.

Where the reversion is severed, so that the landlord is one of several landlords in respect of the tenancy, the notice must be given by them collectively: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 44(1A) (as added); and PARA 715 ante. The position in relation to a notice by one of several landlords alone is unclear. It was held in Dodson Bull Carpet Co Ltd v City of London Corp [1975] 2 All ER 497, [1975] 1 WLR 781 that, prior to the addition of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 44(1A), a landlord has no authority to serve a notice to terminate a tenancy so as to affect part only of premises which the tenant holds under the tenancy and, accordingly, where the reversion is severed, the landlord of a severed part cannot serve a notice. This decision is irreconcilable with William Skelton & Son Ltd v Harrison and Pinder Ltd [1975] QB 361, [1975] 1 All ER 182, where the landlord of a severed part was held to be entitled to give a notice pursuant to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24(3)(a) (see PARA 713 ante) to terminate the tenancy of the severed part by virtue of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 140(1) (see PARA 555 ante), notwithstanding that the tenant was in business occupation of the other portion of the demised premises and that, if one tenancy had subsisted, it would have been a tenancy which included premises occupied for business purposes by the tenant, and would have attracted the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) necessitating a notice under s 25 (as amended) applying to the whole of the parcels.

717. Special rules for certain long tenancies.

Where the tenant may be entitled to enfranchise<sup>1</sup>, a special form of notice to terminate has to be used, designed to alert him to his rights in that connection<sup>2</sup>; and similar adjustments to the ordinary procedure under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>3</sup> are made in order to preserve rights, including putative but ineffective rights, to enfranchise. Thus a landlord's notice to terminate is of no effect if given or served during the currency of a claim<sup>4</sup> to acquire the freehold or an extended lease, and ceases to have effect on the making of such a claim<sup>5</sup>. Where a notice to terminate so ceases to have effect on the making of a claim, but the claim is not effective, then, if within one month after the period of currency of that claim or any subsequent claim<sup>6</sup> a landlord's notice to terminate the tenancy is given, the earliest date which may be specified as the date of termination is the date specified in the previous notice or the expiration of three months from the giving of the new notice, whichever is the later<sup>7</sup>.

If:

- 1411 (1) the landlord commences proceedings under Part II of the 1954 Act; and
- 1412 (2) the tenant subsequently makes a claim to acquire the freehold or an extended lease of the property<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1413 (3) the relevant statutory provision<sup>9</sup> does not render the claim of no effect, no further steps are to be taken in the proceedings under Part II of the 1954 Act otherwise than for their dismissal and for the making of any consequential order<sup>10</sup>.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 64 (as amended) (interim continuation of tenancies pending determination by the court: see PARA 729 post) has no effect in a case to which the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Sch 3 para 2A(1) (as so added) applies: Sch 3 para 2A(2) (as so added).

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/D. CONTINUATION AND TERMINATION OF TENANCIES/718. Tenant's request for a new tenancy.

718. Tenant's request for a new tenancy.

A tenant's request for a new tenancy<sup>1</sup> may be made where the current tenancy<sup>2</sup> is a tenancy granted for a term of years certain<sup>3</sup> exceeding one year, whether or not continued by statute<sup>4</sup> or granted for a term of years certain and thereafter from year to year<sup>5</sup>. Such a request does not have effect unless it is made by notice in the prescribed form<sup>6</sup> given to the landlord<sup>7</sup> and sets out the tenant's proposals as to the property to be comprised in the new tenancy, which may be the whole or part of the property comprised in the current tenancy, as to the rent to be payable under the new tenancy and as to the other terms<sup>8</sup> of the new tenancy<sup>9</sup>. It must be a request for a tenancy beginning with such date, not more than 12 nor less than six months after the making of the request, as may be specified in it, but that date must not be earlier than the date on which the current tenancy would otherwise<sup>10</sup> come to an end by effluxion of time or could be brought to an end by notice to quit<sup>11</sup> given by the tenant<sup>12</sup>.

A request may not be made if the landlord has already given notice to terminate<sup>13</sup> the current tenancy or if the tenant has already given notice to quit or statutory notice ending a fixed term<sup>14</sup>; and no such notice may be given by the landlord or the tenant after the making by the tenant of a request for a new tenancy<sup>15</sup>.

A request will be of no effect if it is made after the landlord has applied for possession under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967<sup>16</sup> or the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993<sup>17</sup>, and a request which has been made will cease to have effect upon the landlord making such an application<sup>18</sup>. A tenant's request is of no effect if it is made during the currency of a claim<sup>19</sup> to enfranchise or to extend the lease under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967<sup>20</sup>; but, once a request for a new tenancy under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 has been made, the tenant cannot enfranchise or extend the lease under the 1967 Act<sup>21</sup>.

Where the tenant makes a request for a new tenancy, the current tenancy terminates<sup>22</sup> immediately before the date specified in the request for the beginning of the new tenancy<sup>23</sup>. Within two months of the making of a tenant's request for a new tenancy, the landlord may give notice to the tenant that he will oppose an application to the court for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>24</sup>. Any such notice must state on which of the statutory grounds<sup>25</sup> he will oppose the application<sup>26</sup>.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/D. CONTINUATION AND TERMINATION OF TENANCIES/719. Tenant's notice terminating a term certain or its continuation.

719. Tenant's notice terminating a term certain or its continuation.

Where the tenant under a business tenancy<sup>1</sup> granted for a term of years certain<sup>2</sup> gives to the immediate landlord<sup>3</sup>, not later than three months before the date on which the tenancy would otherwise<sup>4</sup> come to an end by effluxion of time, a notice in writing that the tenant does not desire the tenancy to be continued, the tenancy is not continued by statute<sup>5</sup> unless the notice is given before the tenant has been in occupation in right of the tenancy for one month<sup>6</sup>. Nor, with effect from 1 June 2004<sup>7</sup>, is a business tenancy for a term of years certain continued by statute<sup>8</sup> where the tenant is not in occupation of the property comprised in the tenancy at the time when the tenancy would otherwise<sup>9</sup> come to an end by effluxion of time<sup>10</sup>.

A tenancy granted for a term of years certain which is continuing by virtue of statute<sup>11</sup> may be brought to an end on any day by not less than three months' notice in writing given by the tenant to the immediate landlord, whether the notice is given after the date on which the tenancy would otherwise<sup>12</sup> have come to an end or before that date, but not before the tenant has been in occupation in right of the tenancy for one month<sup>13</sup>. It does not come to an end by reason only of the tenant ceasing to occupy the property<sup>14</sup>. Where a tenancy is terminated under this provision on or after 1 June 2004, any rent payable in respect of a period which begins before, and ends after, the tenancy is terminated must be apportioned, and any rent paid by the tenant in excess of the amount apportioned to the period before termination is recoverable by him<sup>15</sup>.

Neither type of notice will be of any effect if it is served during the currency of a claim<sup>16</sup> to enfranchise or to extend the tenancy under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967<sup>17</sup>, and no such claim under that Act can validly be made after the tenant has served notice terminating a term certain or its continuation under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>18</sup>.

Minor errors will not invalidate a tenant's notice so long as it is sufficiently clear and unambiguous to leave a reasonable recipient in no doubt as to how and when it is to take effect<sup>19</sup>.

E. RENEWAL OF TENANCIES

(A) LANDLORD'S OR TENANT'S APPLICATION TO THE COURT

720. Right to apply for an order for grant of a new tenancy.

With effect from 1 June 2004<sup>1</sup>, either the landlord<sup>2</sup> or the tenant under a business tenancy<sup>3</sup> may apply to the court<sup>4</sup> for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>5</sup> if the landlord has given a notice to terminate the tenancy<sup>6</sup> or if the tenant has made a request<sup>7</sup> for a new tenancy<sup>8</sup>. The landlord may not withdraw such an application unless the tenant consents to its withdrawal<sup>9</sup>. Prior to that date, only the tenant had a statutory right to make such an application<sup>10</sup>.

Neither the tenant nor the landlord may make such an application:

1414 (1) if the other has made such an application and the application has been served<sup>11</sup>;

1415 (2) if the landlord has made an application for an order for the termination of the tenancy without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>12</sup> and the application has been served<sup>13</sup>.

It is a continuing condition of the tenant's right to a new tenancy that the tenant should continue in occupation of the holding for business purposes throughout the proceedings<sup>14</sup>, but constructive occupation will suffice where the tenant's temporary removal from the premises is involuntary and for reasons beyond the tenant's control<sup>15</sup>.

The court must dismiss the application by the landlord if the tenant informs the court that he does not want a new tenancy<sup>16</sup>. Otherwise, on an application by the landlord or the tenant<sup>17</sup> the court must<sup>18</sup> make an order for the grant of a new tenancy and accordingly for the termination of the current tenancy<sup>19</sup> immediately before the commencement of the new tenancy<sup>20</sup>, unless the landlord opposes the tenant's application and establishes one of the statutory grounds of opposition<sup>21</sup>.

721. Time limits on applications made on or after 1 June 2004.

The court may not<sup>1</sup> entertain an application:

- 1416 (1) by the tenant or the landlord<sup>2</sup> for an order for the grant of a new business tenancy<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1417 (2) by the landlord for the termination of such a tenancy without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>4</sup>, if it is made after the end of the statutory period<sup>5</sup>. 'The statutory period' means a period ending:

- 1418 (a) where the landlord gave a notice terminating the tenancy<sup>6</sup>, on the date specified in his notice; and
- 1419 (b) where the tenant made a request for a new tenancy<sup>7</sup>, immediately before the date specified in his request<sup>8</sup>.

Where the tenant has made a request for a new tenancy<sup>9</sup>, the court may not entertain an application for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>10</sup> which is made before the end of the period of two months beginning with the date of the making of the request, unless the application is made after the landlord has given a notice<sup>11</sup> that he will oppose the application<sup>12</sup>.

After the landlord has given a notice of termination, or the tenant has made a request for the new tenancy, but before the end of the statutory period, the landlord and tenant may, however, agree that an application such as is mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above may be made before the end of a period specified in the agreement which will expire after the end of the statutory period<sup>13</sup>. They may from time to time by agreement further extend the period for making such an application, but any such agreement must be made before the end of the period specified in the current agreement<sup>14</sup>. Where an agreement is so made, the court may entertain an application such as is mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above if it is made before the end of the period specified in the agreement<sup>15</sup>; and where an agreement is so made, or two or more such agreements are made, the landlord's notice of termination or the tenant's request for a new tenancy is to be treated as terminating the tenancy at the end of the period specified in the agreement or, as the case may be, at the end of the period specified in the last of those agreements<sup>16</sup>.

722. Jurisdiction.

Any jurisdiction conferred on the court by the statutory provisions relating to business tenancies<sup>1</sup> is exercised either by the High Court or by a county court<sup>2</sup>. A county court has jurisdiction to make any declaration as to any matter arising under those provisions whether or not any other relief is sought in the proceedings<sup>3</sup>.

The following provisions have effect as respects transfer of proceedings from or to the High Court or the county court, that is to say:

- 1420 (1) where an application is made to the one but cannot<sup>4</sup> be entertained except by the other, the application may not be treated as improperly made, but any proceedings on it must be transferred to the other court<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1421 (2) any proceedings<sup>6</sup> which are pending before one of those courts may by order of that court made on the application of any person interested be transferred to the other court, if it appears to the court making the order that it is desirable that the proceedings and any proceedings before the other court should both be entertained by the other court<sup>7</sup>.

Except where the county court does not have jurisdiction<sup>8</sup>, claims under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 should normally be brought in the county court; only exceptional circumstances justify starting a claim in the High Court<sup>9</sup>.

723. Procedure for bringing claims; in general.

The following procedural rules apply to a claim for a new tenancy<sup>1</sup> and also to a claim for the termination<sup>2</sup> of a tenancy<sup>3</sup>.

Where the claim is an unopposed claim for a new tenancy<sup>4</sup>, the claimant must use the procedure under Part 8 of the Civil Procedure Rules<sup>5</sup>, with certain modifications<sup>6</sup>. The claim form must be served<sup>7</sup> within two months after the date of issue<sup>8</sup> and the court will give directions about the future management of the claim following receipt of the acknowledgment of service<sup>9</sup>.

Where the claim is an opposed claim<sup>10</sup>, the claimant must use the procedure under Part 7 of the Civil Procedure Rules<sup>11</sup> but the claim form must be served within two months after the date of issue<sup>12</sup>.

Where a claim for a new tenancy is made by a tenant, the person who, in relation to the claimant's current tenancy, is the landlord<sup>13</sup> must be a defendant<sup>14</sup>.

- 1455 (C) the terms of the new tenancy that the defendant would propose in the event that the claimant's claim to terminate the current tenancy fails<sup>14</sup>.

727. Evidence and preliminary issues; amendment of statements of case.

Where the claim is an unopposed claim<sup>1</sup>, no evidence need be filed<sup>2</sup> unless and until the court directs it to be filed<sup>3</sup>. Where the claim is an opposed claim<sup>4</sup>, evidence, including expert evidence<sup>5</sup>, must be filed by the parties as the court directs and the landlord is to be required to file his evidence first<sup>6</sup>.

Unless in the circumstances of the case it is unreasonable to do so, any grounds of opposition<sup>7</sup> must be tried as a preliminary issue<sup>8</sup>.

The fact that things change in the course of an application for the grant of a new tenancy is not out of the ordinary and does not represent a reason to refuse to allow an amendment of the statements of case<sup>9</sup>.

RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(A) Landlord's or Tenant's Application to the Court/728. Costs.

728. Costs.

Both in the High Court and in a county court costs are in the court's discretion<sup>1</sup>; and, in making an order as to costs, the court should consider the reasonableness of the offers made by either side<sup>2</sup>. Where a landlord opposes the grant of a new lease but loses, ordinarily costs will follow the event<sup>3</sup>; but, where the parties are unable to agree the rent or terms for the new lease, so that they have to come to court to have those terms decided, it is usual for no order for costs to be made if neither party has behaved unreasonably<sup>4</sup>. If the tenant exercises his right<sup>5</sup> to decline to take up a lease ordered by the court to be granted, and therefore applies for the rescission of the order<sup>6</sup>, the court may, if it thinks fit, revoke or vary any provision for costs<sup>7</sup>; and, where no order for costs was made in the proceedings in which the revoked order had been obtained, the court may award costs in respect of those proceedings<sup>8</sup>.

RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(B) Interim Continuation of Tenancies and Payment of Rent/729. Interim continuation pending determination by the court.

(B) INTERIM CONTINUATION OF TENANCIES AND PAYMENT OF RENT

729. Interim continuation pending determination by the court.

In any case where:

- 1456 (1) a notice to terminate a tenancy<sup>1</sup> has been given<sup>2</sup> or a request for a new tenancy has been made<sup>3</sup>; and
- 1457 (2) an application has been made to the court for an order for a new tenancy<sup>4</sup> or for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>5</sup>; and
- 1458 (3) the effect of the notice or request would otherwise<sup>6</sup> be to terminate the tenancy before the expiration of the period of three months beginning with the date on which the application is finally disposed of<sup>7</sup>, the effect of the notice or request is to terminate the tenancy at the expiration of that period of three months and not at any other time<sup>8</sup>. Thus, in the absence of any contrary agreement, any new tenancy which is ordered by the court must commence at that date<sup>9</sup>. An application for an order for a new tenancy which is doomed to fail because it is premature, or, it would seem, too late, is still for this purpose an application which brings the provisions for interim continuation of the tenancy into operation until that application has been disposed of<sup>10</sup>. Once an order for the grant of a new tenancy has been refused, or the application otherwise disposed of, if 'rent' is accepted by the landlord after the expiry of the interim continuation of the tenancy, it will be a question of with what intent the payment was accepted, and it is unlikely that it will be inferred that the payment was intended to create a new tenancy<sup>11</sup>.

RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(B) Interim Continuation of Tenancies and Payment of Rent/730. Landlord's or tenant's application for determination of interim rent.

730. Landlord's or tenant's application for determination of interim rent.

With effect from 1 June 2004<sup>1</sup>, if:

- 1459 (1) the landlord<sup>2</sup> of a business tenancy<sup>3</sup> has given notice<sup>4</sup> to terminate the tenancy; or
- 1460 (2) the tenant of such a tenancy has made a request for a new tenancy<sup>5</sup>, either of them may make an application to the court to determine a rent (an 'interim rent') which the tenant is to pay while the tenancy ('the relevant tenancy') continues by virtue of the statutory provisions<sup>6</sup> and the court may<sup>7</sup> order payment of an interim rent<sup>8</sup>. Neither the tenant nor the landlord may, however, make such an application if the other has made such an application and has not withdrawn it<sup>9</sup>; and no such application may be entertained if it is made more than six months after the termination of the relevant tenancy<sup>10</sup>.

The interim rent determined on such an application is to be payable from the appropriate date<sup>11</sup>. That date is:

- 1461 (a) if such an application is made in a case where the landlord has given a notice to terminate the tenancy<sup>12</sup>, the earliest date of termination that could have been specified in the landlord's notice<sup>13</sup>;
- 1462 (b) if such an application is made in a case where the tenant has made a request for a new tenancy<sup>14</sup>, the earliest date that could have been specified in the tenant's request as the date from which the new tenancy is to begin<sup>15</sup>.

Prior to 1 June 2004, only the landlord might apply for the determination of an interim rent<sup>16</sup>. A rent determined by the court in such proceedings was deemed to be the rent payable under the tenancy from the date in which the proceedings were commenced or the date specified in the landlord's notice terminating the tenancy or the tenant's request for a new tenancy, whichever was the later<sup>17</sup>.

In determining a rent, the court was to have regard to the rent payable under the terms of the tenancy, but otherwise the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1), (2) (as amended by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 1(1)) (see PARA 755 post) applied to the determination as it would apply to the determination of a rent under that provision if a new tenancy from year to year of the whole of the property comprised in the tenancy were granted to the tenant by order of the court: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24A(3) (as so added). Some cushioning of what would otherwise be the increase in the rent might be made by the court: see English Exporters (London) Ltd v Eldonwall Ltd [1973] Ch 415, [1973] 1 All ER 726, where Megarry J held that, having determined what would be the market rent upon the hypothetical tenancy from year to year (which he found to be £15,000 per annum as opposed to the rent under the new lease which was to be £16,00), the court had further to adjust the figure, if it were appropriate, in order to 'have regard to' the old rent, and he adjusted the £15,000 to £14,000. Dillon J followed this decision and adopted the same course in Ratners (Jewellers) Ltd v Lemnoll Ltd [1980] 2 EGLR 65, (1980) 255 Estates Gazette 987. Cf Regis Property Co Ltd v Lewis and Peat Ltd [1970] Ch 695, [1970] 3 All ER 227, where Stamp J declined to adjust the amount determined as the value as on a tenancy from year to year in order to 'have regard to' the old rent. might order a stepped or variable interim rent: Fawke v Viscount Chelsea [1980] QB 441, [1979] 3 All ER 568, CA (differential rent based on state of disrepair of the premises).

732. Amount of interim rent where new tenancy of whole premises granted and landlord not opposed.

The following provisions apply where:

- 1471 (1) the landlord<sup>1</sup> gave a notice to terminate a tenancy<sup>2</sup> at a time when the tenant was in occupation of the whole of the property comprised in the relevant tenancy<sup>3</sup> for business, or business and other, purposes<sup>4</sup> and stated in the notice that he was not opposed to the grant of a new tenancy; or
- 1472 (2) the tenant made a request for a new tenancy<sup>5</sup> at a time when he was in occupation of the whole of that property for such purposes and the landlord did not give notice that he would oppose an application to the court for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>6</sup>, and the landlord grants a new tenancy of the whole of the property comprised in the relevant tenancy to the tenant, whether as a result of an order for the grant of a new tenancy or otherwise<sup>7</sup>. The rent payable under and at the commencement of the new tenancy is also<sup>8</sup> to be the interim rent<sup>9</sup>; but does not apply where:

- 1473 (a) the landlord or the tenant shows to the satisfaction of the court that that interim rent differs substantially from the relevant rent<sup>10</sup>; or
- 1474 (b) the landlord or the tenant shows to the satisfaction of the court that the terms<sup>11</sup> of the new tenancy differ from the terms of the relevant tenancy to such an extent that that interim rent is substantially different from the rent which the court would have determined<sup>12</sup> to be payable under a tenancy which commenced on the same day as the new tenancy and whose other terms were the same as the relevant tenancy<sup>13</sup>.

In a case where only head (a) above applies<sup>14</sup>, the interim rent is the relevant rent<sup>15</sup>; and in a case where either head (b) above applies, or where both heads (a) and (b) above apply<sup>16</sup>, the interim rent is the rent which it is reasonable for the tenant to pay while the relevant tenancy continues by virtue of the statutory provisions<sup>17</sup> to that effect<sup>18</sup>. In determining the interim rent which it is reasonable for the tenant to pay in such a case<sup>19</sup>, the court must have regard:

- 1475 (i) to the rent payable under the terms of the relevant tenancy; and
- 1476 (ii) to the rent payable under any subtenancy of part of the property comprised in the relevant tenancy,

but otherwise the statutory principles for determining the rent under a new tenancy<sup>20</sup> apply to the determination as they would apply to the determination of a rent<sup>21</sup> if a new tenancy of the whole of the property comprised in the relevant tenancy were granted to the tenant by order of the court and the duration of that new tenancy were the same as the duration of the new tenancy which is actually granted to the tenant<sup>22</sup>.

RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(B) Interim Continuation of Tenancies and Payment of Rent/733. Amount of interim rent in any other case.

733. Amount of interim rent in any other case.

The interim rent in a case except one where a tenancy of the whole premises is granted and the landlord is not opposed<sup>1</sup> is the rent which it is reasonable for the tenant to pay while the relevant tenancy<sup>2</sup> continues by virtue of the statutory provisions<sup>3</sup> to that effect<sup>4</sup>. In determining that interim rent the court must have regard:

- 1477 (1) to the rent payable under the terms of the relevant tenancy; and
- 1478 (2) to the rent payable under any subtenancy of part of the property comprised in the relevant tenancy,

but otherwise the statutory principles for determining the rent under a new tenancy<sup>5</sup> apply to the determination as they would apply to the determination of a rent<sup>6</sup> if a new tenancy from year to year of the whole of the property comprised in the relevant tenancy were granted to the tenant by order of the court<sup>7</sup>.

If the court has made an order for the grant of a new tenancy and has ordered payment of interim rent<sup>8</sup> but either:

- 1479 (a) it subsequently revokes<sup>9</sup> the order for the grant of a new tenancy; or
- 1480 (b) the landlord<sup>10</sup> and tenant agree not to act on the order, the court on the application of the landlord or the tenant<sup>11</sup> must determine a new interim rent in accordance with the provisions set out above<sup>12</sup> without a further application<sup>13</sup> for its determination<sup>14</sup>.

(C) LANDLORD'S OPPOSITION

a. In general

734. Landlord's application for order terminating tenancy without grant of new tenancy.

A landlord may apply to the court<sup>1</sup> for an order for the termination of a business tenancy<sup>2</sup> without the grant of a new tenancy:

1481 (1) if he has given notice to terminate<sup>3</sup> stating that he is opposed to the grant of a new tenancy to the tenant; or 1482 (2) if the tenant has made a request for a new tenancy<sup>4</sup> and the landlord has given notice<sup>5</sup> that he is opposed to its grant<sup>6</sup>.

The landlord<sup>7</sup> may not, however, make such an application if either the tenant or the landlord has made an application<sup>8</sup> for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>9</sup>. Furthermore, he may not withdraw it unless the tenant consents to its withdrawal<sup>10</sup>.

Where the landlord makes such an application for an order for termination as is mentioned above:

1483 (a) if he establishes, to the satisfaction of the court, any of the statutory grounds on which he is entitled to make the application<sup>11</sup>, the court must make an order for the termination of the current tenancy<sup>12</sup> without the grant of a new tenancy; and 1484 (b) if not, it must make an order for the grant of a new tenancy and accordingly for the termination of the current tenancy immediately before the commencement of the new tenancy<sup>13</sup>.

735. Grounds of opposition; in general.

The grounds on which a landlord may make an application to the court<sup>1</sup> for an order for the termination of a business tenancy<sup>2</sup> without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>3</sup>, or on which he may oppose an application by the tenant for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>4</sup>, are such of the statutory grounds as were stated in his notice to terminate<sup>5</sup> or in his notice in reply<sup>6</sup> to the tenant's request for a new tenancy<sup>7</sup>; but, if the landlord<sup>8</sup> is relying upon one of those three grounds which require the court to decide whether after default by the tenant he 'ought not to be granted' a new tenancy<sup>9</sup>, and if the statutory ground is shown to exist, then other matters, and notably the general conduct of the parties and the history of the current tenancy, may be taken into account by the court in deciding whether to order the grant of a new tenancy<sup>10</sup>, and the court is given a discretion in those cases<sup>11</sup>.

There are seven separately stated grounds of opposition<sup>12</sup>, but several of the grounds themselves contain several alternatives<sup>13</sup>.

1     le on or after 1 June 2004 (see note 6 infra) and subject to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 ss 29(3)-70 (as amended): see the text and notes 2-13 infra; and PARA 736 et seq post. As to the mode of application and the procedure on such an application see PARA 723 et seq ante.

4     le under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24(1) (as amended): see PARA 720 ante.

5     See note 3 supra.

6     le the notice given by the landlord under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 26(6): see PARA 718 ante. However, in this respect 'ground' must be taken as an indication of the relevant paragraph of s 30(1) (as amended) upon which the landlord intends to rely, and not of the precise facts upon which reliance will be placed to bring the case within that paragraph: see Sevenarts Ltd v Busvine [1969] 1 All ER 392, [1968] 1 WLR 1929, CA. See also Biles v Caesar [1957] 1 All ER 151, [1957] 1 WLR 156, CA; Betty's Cafes Ltd v Phillips Furnishing Stores Ltd [1959] AC 20, [1958] 1 All ER 607, HL; Marks v British Waterways Board [1963] 3 All ER 28, [1963] 1 WLR 1008, CA; Housleys Ltd v Bloomer-Holt Ltd [1966] 2 All ER 966, [1966] 1 WLR 1244, CA. Once a notice has been given, it cannot be amended: Nurse v P Currie (Dartford) Ltd [1959] 1 All ER 497, [1959] 1 WLR 273, CA.

7     Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1) (amended by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 6(1), with effect from 1 June 2004: see art 1(3)). As to requests for a new tenancy see PARA 718 ante.

8     For the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante.

9     The relevant grounds of opposition are those specified in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(a)-(c): see PARAS 736-738 post. In all these cases the word 'ought' confers upon the court an element of discretion: Lyons v Central Commercial Properties Ltd [1958] 2 All ER 767, [1958] 1 WLR 869, CA. The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(e) (see PARA 740 post) also uses 'ought', but not in the context of exercising any discretion in the light of the tenant's behaviour.

10    Eichner v Midland Bank Executor and Trustee Co Ltd [1970] 2 All ER 597, [1970] 1 WLR 1120, CA. It is easier for a landlord to show that a new tenancy ought not to be granted than for him to show that an existing tenancy ought to be forfeited (or ought not to be relieved from forfeiture), so that breaches of covenant which are not sufficiently severe to entitle the landlord to succeed in a forfeiture claim may still be sufficient to establish a statutory ground of opposition: Norton v Charles Deane Productions Ltd (1969) 214 Estates Gazette 559.

b. Statutory Grounds of Opposition

736. Disrepair.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may oppose an application for a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or may make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> where under the current tenancy<sup>4</sup> the tenant has any obligations as respects the repair and maintenance of the holding<sup>5</sup> on the ground that the tenant ought<sup>6</sup> not to be granted a new tenancy in view of the state of repair of the holding, being a state resulting from the tenant's failure to comply with those obligations<sup>7</sup>.

In considering whether the tenant ought not to be granted a new tenancy the court may consider not merely the gravity of the disrepair and the culpability of the tenant for that disrepair, but also such factors as the tenant's financial ability to comply with future repairing obligations<sup>8</sup> and the willingness of the tenant to assume in the new lease express obligations speedily to put the premises into good repair<sup>9</sup>. The court is not bound to refuse a new tenancy where it is shown that the premises comprised in the holding are in a bad state of repair by reason of the tenant's breach of covenant<sup>10</sup>.

The relevant matters must be proved to exist at the date of the hearing<sup>11</sup>.

737. Persistent delay in paying rent.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may oppose an application for a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or may make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> on the ground that the tenant ought<sup>4</sup> not to be granted a new tenancy in view of his persistent delay in paying rent which has become due<sup>5</sup>. It is sufficient that there is a history of late payment, although it need not be prolonged<sup>6</sup>; nor need there be substantial arrears of rent<sup>7</sup>. Whether the tenant is likely to repeat or continue his default will be of critical significance to the question<sup>8</sup> whether a new tenancy ought to be granted<sup>9</sup>.

Where a tenant has regularly made slightly late payments by cheque and the landlords have in practice assented to this, such assent does not amount to a variation of the terms of the lease, but it does mean that the landlords are estopped from insisting that the tenant is to revert to strict compliance with the lease unless they give reasonable notice to that effect; and assignees of the landlords' interest are subject to the same restraint<sup>10</sup>.

Statutory Grounds of Opposition/738. Other substantial breaches of covenant or bad management.

738. Other substantial breaches of covenant or bad management.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may oppose an application for a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or may make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> on the ground that the tenant ought<sup>4</sup> not to be granted a new tenancy in view of other substantial breaches by him of his obligations under the current tenancy<sup>5</sup>, or for any other reason connected with the tenant's use or management of the holding<sup>6</sup>. As the specific ground of opposition relating to disrepair<sup>7</sup> relates only to 'the holding', breaches of tenants' repairing covenants in respect of parts of the demised premises which are not within the holding will be relevant under the first limb of this ground, as will breaches of user covenants (including the usual covenant against nuisance and annoyance); and, although the breach has to be substantial, it will still be easier for the landlord to resist an order for the grant of a new tenancy than for him to resist an order for relief from the forfeiture of an existing tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

It is a sufficient 'other reason connected with the tenant's use or management of the holding' that the tenant's continued business use of the holding would be in breach of planning control<sup>9</sup>, or that such use prevented the landlord from obtaining fire insurance cover upon the demised premises and the landlord's adjacent properties. The tenant does not necessarily have to be in breach of covenant<sup>10</sup>. As this ground of opposition<sup>11</sup> is one which, if established, deprives the tenant of any right to compensation for disturbance<sup>12</sup>, it would seem that some element of fault or mismanagement such as would unfairly prejudice the landlord's interest if it were allowed to continue is implicitly required<sup>13</sup> for the second limb of the ground although the conduct complained of will not be a breach of covenant.

The relevant state of affairs must be shown to exist at the date of the hearing<sup>14</sup>.

739. Alternative accommodation.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may oppose an application for a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or may make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> on the ground that the landlord has offered and is willing to provide or secure the provision of alternative accommodation<sup>4</sup> for the tenant, that the terms on which the alternative accommodation is available are reasonable having regard to the terms of the current tenancy<sup>5</sup> and to all other relevant circumstances, and that the accommodation and the time at which it will be available are suitable for the tenant's requirements, including the requirement to preserve goodwill, having regard to the nature and class of his business<sup>6</sup> and to the situation and extent of, and facilities afforded by, the holding<sup>7</sup>. As the grounds of opposition must have been stated in the landlord's notice<sup>8</sup>, it would seem that the landlord's offer must have been made before that notice was given, although it must also be shown at the hearing<sup>9</sup> that the accommodation will still be available for the tenant at the date on which the tenancy comes to an end<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante.

3 I.e. under ibid s 29(2) (as substituted): see PARA 734 ante.

4 Although the wording of ibid s 30(1)(d) is close to that used by the Rent Act 1977 (see s 98(1)(a), Sch 15 Pt IV (as amended); and PARA 947 post), moving one's home and one's business enterprise are so different that little assistance can be obtained from the Rent Act cases on alternative accommodation in relation to business tenancies: Singh v Malayan Theatres Ltd [1953] AC 632, PC. Nevertheless it has been held in the county court, in reliance upon Thompson v Rolls [1926] 2 KB 426, DC, and Parmee v Mitchell [1950] 2 KB 199, [1950] 1 All ER 872, CA, that part of the tenant's existing business premises could constitute such alternative accommodation: Lawrence v Carter (1956) 106 L Jo 269. Other premises in which the tenant is already carrying on part of his business cannot constitute alternative accommodation unless the same business which the tenant has been carrying on in the holding can also be carried on in the other premises. Thus, where the tenant of a theatre also owned or controlled and carried on business in other theatres in the same city, those other theatres could not be said to be 'alternative accommodation' to the holding: Singh v Malayan Theatres Ltd supra.

5 For the meaning of 'the current tenancy' see PARA 713 note 12 ante.

6 For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 ante.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(d). For the meaning of 'the holding' see PARA 706 note 23 ante. The grounds must be stated in the landlord's notice under s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 716 ante) or, as the case may be s 26(6) (see PARA 718 ante): see s 30(1) (as amended); and PARA 734 ante.

8 I.e. by virtue of ibid s 30(1) (as amended): see PARA 734 ante.

9 The willingness to provide alternative accommodation expressed by the landlord in his notice must be continuing willingness, and it must exist at the time of the hearing: see Betty's Cafés Ltd v Phillips Furnishing Stores Ltd [1959] AC 20 at 34-35, 47, 51, [1958] 1 All ER 607 at 613, 620, 623, HL.

10 As to the effect of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 64 (as amended) and the date on which the tenancy will come to an end see PARA 729 ante. Where the necessities of the tenant's business would require that the alternative accommodation be available sooner than the date of the expiry of the tenancy (eg where the business is seasonal, and the season is about to commence), the wording of s 30(1)(d) would seem to require that the landlord demonstrate that the alternative accommodation will be available at an earlier date.

RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(C) Landlord's Opposition/b. Statutory Grounds of Opposition/740. Subtenancy; landlord desiring to relet the premises as a whole.

740. Subtenancy; landlord desiring to relet the premises as a whole.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may oppose an application for a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or may make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> where the current tenancy<sup>4</sup> was created by the subletting of part only of the property comprised in a superior tenancy and the landlord is the owner of an interest in reversion expectant on the termination of that superior tenancy, on the ground that the aggregate of the rents reasonably obtainable on separate lettings of the holding<sup>5</sup> and the remainder of that property would be substantially less<sup>6</sup> than the rent reasonably obtainable on a letting of that property as a whole, that on the termination of the current tenancy the landlord requires possession of the holding for the purpose of letting or otherwise disposing of the property as a whole, and that in view of this the tenant ought<sup>7</sup> not to be granted a new tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

Although 'ought' imports an element of discretion, the statutory ground contains no reference to the behaviour of the tenant as opposed to the requirements of the landlord, and this is confirmed by the fact that upon the landlord succeeding under this ground of opposition he is obliged to compensate the tenant for disturbance<sup>9</sup>. Decisions under analogous statutory provisions show that the landlord 'requires' the premises if he genuinely wants them, so that he does not have to show any hardship or necessity<sup>10</sup>, but the reasonableness of the landlord's proposals will be a relevant consideration<sup>11</sup>. This ground of opposition will not be available to a landlord who himself granted the relevant tenancy; thus it will be available only to a superior landlord who is able to serve notices as 'the landlord' for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>12</sup> even though he is not at the date of the giving of the notices the tenant's immediate landlord.

Statutory Grounds of Opposition/741. Intended demolition, reconstruction or substantial work of construction.

741. Intended demolition, reconstruction or substantial work of construction.

1 For these purposes, 'landlord' means the landlord having the legal title: Biles v Caesar [1957] 1 All ER 151, [1957] 1 WLR 156, CA. For the meaning of 'the landlord' generally in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) see PARA 715 ante. The intention to demolish or reconstruct may be established even where the landlord intends that the work of demolition and reconstruction is to be done by a building lessee: Gilmour Caterers Ltd v Governors of St Bartholomew's Hospital [1956] 1 QB 387, [1956] 1 All ER 314, CA. #### 742. Intention to demolish or reconstruct or to carry out substantial work of construction.

To be an effective ground of opposition<sup>1</sup> to the grant of a new tenancy the landlord's intention to demolish or reconstruct the premises or to carry out substantial work of construction<sup>2</sup> on the holding or part of the holding must be genuine, not colourable; it must be a firm and settled intention, not likely to be altered<sup>3</sup>. Usually it will be conclusive if the landlord gives an undertaking<sup>4</sup> to the court to carry out the work; but to have a fixed intention he must show that on the balance of probabilities he will be able to carry out his decision<sup>5</sup>, surmounting whatever obstacles are in his path<sup>6</sup> such as the need to raise finance or to obtain planning consent<sup>7</sup>. It is irrelevant that the landlord's object in carrying out the work could be achieved by smaller building operations; the test is whether he really intends to do the work<sup>8</sup>. The intention to demolish or reconstruct need not be his motive or his only or primary intention<sup>9</sup>, so that a landlord who intends to adapt the premises for occupation by himself for the purposes of his own business may still rely upon this ground of opposition, notwithstanding that he may be unable<sup>10</sup> to rely upon his intention to occupy the premises<sup>11</sup> as a ground of opposition<sup>12</sup>. A landlord can 'intend' to do the relevant work by granting a building agreement to another, who upon completion of the work will become the tenant<sup>13</sup>. The critical time when the intention must be shown to exist is the time of the hearing when it must be shown that the landlord is likely to be able to implement his decision to carry out the relevant work when the tenancy comes to an end<sup>14</sup>; the landlord's intention need not be shown to have existed previously<sup>15</sup>. Whether the necessary intention exists is a question of fact<sup>16</sup>. Where the landlord is a body corporate, the most convenient way for its intention to be evidenced is by a formal resolution embodying the intention; but this is not a necessity, and the intentions of a corporate landlord may be inferred from any relevant evidence<sup>17</sup>. Where the landlord is an individual, the court is entitled to rely upon his sworn evidence as to what he intends to do, even if there is nothing to corroborate what he says<sup>18</sup>.

Where a lease requires the tenant to remove all buildings and erections at its termination, the landlord cannot realistically be said to have an intention to demolish those buildings<sup>19</sup>.

Statutory Grounds of Opposition/743. What constitutes demolition or reconstruction or substantial construction; need for possession.

743. What constitutes demolition or reconstruction or substantial construction; need for possession.

The reconstruction which is contemplated in the statutory ground of opposition to the grant of a new tenancy<sup>1</sup> is work of rebuilding<sup>2</sup>, that is work involving a substantial interference with the premises<sup>3</sup>, although, where there is some such structural work, the totality of what is intended to be done may be considered in order to see whether the intended work is substantial<sup>4</sup>. Work which the landlord is anyway entitled to do under the terms of the tenancy falls to be disregarded in assessing whether the totality of the work intended by the landlord is 'substantial'<sup>5</sup>. An intention to demolish whatever buildings are on the site is an intention to demolish 'the premises comprised in the holding'<sup>6</sup>; but an intention to effect a change of identity without a physical reconstruction is not sufficient<sup>7</sup>. In order for any works to be sufficient, it must be shown that the landlord could not carry them out without obtaining legal (as opposed to actual or physical) possession of the premises, so that, where a lease contains terms which would permit the landlord to enter and do the work, and the premises will be substantially the same after the work has been completed, the court will order the renewal of the tenancy<sup>8</sup>. Furthermore, if the tenant agrees to the inclusion in the terms<sup>9</sup> of the new tenancy<sup>10</sup> of terms giving the landlord<sup>11</sup> access and other facilities for carrying out the work intended, and the landlord could reasonably carry out the work, given that access and those facilities, without obtaining possession of the holding and without interfering to a substantial extent<sup>12</sup> or for a substantial time<sup>13</sup> with the use<sup>14</sup> of the holding for the purposes of the business<sup>15</sup> carried on by the tenant, the court may not hold that the landlord could not reasonably carry out the demolition, reconstruction or work of construction intended without obtaining possession of the holding<sup>16</sup>.

13 Interference with the tenant's business after the completion of the work is not relevant: Price v Esso Petroleum Co Ltd [1980] 2 EGLR 58, (1980) 255 Estates Gazette 243, CA (landlord entitled under the terms of the lease to reconstruct the buildings demised). If, however, the landlord proposes by his building works so to change the holding as to make it impossible for the tenant to trade, the landlord will need possession to do such works: see Leathwoods Ltd v Total Oil Great Britain Ltd (1985) 51 P & CR 20, [1985] 2 EGLR 237, CA. See also Redfern v Reeves (1978) 37 P & CR 364, [1978] 2 EGLR 52, CA.

14 The court must look at the use of the premises from a physical, and not from a business, point of view; thus the fact that the tenant's goodwill would not be interfered with because her business could be carried on in temporary alternative accommodation was irrelevant in determining whether there would be a substantial interference with use: Redfern v Reeves (1978) 37 P & CR 364, [1978] 2 EGLR 52, CA.

Where the landlord<sup>1</sup> opposes an application for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or applies for an order terminating a tenancy without such a grant<sup>3</sup> on the ground that he intends to carry out demolition, reconstruction or construction work<sup>4</sup>, the court may not hold that he could not reasonably carry out the intended work without obtaining possession of the holding<sup>5</sup> if the tenant is willing to accept a tenancy of an economically separable part of the holding<sup>6</sup> and either:

1486 (2) possession of the remainder of the holding would be reasonably sufficient to enable the landlord to carry out the intended work<sup>13</sup>.

Where the court makes an order<sup>14</sup> for the grant of a tenancy in a case where the tenant is so willing to accept a tenancy of part of the holding, the order must be an order for the grant of a new tenancy of that part only<sup>15</sup>.

RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(C) Landlord's Opposition/b. Statutory Grounds of Opposition/745. Landlord's intention to occupy holding.

745. Landlord's intention to occupy holding.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> may oppose an application for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or may make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> on the ground that on the termination of the current tenancy<sup>4</sup> he intends<sup>5</sup> to occupy<sup>6</sup> the holding<sup>7</sup> for the purposes, or partly for the purposes, of a business<sup>8</sup> to be carried on by him therein, or as his residence<sup>9</sup>. The landlord must intend to occupy the same premises as existed during the occupation by the tenant; and, if the landlord's intention is to demolish those premises and to reconstruct new premises and occupy them, he should rely upon the appropriate ground of opposition<sup>10</sup>. He need not show that he intends to make physical use of the whole of the premises comprised in the holding<sup>11</sup>.

Where the landlord has a controlling interest<sup>12</sup> in a company, either he or that company is entitled to rely upon this ground of opposition<sup>13</sup>. Similarly, where the landlord is a company and a person has a controlling interest in the company, either the landlord or that person may rely upon this ground<sup>14</sup>, but this is subject to the five-year rule discussed below<sup>15</sup>. The landlord is also entitled to rely upon this ground if the business which is to be carried on is the business of a partnership of which he is a member<sup>16</sup>, or is the business of a beneficiary for whom he holds the reversion as trustee<sup>17</sup>.

1 Not every landlord can rely upon this ground: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(2) (as amended) (the 'five-year rule'); and PARA 746 post. For the meaning of 'the landlord' generally see PARA 715 ante; and for the extended meaning of references to the landlord for these purposes see the text and notes 12-15 infra. Where a freeholder accepts the surrender of the interest of a mesne tenant, if that interest would have been of less than 14 months' duration at the relevant date (so that the mesne tenant would not have been the landlord for the purposes of the 1954 Act), the landlord will not be prevented by the 'five-year rule' from relying upon s 30(1)(g), even if the transaction is a purchase: see Diploma Laundry Ltd v Surrey Timber Co Ltd [1955] 2 QB 604, [1955] 2 All ER 922, CA.

3 Ie under ibid s 29(2) (as substituted): see PARA 734 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'the current tenancy' see PARA 713 note 12 ante.

5 The same qualities of fixity of intention are required as under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(f) (see PARA 742 ante). Thus the landlord must show that he has a reasonable prospect of being able to occupy the premises, and of eg obtaining any planning consent which is necessary for his own proposed business use of the premises: Gregson v Cyril Lord Ltd [1962] 3 All ER 907, [1963] 1 WLR 41, CA. If a landlord has established that he intends to set up a business in the premises on the expiry of an existing business lease and that it is reasonably practical to do so, the court should not embark on a detailed inquiry into the likely success of the planned business: Dolgellau Golf Club v Hett (1998) 76 P & CR 526, [1998] 2 EGLR 75, CA. 6 The landlord need not occupy personally, so that it is sufficient that he intends to occupy the premises through his employees: see Hills (Patents) Ltd v University College Hospital Board of Governors [1956] 1 QB 90, [1955] 3 All ER 365, CA; Skeet v Powell-Shedden [1988] 2 EGLR 112, CA; Teesside Indoor Bowls Ltd v Stockton-on-Tees Borough Council [1990] 2 EGLR 87, CA. He will not, however, occupy premises for the purpose of a business merely because his spouse occupies them for her own business: Zafiris v Liu [2005] EWCA Civ 1698, (2005) Times, 3 March, [2005] All ER (D) 261 (Jan).

For the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(g) a landlord may require premises 'for the purposes of a business to be carried on by him therein' if the purpose for which he intends to use the premises is for visitors to his nearby business premises to park their cars there: Hunt v Decca Navigator Co Ltd (1972) 222 Estates Gazette 625.

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(g). The ground must be stated in the landlord's notice under s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 716 ante) or, as the case may be, s 26(6) (see PARA 718 ante): see s 30(1) (as amended); and PARA 734 ante. A landlord claiming to have the intention to occupy premises for the purpose of carrying on a business has to prove that he has a genuine intention to do so, and that he has a reasonable prospect of being able to bring that about by his own act of volition, but there is nothing in principle or practice which requires a judge to deal with those two limbs sequentially: Zarvos v Pradhan [2003] EWCA Civ 208, [2003] 2 P & CR 122, [2003] All ER (D) 92 (Mar), applying Gregson v Cyril Lord Ltd [1962] 3 All ER 907, [1963] 1 WLR 41, CA. See also Gatwick Parking Services Ltd v Sargent [2000] 2 EGLR 45, [2000] 25 EG 141, CA (landlord does not have to demonstrate on a balance of probabilities that planning permission will be granted; but he has to show that there is a real, not merely a fanciful, chance); and see the authorities cited in note 5 supra.

A licensor's request that the court determines whether a new tenancy can be opposed on this ground does not prevent him denying the existence of a tenancy: see Wroe (t/a Telepower) v Exmos Cover Ltd [2000] 1 EGLR 66, [2000] All ER (D) 143, CA.

17 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 41(2). Except in the case of a trust arising under a will or on the intestacy of any person, s 30(2) (as amended) (the 'five-year rule') (see PARA 746 post) is applied so that the creation of the relevant trust is treated as the creation of the landlord's interest: see s 41(2). Proposed occupation by a beneficiary under a trust, where the beneficiary has no right as against the trustees to occupy the premises, will not suffice, so that this ground of opposition will not be available to the landlords: see Frish Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 2 QB 541, [1955] 3 All ER 185, CA; Meyer v Riddick (1989) 60 P & CR 50, [1990] 1 EGLR 107, CA. A landlord who holds the premises on trust may oppose the application pursuant to this ground of opposition if either he himself or his beneficiary intends to occupy the premises for the purpose of a business to be carried on there by the landlord or the beneficiary respectively: Sevenarts Ltd v Busvine [1969] 1 All ER 392, [1968] 1 WLR 1929, CA. Statutory Grounds of Opposition/746. The 'five-year rule'.

746. The 'five-year rule'.

The landlord<sup>1</sup> is not entitled to oppose an application for a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> or make an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of new tenancy<sup>3</sup> on the ground of his intention to occupy the holding for business or residential purposes<sup>4</sup> if two conditions are satisfied<sup>5</sup>. The first condition is that the landlord's interest, or an interest which has merged in it and but for the merger would be the landlord's interest, was purchased or created after the beginning of the period of five years which ends with the termination of the current tenancy<sup>6</sup>. 'Purchased' has its popular meaning of 'bought for money'<sup>7</sup>, so that a landlord's acquisition of a mesne tenant's interest by a voluntary surrender on the part of the mesne tenant does not prevent the landlord from relying upon this ground of opposition<sup>8</sup>, although a landlord who is a co-owner of premises and who buys out the other co-owner will be caught by the rule<sup>9</sup>. The second condition is that at all times since the purchase or creation of the landlord's interest the holding<sup>10</sup> has been comprised in a tenancy or successive tenancies of the description to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>11</sup> applies<sup>12</sup>.

Further, where the landlord is a company and a person has a controlling interest<sup>13</sup> in that company, the extended meaning of 'landlord' which enables either the landlord or that person to rely on the ground of such intention to occupy the holding<sup>14</sup> does not apply if the controlling interest was acquired after the beginning of the period of five years which ends with the termination of the current tenancy<sup>15</sup>, and at all times since the acquisition of the controlling interest the holding has been comprised in a tenancy or successive tenancies of the specified<sup>16</sup> description<sup>17</sup>.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(2) (as amended: see note 5 supra). 11 I.e. tenancies of the description specified in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 23(1): see PARA 706 ante.

12 Ibid s 30(2) (as amended: see note 5 supra). It should be noted that a tenancy in respect of which the parties have contracted out of certain provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 pursuant to the provisions of s 38A (as added) (see PARAS 711-712 ante) or under s 38(4) (repealed) (see PARA 710 ante) will still be a tenancy which is within the description of tenancies to which the Act applies, that is to say within the definition contained in s 23(1). Section 30(2) (as amended) refers to the landlord's interest from the time when it originally arose: Artemiou v Procopiou [1966] 1 QB 878, [1965] 3 All ER 539, CA (landlord's interest had already been created when he was granted a fresh lease); applied in VCS Car Park Management Ltd v Regional

Railways North East Ltd [2001] Ch 121, [2000] 1 All ER 403, CA. The landlord's interest is created on the date of execution of the lease and not on the date of the commencement of the term: Northcote Laundry Ltd v Frederick Donnelly Ltd [1968] 2 All ER 50, [1968] 1 WLR 562, CA. See also Cornish v Brook Green Laundry Ltd [1959] 1 QB 394, [1959] 1 All ER 373, CA. It follows that, provided that the landlord's own interest predates that of the tenant, and that there was an interval of time (however short) between the creation of the landlord's interest and the commencement of the tenant's interest during which no business tenancy of the tenant subsisted (as opposed to any superior business tenancy held by the landlord), this second condition will not be satisfied notwithstanding that the landlord had purchased his interest or that that interest had been created less than five years before the relevant date: see Northcote Laundry Ltd v Frederick Donnelly Ltd supra. The phrase 'tenancy or successive tenancies' in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(2) (as amended) refers to interests of the tenant: Artemiou v Procopiou supra.

(D) REFUSAL OF NEW TENANCY

747. Refusal of new tenancy.

If the landlord<sup>1</sup> opposes an application for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> on the grounds on which he is entitled to oppose it<sup>3</sup>, and establishes any of those grounds to the court's satisfaction, the court must not make an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>4</sup>.

Where the landlord opposes such an application, or makes an application for the termination of a tenancy without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>5</sup>, on one or more of the grounds of:

- 1487 (1) opposition relating to alternative accommodation<sup>6</sup>;
- 1488 (2) reletting formerly sublet premises as a whole<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1489 (3) his intention to demolish or reconstruct the premises<sup>8</sup>, but establishes none of those grounds, and none of the other statutory grounds of opposition<sup>9</sup>, to the satisfaction of the court, then if the court would have been satisfied on any of the grounds specified in heads (1) to (3) above if the date of termination specified in the landlord's notice, or the date<sup>10</sup> specified in the tenant's request for a new tenancy, had been such later date as the court may determine, but being a date not more than one year later than the date so specified, the court must make a declaration to that effect<sup>11</sup>, but must not make an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>12</sup>. If within 14 days after the making of the declaration the tenant so requires, the court must make an order substituting the date it has determined for the date in the landlord's notice or the tenant's request, and the notice or request then has effect accordingly<sup>13</sup>.

If the court is precluded from making an order for the grant of a new tenancy by reason of the grounds of opposition specified in head (2) or head (3) above, or by reason of the landlord's intention to occupy the premises<sup>14</sup>, the court must certify that fact on the application of the tenant<sup>15</sup>. In such a case the tenant is entitled to compensation on quitting the holding<sup>16</sup>. Where the court makes an order for the termination of the current tenancy without making an order for the grant of a new tenancy, or where it refuses an order for the grant of a new tenancy, and the order was obtained or the court was induced to refuse the grant by misrepresentation or the concealment of material facts, the court may order the landlord to pay compensation to the tenant<sup>17</sup>.

(E) TERMS OF NEW TENANCY

748. Determination of terms.

In the absence of agreement<sup>1</sup> as to the terms of a new tenancy the court must determine them<sup>2</sup>. There is authority to the effect that the court must hear evidence as to whether the terms are reasonable, even if the landlord has defaulted under the procedural rules<sup>3</sup>.

1 For the meaning of references to an agreement between the landlord and the tenant see PARA 709 note 2 ante; and for the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante. Such an agreement must not be 'subject to contract' or 'without prejudice', so that, even where a lease has been engrossed (but not executed) on that basis, the tenants may still fall back on their statutory rights: see Derby & Co Ltd v ITC Pension Trust Ltd [1977] 2 All ER 890.

Property comprised in new tenancy.

749. Property comprised in new tenancy.

In general<sup>1</sup> an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> is an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>3</sup> of the holding<sup>4</sup> and, in the absence of agreement<sup>5</sup> between the landlord and the tenant as to the property which constitutes the holding, the court must in the order designate that property by reference to the circumstances existing at the date of the order<sup>6</sup>.

In three instances, however, the new demise may differ from the old:

- 1490 (1) the above provision<sup>7</sup> does not apply in a case where the property comprised in the current tenancy<sup>8</sup> includes other property besides the holding and the landlord requires any new tenancy ordered to be granted<sup>9</sup> to be a tenancy of the whole of the property comprised in the current tenancy<sup>10</sup>; in any such case any order<sup>11</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy must be an order for the grant of a new tenancy of the whole of the property comprised in the current tenancy<sup>12</sup>;
- 1491 (2) where the current tenancy includes rights<sup>13</sup> enjoyed by the tenant<sup>14</sup> in connection with the holding, those rights must be included in a tenancy ordered to be granted<sup>15</sup> except as otherwise agreed between the landlord and the tenant or, in default of such agreement, determined by the court<sup>16</sup>;
- 1492 (3) the court may order the grant of a new tenancy of part only of the holding where the landlord has opposed the renewal of the tenancy on the ground that he intends to demolish or reconstruct the holding<sup>17</sup> but is able to do so with possession of the other part only of the holding, the tenant is willing to accept such a new tenancy and the new holding will be an economically separable part<sup>18</sup>.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/E. RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(E) Terms of New Tenancy/750. Length of term.

750. Length of term.

Where on an application<sup>1</sup> the court makes an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup>, the new tenancy is such tenancy as may be agreed<sup>3</sup> between the landlord and the tenant or, in default of such an agreement, is such a tenancy as may be determined by the court to be reasonable<sup>4</sup> in all the circumstances<sup>5</sup>. These circumstances will include the length of the previous tenancy or tenancies<sup>6</sup> or an intention by the landlord to redevelop the premises in the future<sup>7</sup> balanced, where appropriate, against the expenditure by the tenant upon improvements to the premises<sup>8</sup>. They may also include an intention by the landlord to occupy the premises so soon as he is no longer prevented from relying on that ground of opposition by the 'five-year rule'<sup>9</sup>.

The court may insert an option for the landlord to determine the term in appropriate cases<sup>10</sup>, notably where such a clause was included in the current tenancy agreement<sup>11</sup>.

Where the length of the term is determined by the court, the new tenancy, if for a term of years certain, must not exceed 15 years<sup>12</sup>. The new tenancy begins on the coming to an end of the current tenancy<sup>13</sup>, but because the coming to an end of the current tenancy may be deferred unpredictably by the interim continuation<sup>14</sup> of the tenancy, the court should direct in its order for a new lease that the term of the new lease is to be a term ending on a specified date<sup>15</sup>. The duration of the new tenancy which is ordered will reflect the fact that the new tenancy will itself be one which is protected<sup>16</sup> by statute<sup>17</sup>. Where the tenant applies for an unreasonably short tenancy, the court may order that the new tenancy is to be longer than that which the tenant desires in order to enable the landlord to relet the premises without an interval<sup>18</sup>, but ordinarily the court will not impose any longer term upon the tenant than the tenant requests<sup>19</sup>.

Having regard to the provisions of (inter alia) s 27 (as originally enacted), Danckwerts J ordered the grant of a new lease to expire on 25 December 1959. A tenant who is dissatisfied with the duration of the new term may always apply to the court under s 36(2) for revocation of the order, and in that situation only the court may substitute a new termination date in the notice or request which brought the tenancy to an end, expressly 'to afford the landlord a reasonable opportunity for reletting or otherwise disposing of the premises': see PARA 757 post.

Commencement of new tenancy.

751. Commencement of new tenancy.

The new tenancy commences on the coming to an end of the current tenancy<sup>1</sup>. It follows that, because the current tenancy may be prolonged by the subsequent history of the application<sup>2</sup>, at the trial the exact commencement date cannot be known, unless the parties specifically agree a date<sup>3</sup>. If they do so agree, that date can be earlier than would otherwise be the result of the interim continuation of the current tenancy. Because of this uncertainty as to commencement and the fact that, if the new tenancy is a short one, its effect may be significantly altered by an appeal, courts should delimit the term of the new tenancy by specifying its expiration, rather than merely designating a period<sup>4</sup>.

2 le because of interim continuation by ibid s 64 (as amended): see PARA 729 ante.

3 The grant and taking up of the new lease will effect a surrender of the current tenancy despite the fact that ibid s 33 (as amended) does not make the commencement of the new tenancy subject to agreement between the parties: see PARA 750 ante.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/E. RENEWAL OF TENANCIES/(E) Terms of New Tenancy/752. Other terms excluding rent.

752. Other terms excluding rent.

The terms of a tenancy<sup>1</sup> granted by order of the court<sup>2</sup>, other than terms as to the duration of it and as to the rent payable under it<sup>3</sup>, but including, where different persons own interests which fulfil the specified conditions<sup>4</sup> in different parts of it, terms as to the apportionment of the rent, are such as may be agreed<sup>5</sup> between the landlord and the tenant or as, in default of such agreement, may be determined by the court<sup>6</sup>. In determining those terms the court must have regard to the terms of the current tenancy and to all relevant circumstances<sup>7</sup>; and this reference to all relevant circumstances includes, without prejudice to its generality, a reference to the operation of the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>8</sup>. Where a tenancy is being renewed, the burden of showing that it is reasonable to renew it on terms different from those of the current tenancy lies upon the party who is urging the change<sup>9</sup>.

If a cogent reason is shown for making a change from the terms of the old lease, then, where relevant, it falls to be considered whether, if the party making the change is successful, the party resisting the suggested change will be adequately compensated by any consequential adjustment in the open market rent, although such a rental adjustment will not justify the transfer of a major risk appropriate to the ownership of the property to the tenant<sup>10</sup>. If the landlord seeks to introduce new terms into the new lease, it becomes necessary to consider whether those terms would materially impair the tenant's security in carrying on his business; in all cases any change from the terms of the current tenancy must be fair and reasonable as between the landlord and the tenant<sup>11</sup>. Provisions for the payment of service charges to vary in accordance with the amount of the landlord's expenditure on the provision of the services will ordinarily be inserted in the new lease by the court, even if the old lease contained no provision for the payment of a service charge<sup>12</sup>, although a distinction is to be drawn between a service charge which includes a contribution towards the cost of structural repairs and one which does not<sup>13</sup>. The court will not enlarge the holding<sup>14</sup> or otherwise confer upon the tenant under the new lease a right which the tenant did not enjoy under the current tenancy<sup>15</sup>, but may impose a term that sureties join in the new lease<sup>16</sup>. The court will not order the tenant to pay the landlord's conveyancing costs<sup>17</sup>.

3 As to those terms see PARA 750 ante, PARAS 753-755 post. The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 35 (as amended) confers the widest possible discretion (Re No 1 Albemarle Street [1959] Ch 531, [1959] 1 All ER 250), but does not enable the court to enlarge the holding (G Orlik (Meat Products) Ltd v Hastings and Thanet Building Society (1974) 29 P & CR 126, CA). The fact that the tenant has contracted to sell his interest, and so is applying as trustee for his purchaser, is relevant: see Lyons v Central Commercial Properties Ltd [1958] 2 All ER 767, [1958] 1 WLR 869, CA. See also Bullen v Goodland (1961) 105 Sol Jo 231, CA. The right to continue the existing business will not be cut down without strong reasons: Gold v Brighton Corpn [1956] 3 All ER 442, [1956] 1 WLR 1291, CA. It seems, however, that user will normally be confined to the existing business, even if there was no such restriction in the current tenancy: Gold v Brighton Corpn supra. 'All relevant circumstances' includes the provisions of a local Act of Parliament (R v Huddersfield County Court Judge, ex p Beaumont Ashton Ltd (1967) 19 P & CR 62, DC) and may, on an appeal, include circumstances arising after the trial date, where evidence of those circumstances is before the court (Davy's of London (Wine Merchants) Ltd v City of London Corpn [2004] EWHC 2224 (Ch), [2004] 49 EG 136, [2004] All ER (D) 63 (Oct)). 8 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 35(2) (added by the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 Sch 1 para 4(2)). As to the operation of that 1995 Act see PARA 578 et seq ante. The provisions of the new lease may not entitle the landlord to require, in all cases, an authorised guarantee agreement under s 16 (see PARA 593 ante) as a condition of consent for an assignment, but may only do so where such a requirement is reasonable: Wallis Fashion Group Ltd v CGU Life Assurance Ltd (2000) 81 P & CR 393, [2000] 2 EGLR 49. In practice, however, an authorised guarantee agreement is almost invariably required on assignment.

A new term restricting the use of the premises to a narrower use than previously permitted will not be introduced at the tenant's behest where to do so would depress the rental value of the premises (Aldwych Club Ltd v Cophall Property Co Ltd (1962) 185 Estates Gazette 219); but it would seem that the user clause will not be widened at the landlord's behest so as to increase the rental value, where the tenant does not need any such modification (see Charles Clements (London) Ltd v Rank City Wall Ltd [1978] 1 EGLR 47, (1978) 246 Estates Gazette 739). 10 O'May v City of London Real Property Co Ltd [1983] 2 AC 726, [1982] 1 All ER 660, HL (where no cogent reason existed for making a change in the terms of the letting such as would have transferred to the occupying tenants under a short lease of a small part of a large office building the risk of structural deterioration in that building, thus creating a clear lease for the reversioner). This factor will not always be of significance, as some changes of circumstance may make the old terms so inapposite to the new tenancy that it is difficult or impossible to see what the required adjustment to the rent would be, eg where a full repairing lease of a large building is to be replaced by a new lease of a small portion only of one floor; and it may be that a tenant's covenant for internal and decorative repairs only plus the imposition of an obligation to contribute to the cost of structural and external repairs would more appropriately carry forward into the new lease the burden of the cost of repairs carried by the tenant under the old lease than to repeat in the same terms the old repairing covenant in the new lease.

It seems that the court has no power to order the inclusion of such an option in any event (or should not do so), as the effect would be to put a new saleable asset into the tenant's hands rather than to protect his goodwill.

16 Cairnplace Ltd v CBL (Property Investment) Co Ltd [1984] 1 All ER 315, [1984] 1 WLR 696, CA. Rent; general provisions.

753. Rent; general provisions.

The rent payable under a tenancy<sup>1</sup> granted by order of the court<sup>2</sup> is such as may be agreed<sup>3</sup> between the landlord and the tenant or as, in default of such agreement, may be determined by the court to be that at which the holding<sup>4</sup> might reasonably<sup>5</sup> be expected to be let in the open market by a willing lessor having regard to the terms of the tenancy, other than those relating to rent<sup>6</sup>, so that the amount of the new rent should not be determined until the other terms of the new tenancy have been determined<sup>7</sup>. To ascertain what rent might reasonably be expected for this purpose, the court must take into account all the circumstances relating to the transaction<sup>8</sup>, including any local or other legal provisions which apply to the premises<sup>9</sup>, and including any effect on rent of the operation of the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

2 ie under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq ante, PARA 754 et seq post.

3 For the meaning of references to an agreement between the landlord and the tenant see PARA 709 note 2 ante; and for the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'the holding' see PARA 706 note 23 ante.

5 The court must take notice of and assess the rental value of the premises by reference to the other terms of the new tenancy: see O'May v City of London Real Property Co Ltd [1983] 2 AC 726 at 740, [1982] 1 All ER 660 at 665, HL, per Lord Hailsham of St Marylebone LC. There is no jurisdiction for the court to determine the rent in an amount less than the court's assessment of the market rent because of the inability of the tenant to pay such market rent: Giannoukakis v Saltfleet Ltd [1988] 1 EGLR 73, CA.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1) (numbered as such, and amended, by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 1(1)). The date at which the property falls to be valued (the 'valuation date') will be the date of the hearing, but the valuation has to have regard to matters which can reasonably be expected to happen between that date and the date at which the new tenancy will commence: see PARA 729 note 7 ante (effect of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 64 (as amended)). See also Lovely and Orchard Services Ltd v Daejan Investments (Grove Hall) Ltd [1978] 1 EGLR 44, (1977) 121 Sol Jo 711. The court therefore has to value a lease commencing on a future date, but at such rent for that lease as would be agreed on the hearing date. Cf Rose v Hurst [1949] 2 KB 372, [1949] 2 All ER 24, CA (decided under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 5 (repealed)), where it was held that, although premises might be protected by the Rent Restrictions Acts, the court could fix a rent higher than that recoverable under those Acts. As to the proper approach to be taken in fixing a rent see PARA 754 post; and see eg Rombus Materials Ltd v WT Lamb Properties Ltd [1999] All ER (D) 161, CA (trial judge in error in ignoring expert evidence).

Determination of rent; in general.

754. Determination of rent; in general.

The court must determine the amount of the new rent in the light of the evidence, which ordinarily will be the opinion of experienced valuers<sup>1</sup> who will usually form their opinion by reliance upon other comparable transactions, adjusting for the distinctions to be made between the different properties<sup>2</sup>. Where the premises are unusual or unique, so that evidence of comparable transactions is unavailable or hard to come by, the circumstances and profitability of the tenant's undertaking will be relevant, and disclosure of the tenant's business accounts may therefore be ordered although ordinarily only those accounts and documents which a purchaser in the hypothetical market would be likely to be able to obtain<sup>3</sup>. Disclosure will not, however, be ordered for the purpose of seeing what rent the tenant can afford to pay, as this is a subjective factor irrelevant to the determination of the market value<sup>4</sup>.

Rating assessments are of little significance in relation to the valuation of the rent under any new lease, since rating assessments are made upon assumptions<sup>5</sup> which invariably differ from the actual contractual terms of the tenancy, and also will have been made by reference to values existing at an earlier date than the valuation date for the statutory purposes<sup>6</sup> which is the date upon which the new lease is to commence<sup>7</sup>. As their evidence must be given at the hearing but the tenancy is continued<sup>8</sup> until a subsequent date, the valuers must testify at the hearing as to their opinion of the rental value of the premises upon a letting to commence over three months later<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to expert evidence generally see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 835 et seq. See also the general observations on the duties and responsibilities of expert witnesses made by Cresswell J in National Justice Cia Naviera SA v Prudential Assurance Co Ltd (the Ikarian Reefer) [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep 68, [1993] 2 EGLR 183 (revsd on other grounds [1995] 1 Lloyd's Rep 455, CA); but as to the caution to be exercised in the use of pre-CPR authorities see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 33. As to the proper approach to be taken in fixing a rent see eg Rombus Materials Ltd v WT Lamb Properties Ltd [1999] All ER (D) 161, CA (trial judge in error in ignoring expert evidence).

2 If the comparable transactions involve properties in respect of which a wider, and therefore a more valuable, use is permitted to a tenant than will be allowed under the new lease, such an adjustment may be by reduction: UDS Tailoring Ltd v BL Holdings Ltd [1982] 1 EGLR 61, (1981) 261 Estates Gazette 49. If there are no comparables available, the valuation may have to be made by reference to general trends: see National Car Parks v Colbrook Estates Ltd [1983] 1 EGLR 78, (1982) 266 Estates Gazette 810.

Where the premises are such that the rent is customarily calculated on a 'grouped basis', the court may so order: see Naylor v Uttoxeter UDC (1974) 231 Estates Gazette 619 (rent of cattle market let to auctioneers). Cf John Kay Ltd v Kay [1952] 2 QB 258 at 266-267, [1952] 1 All ER 813 at 816-817, CA, per Evershed MR (where it was held that the rent to be paid under the new tenancy is rent arrived at by applying the subjective test of what the judge thinks is right and fair, as distinct from eg the objective test of what the evidence shows is the rent of the premises obtainable in the open market, and that, when all the evidence has been given and attention has been directed to the right considerations, the exact quantification must be arrived at in the same way as eg that in which a jury fixes a figure when it comes to assess damages). This was a decision under the Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951 s 12(1) (repealed). All that is said as to the determination of a new rent applies also mutatis mutandis to the determination of an interim rent (see PARA 730 ante). For an example of how both rent and interim rent are determined by the court see English Exporters (London) Ltd v Eldonwall Ltd supra.

5 As to rating assumptions see RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1B) (Reissue) PARA 286 et seq. In theory an up-to-date rating assessment could correspond to market value, if market value falls to be determined under a periodic tenancy upon the terms to be assumed for rating purposes: see Chambers Wharf & Cold Stores Ltd v Denny (1956) 168 Estates Gazette 120 (county court); Jefferys v Hutton Investment Ltd (1956) 168 Estates Gazette 203 (county court).

9 The precise date is unpredictable, since at the date of the trial it will not be known whether the tenant will appeal or not. In practical terms, the valuer has to be asked to value at the trial but by reference to a date four and a half months later.

Rent; general disregards and special valuation provisions.

755. Rent; general disregards and special valuation provisions.

In assessing the new rent the court must disregard<sup>1</sup>:

- 1493 (1) any effect on rent of the fact that the tenant or his predecessors in title have been in occupation of the holding<sup>2</sup>;
- 1494 (2) any goodwill attached to the holding as a result of the business carried on there by the tenant or by a predecessor of his in that business<sup>3</sup>;
- 1495 (3) any effect on rent of any improvement<sup>4</sup> carried out by a person who at the time it was carried out was the tenant<sup>5</sup> but only if it was carried out otherwise than in pursuance of an obligation to his immediate landlord<sup>6</sup>, and either it was carried out during the current tenancy<sup>7</sup> or the following conditions are satisfied, that is to say:
- 139 173. (a) that it was completed not more than 21 years before the application to the court was made<sup>8</sup>; and
174. (b) that the holding or any part of it affected by the improvement has at all times since the completion of the improvement been comprised in business tenancies of the specified<sup>9</sup> description<sup>10</sup>; and
175. (c) that at the termination of each of those tenancies the tenant did not quit<sup>11</sup>.
- 140

Where the rent is determined by the court, then, if it thinks fit, the court may further determine that the terms of the tenancy are to include such provision for varying the rent as may be specified in the determination<sup>12</sup>.

In proceedings for an order for a new lease an appeal lies<sup>13</sup> from a county court to a senior court<sup>14</sup> which, in the absence of any findings that the trial judge based upon the demeanour or reliability of the experts' evidence, will broadly speaking be in as good a position as the trial judge to assess the merits of the expert valuation evidence and to make findings on it accordingly<sup>15</sup>.

1 There is no part of the new rent must be attributable to these factors. As to the special provisions relating to the rent of licensed premises see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1)(d) (as amended); and PARA 776 post. Section 34 (as amended) contains all the guidance needed for determining a rent on the hypothesis of an open market value, and only permits those specific matters laid out within it to be disregarded: see J Murphy & Sons Ltd v Railtrack plc (in railway administration) [2002] EWCA Civ 679, [2003] 1 P & CR 91, [2002] All ER (D) 288 (Apr), CA (the fact that the property in question was landlocked was not to be disregarded).

2 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1)(a) (s 34(1) numbered as such, s 34(1)(c) (see head (3) in the text) substituted and s 34(2) added, by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 1(1)). For the meaning of 'the holding' see PARA 706 note 23 ante.

3 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1)(b) (as amended: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 ante.

4 As to the distinction between improvements and the installation of tenant's fixtures and fittings see New Zealand Government Property Corp v HM & S Ltd [1982] QB 1145, [1982] 1 All ER 624, CA. The 21-year period (see head (3)(a) in the text) is irrelevant to tenant's fixtures and fittings which always fall to be disregarded in the valuation.

5 The work must have been done at a time when the person who carried it out had at least an equitable right to call for a lease: Euston Centre Properties Ltd v H & J Wilson Ltd [1982] 1 EGLR 57, (1981) 262 Estates Gazette 1079. The tenant need not have physically carried out the work but may not satisfy the statutory requirements in a case where a third party has carried them out unless he can establish some involvement in identifying, supervising and/or financing the works, resulting in the specific improvements concerned: see Durley House Ltd v Cadogan [2000] 1 WLR 246, [1999] All ER (D) 1126.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1)(c), (2) (as respectively substituted and added: see note 2 supra). The statutory provisions give no guidance on how one 'disregards' the effect on rent of any relevant improvements; but it would seem that it is wrong to seek to apply the 'disregard' by valuing the premises as if the improvements did not exist, as that would reduce from the full rent ('entirety value') of the premises complete with improvements both (1) an allowance for the cost of notionally repeating the installation of the improvements; and (2) an allowance for wasted rent for the time that the premises could not be used whilst notionally the work was being done. It would seem that the second element in the reduction from full value (that is to say the reduction for notionally wasted rent) should not be subtracted from the full value. See the decisions of Forbes J (both decided on the construction of rent review clauses which employed phraseology indistinguishable, other than by context, from the statutory provisions) in GREA Real Property Investments Ltd v Williams [1979] 1 EGLR 121, (1979) 250 Estates Gazette 651 and Estates Projects Ltd v Greenwich London Borough [1979] 2 EGLR 85, (1979) 251 Estates Gazette 851. Prior to the amendments made to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34 by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 1 (which became effective on 1 January 1970) improvements carried out by the tenant under a tenancy earlier than the current tenancy were not disregarded: East Coast Amusement Co Ltd v British Transport Board [1965] AC 58, [1963] 2 All ER 775, HL.

15 French v Commercial Union Life Assurance Co plc [1993] 1 EGLR 113, CA. Previously (and prior to the extension of the right to appeal on issues of fact) it had been held that the Court of Appeal would not entertain an appeal on the pure question of quantum or on the ground that the judge's order was against the weight of the evidence (Aviagents Ltd v Balstravest Investments Ltd [1966] 1 All ER 450, [1966] 1 WLR 150, CA) and that an appellant was not entitled to complain of the weight which the judge, in fixing the rent, had attached to individual items of evidence but had to show that the judge misdirected himself, as by giving weight to matters which were wholly inadmissible (Harewood Hotels Ltd v Harris [1958] 1 All ER 104, [1958] 1 WLR 108, CA). See also Turone v Howard de Walden Estates Ltd (1983) 267 Estates Gazette 440, CA.

The Court of Appeal will not put the parties to the delay and expense of a new trial on the rent payable, unless the figure estimated by the judge who has seen the property and seen and heard the expert evidence is so obviously wrong that some substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned: Halberstam v Tandalco Corpn NV [1985] 1 EGLR 90, (1984) 274 Estates Gazette 393, CA. Where, however, the applicant was unable through illness and absence of legal representation effectively to challenge the respondent's expert evidence as to the rent payable under the new lease ordered to be granted, a rehearing was directed on terms as to costs and payment into court: Miah v Bromley Park Garden Estates Ltd [1992] 1 EGLR 98, CA. In Khalique v Law Land plc [1989] 1 EGLR 105, CA, the Court of Appeal declined to give leave to appeal out of time and to adduce evidence of new lettings made shortly after the trial judge's decision as to the rent to be paid under a new lease, since such evidence bore upon matters falling within the field of uncertainty in which the judge's estimate had previously been made. Where, owing to a mistake induced by the tenant, the landlord's surveyor had failed to take a garage into account in assessing the value of the premises for the purposes of the rent under a new lease, the Court of Appeal upheld the judge's decision to order a new trial: Skrzypkowski v Silvan Investments Ltd [1963] 1 All ER 886, [1963] 1 WLR 525, CA. Where the judge had expressed the view that it would be wrong to split the difference between the tenant's and the landlord's estimate of the proper rent and, in the absence of other evidence, decided to accept the tenant's figure, the Court of Appeal declined to say that the judge had fallen into the error of thinking that he was bound to accept one figure or the other and that no other figure was open to him: Leizer v Ostim Properties Ltd (1965) 109 Sol Jo 456, CA.

Where the court makes an order<sup>1</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup>, then, unless the order is revoked<sup>3</sup> or the landlord<sup>4</sup> and the tenant agree<sup>5</sup> not to act upon the order, the landlord is bound to execute or make in favour of the tenant, and the tenant is bound to accept, a lease or agreement<sup>6</sup> for a tenancy of the holding<sup>7</sup> embodying the terms<sup>8</sup> agreed between the landlord and the tenant or determined<sup>9</sup> by the court<sup>10</sup>. Where the landlord executes or makes such a lease or agreement, the tenant is bound to execute a counterpart or duplicate if required to do so by the landlord<sup>11</sup>.

757. Revocation; continuance of current tenancy.

If, within 14 days after the making of an order<sup>1</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup>, the tenant applies to the court for the revocation of the order, the court must revoke it<sup>3</sup>. Where the order is so revoked, then, if it is so agreed<sup>4</sup> between the landlord and the tenant or determined by the court, the current tenancy continues beyond the date at which it would otherwise have come to an end; and the continuance is for such a period as may be so agreed or determined to be necessary to afford to the landlord a reasonable opportunity for reletting or otherwise disposing of the premises which would have been comprised in the new tenancy<sup>5</sup>. Where an order is so revoked, any provision of the order as to payment of costs does not cease to have effect by reason only of the revocation<sup>6</sup>. The court may, however, if it thinks fit, revoke or vary any such provision, or, where no costs have been awarded in the proceedings for the revoked order, award such costs<sup>7</sup>.

F. COMPENSATION FOR DISTURBANCE

758. Compensation cases.

In a case specified in head (1), head (2) or head (3) below (a 'compensation case') the tenant is entitled on quitting the holding<sup>1</sup> to recover from the landlord<sup>2</sup> by way of compensation an amount determined<sup>3</sup> in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions<sup>4</sup>. The compensation cases are as follows:

- 1496 (1) the first compensation case is where on the making of an application by the tenant for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>5</sup> the court is precluded<sup>6</sup> from making an order for the grant of a new tenancy by reason of any of the following grounds (the 'compensation grounds'):

141

- 176. (a) reletting formerly sublet premises as a whole<sup>7</sup>; or
- 177. (b) the landlord's intention to demolish or reconstruct the premises<sup>8</sup>; or
- 178. (c) the landlord's intention to occupy the premises<sup>9</sup>,

1497 and not of any other statutory grounds<sup>10</sup> of opposition<sup>11</sup>;

1498 (2) the second compensation case is where on the making of an application by the landlord for an order for the termination of a business tenancy without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>12</sup> the court is precluded<sup>13</sup> from making an order for the grant of a new tenancy by reason of any of the compensation grounds and not of any other statutory grounds<sup>14</sup> of opposition<sup>15</sup>;

1499 (3) the third compensation case is where:

- 179. (a) the landlord's notice of termination<sup>16</sup> or, as the case may be, his notice in reply to the tenant's request for a new tenancy<sup>17</sup>, states his opposition to the grant of a new tenancy on any of the compensation grounds and not on any other statutory grounds<sup>18</sup> of opposition; and
- 180. (b) either no application is made by the tenant for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>19</sup> or by the landlord for an order for the termination of a business tenancy without the grant of a new tenancy<sup>20</sup> or such an application is made but is subsequently withdrawn<sup>21</sup>.

There is no statutory provision<sup>22</sup> for compensation to be paid to a tenant in whose favour an order for a new lease of part only of his holding is made<sup>23</sup> in respect of that part of the former holding which is excluded from the new tenancy. Landlords and tenants cannot contract out of these provisions as to compensation in respect of business tenancies where the occupation of the tenant, or of a person who is the successor to the tenant's business, exceeds five years<sup>24</sup>. Special but analogous provisions apply in respect of tenancies which were current on 1 October 1954<sup>25</sup>, and in respect of compulsory purchase<sup>26</sup> and where the tenant is precluded from obtaining a new tenancy on the grounds of public interest<sup>27</sup>.

The statutory provisions are modified in relation to tenancies subject to a compulsory rights order in connection with opencast coal mining<sup>28</sup>.

Where a business subtenancy terminates in accordance with the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993<sup>29</sup>, the subtenant is entitled to a share of the compensation payable to the tenant under that Act<sup>30</sup>.

1 'On quitting' means that the right to compensation does not arise until the tenant has actually removed, so that the law applying at that date has to be applied to ascertain the amount of the compensation: International Military Services Ltd v Capital and Counties plc [1982] 2 All ER 20, [1982] 1 WLR 575; Cardshops Ltd v John Lewis Properties Ltd [1983] QB 161, [1982] 3 All ER 746, CA. Before the coming into effect on 1 January 1970 of the amendments made by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 11, it was necessary in order for the tenant to obtain compensation that he should have applied for a new tenancy and that the court should have dismissed the application upon one of the relevant grounds (ie those set out in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(e)-(g)). As the alterations effected by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 11 were not retrospective, a tenant who had lost his right to compensation by not applying before 1 January 1970 did not become entitled to compensation upon the coming into force of s 11: Re 14 Grafton Street, W1, De Havilland (Antiques) Ltd v Centrovincial Estates (Mayfair) Ltd [1971] Ch 935, [1971] 2 All ER 1.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/F. COMPENSATION FOR DISTURBANCE/759. Amount of compensation where no domestic property included.

759. Amount of compensation where no domestic property included.

Where compensation is recoverable by the tenant in a compensation case<sup>1</sup> and the tenancy does not include any domestic property<sup>2</sup>, the amount is normally the product of the appropriate multiplier<sup>3</sup> and the rateable value<sup>4</sup> of the holding<sup>5</sup>. The amount of compensation is, however, the product of the appropriate multiplier and twice the rateable value where the following conditions are satisfied in relation to the whole of the holding:

1500 (1) during the whole<sup>6</sup> of the 14 years immediately preceding the date for termination of the current tenancy<sup>7</sup> specified in the landlord's notice<sup>8</sup> or, as the case may be, the date specified in the tenant's request for a new tenancy as the date from which the new tenancy is to begin, premises being or comprised in the holding<sup>9</sup> have been occupied for the purpose of a business<sup>10</sup> carried on by the occupier or for those and other purposes<sup>11</sup>; and

1501 (2) if during those 14 years there was a change in the occupier of the premises, the person who was the occupier immediately after the change was the successor to the business carried on by the person who was the occupier immediately before the change<sup>12</sup>.

If the conditions specified in heads (1) and (2) above are satisfied in relation to part of the holding but not in relation to the other part, the amount of compensation is to be the aggregate of sums calculated separately as compensation in respect of each part<sup>13</sup>.

Where different persons collectively satisfy the statutory definition of 'the landlord'<sup>14</sup>, the compensation is to be determined separately for each part and compensation determined for any part is to be recoverable only from the person who is the owner of an interest in that part which fulfils the specified<sup>15</sup> statutory conditions<sup>16</sup>.

Any dispute arising, whether in proceedings before the court or otherwise, as to the determination for these purposes of the rateable value of the holding is to be referred to the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs<sup>17</sup> for decision by a valuation officer<sup>18</sup> whose decision, subject to a right of appeal to the Lands Tribunal<sup>19</sup>, is final<sup>20</sup>.

1 le under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37 (as amended) (see PARA 758 ante) and subject to s 37(3)-(9) (as amended) (see the text and notes 2-20 infra; and PARA 760 post).

2 As to compensation when domestic property is included see PARA 760 post.

3 For these purposes, 'the appropriate multiplier' means such multiplier as the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister may prescribe by order made by statutory instrument which is subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament; and different multipliers may be so prescribed in relation to different cases: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(8), (9) (added by the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 Sch 33 para 4(2); amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 149(6), Sch 7 para 2(1), (4)). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante; and as to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante. In exercise of the power so conferred, and prior to that transfer of functions, the Secretary of State made the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 (Appropriate Multiplier) Order 1990, SI 1990/363, which came into force on 1 April 1990: art 1. Where the date which, apart from the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 149(6), Sch 7 para 4 (special basis for compensation where tenancy concerned was entered into before 1 April 1990 or was entered into on or after that date in pursuance of a contract made before that date, and the landlord's notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as originally enacted) or, as the case might be, s 26(6), was given before 1 April 2000) is relevant for determining the rateable value of the holding is (1) before 1 April 1990, the appropriate multiplier is three; (2) on or after 1 April 1990, the appropriate multiplier is one except in a case where that special basis has effect, when it is eight: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 (Appropriate Multiplier) Order 1990, SI 1990/363, arts 2-4.

4 For these purposes, the rateable value of the holding is to be determined as follows: (1) where in the valuation list in force at the date on which the landlord's notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 716 ante) or, as the case may be s 26(6) (see PARA 718 ante) is given, a value is then shown as the annual value of the holding, the rateable value of the holding is taken to be that value; (2) where no such value is so shown with respect to the holding, but such a value or such values is or are so shown with respect to premises comprised in or comprising the holding or part of it, the rateable value of the holding is to be taken to be such value as is found by a proper apportionment or aggregation of the value or values so shown; (3) where the rateable value of the holding cannot be ascertained in accordance with heads (1)-(2) supra, it is to be taken to be the value which apart from any exemption from assessment to rates would on a proper assessment be the value to be entered in the valuation list as the annual value of the holding: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(5). Any deduction made under the Local Government Finance Act 1988 s 56(1), Sch 6 para 2A (as added) (deduction from valuation of hereditaments used for breeding horses etc: see RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1B) (Reissue) PARA 97) must be disregarded, to the extent that it relates to the holding, in determining the rateable value of the holding under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(5): s 37(5E) (added by the Local Government Finance (Miscellaneous Amendments and Repeal) Order 1990, SI 1990/1285, art 2). The expression 'annual value' means rateable value except that, where the rateable value differs from the net annual value, that expression means net annual value: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(7). Changes in the law which come into operation between the date the landlord gives the notice and the date the tenant quits the premises will, however, affect the amount payable: see PARA 758 note 1 ante. For the meaning of 'the holding' see PARA 706 note 23 ante; but see also note 13 infra.

5 Ibid s 37(2)(b) (amended by the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 Sch 33 para 4(1); the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 Sch 7 para 2(1), (2); the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 19(2)(a)).

6 'Whole' is to be construed strictly and no de minimis principle applies, so that a tenant whose occupation was two days short of the requisite 14 years was held to be entitled only to the lower amount of compensation: Department of the Environment v Royal Insurance plc (1986) 54 P & CR 26, [1987] 1 EGLR 83.

7 For the meaning of 'the current tenancy' see PARA 713 note 12 ante.

8 Ie the landlord's notice to terminate under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended): see PARA 716 ante.

9 It was previously sufficient that part of the holding has been occupied for 14 years for the higher tariff to apply: Edicron Ltd v William Whitely Ltd [1984] 1 All ER 219, [1984] 1 WLR 59, CA.

10 For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 ante.

11 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(2)(a), (3)(a), (7) (amended by the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 Sch 33 para 4(1); the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 Sch 7 para 2(1), (2); and by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, art 19(2), with effect from 1 June 2004: see art 1(3)). As to the appropriate multiplier see note 3 supra.

12 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(2)(a), (3)(b) (as amended: see note 11 supra). As to the appropriate multiplier see note 3 supra. As to continuous occupation see Cramas Properties Ltd v Connaught Fur Trimmings Ltd [1965] 2 All ER 382, [1965] 1 WLR 892, HL. The 14-year period of occupation must be satisfied up to the date of termination of the tenancy specified in the landlord's notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended): Sight and Sound Education Ltd v Books etc Ltd [1999] 3 EGLR 45, [1999] 43 EG 161 (tenant giving up possession shortly before the contractual term date lost the right to compensation).

13 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(3A) (s 37(3A), (3B) added by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, art 19(3)). Accordingly, for the purpose of calculating compensation in respect of a part any reference in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37 (as amended) to the holding is to be construed as a reference to that part: s 37(3A) (as so added).

14 Ie where ibid s 44(1A) (as added) applies: see PARA 715 ante.

15 Ie the conditions specified in ibid s 44(1) (as amended): see PARA 715 ante.

16 Ibid s 37(3B) (as added: see note 13 supra).

17 The Commissioners for Revenue and Customs may by statutory instrument make rules prescribing the procedure in connection with references under ibid s 37 (as amended): s 37(6) (amended by virtue of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1)). In exercise of the power so conferred the commissioners made the Landlord and Tenant (Determination of Rateable Value Procedure) Rules 1954, SI 1954/1255, which came into force on 1 October 1954: r 1. Any reference to the commissioners must be in the prescribed form or one substantially to the like effect, and a separate form must be completed in respect of each holding: see r 3(1), Schedule, Form A. A reference may be made either by one of the parties or jointly by two or more parties to the dispute; but, where the reference is not made by all the parties jointly, the party or parties making the reference must on that day send a copy of it to the other party or parties: r 3(2). The commissioners must send a copy of the reference to the valuation officer who must then inform the parties that the dispute has been referred to him for determination, and that they may make written representations within 28 days, or such longer time as he may allow: rr 4, 5. The valuation officer may require information from the parties, and before making his determination hold a meeting of the parties: see rr 6, 7. Notification of the determination in the prescribed form must be sent to the commissioners and to each of the parties together with a statement of their right to appeal: see r 8, Schedule, Form B. A separate notification must be sent in respect of each holding: r 8.

18 For these purposes, 'valuation officer' means any officer of the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs for the time being authorised by a certificate of the commissioners to act in relation to a valuation list: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(7) (definition amended by virtue of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1)).

19 As to the procedure on appeal see the Lands Tribunal Rules 1996, SI 1996/1022, rr 6-8 (as amended); and COMPULSORY ACQUISITION OF LAND vol 18 (2009) PARA 723.

20 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37(5) (amended by virtue of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1)). If any dispute as to the rateable value of any holding has been so referred to the commissioners for decision by a valuation officer, any document purporting to be a statement of the valuation officer of his decision is admissible as evidence of the matters contained in it: Practice Direction--Landlord and Tenant Claims and Miscellaneous Provisions about Land PD 56 para 4.2.

Amount of compensation where domestic property included.

760. Amount of compensation where domestic property included.

If part of the holding<sup>1</sup> is domestic property<sup>2</sup>, the domestic property must be disregarded in determining the rateable value<sup>3</sup> of the holding<sup>4</sup>. If the tenant occupied<sup>5</sup> the whole or any part of the domestic property, the amount of compensation to which he is entitled<sup>6</sup> must be increased by the addition of a sum equal to his reasonable expenses in removing from the domestic property<sup>7</sup>. Any question as to the amount of that sum must be determined by agreement<sup>8</sup> between the landlord and the tenant or, in default of agreement, by the court<sup>9</sup>. Otherwise the compensation is determined on the usual basis<sup>10</sup>.

If, however, the whole of the holding is domestic property, the rateable value of the holding is to be taken to be an amount equal to the rent at which it is estimated the holding might reasonably be expected to let from year to year if the tenant undertook to pay all usual tenant's rates and taxes<sup>11</sup> and to bear the cost of the repairs<sup>12</sup> and insurance and the other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain the holding in a state to command that rent<sup>13</sup>. In the determination of such an amount, the date by reference to which the determination is to be made is the date on which the landlord's notice<sup>14</sup> is given<sup>15</sup>. Any dispute arising, whether in proceedings before the court or otherwise, as to such a determination must be referred to the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs for decision by a valuation officer<sup>16</sup> whose decision, subject to a right of appeal to the Lands Tribunal<sup>17</sup>, is final<sup>18</sup>.

Where the court makes an order for the termination of the current tenancy<sup>1</sup> but does not make an order for the grant of a new tenancy, or where it refuses an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup>, and it is subsequently made to appear to the court that the order was obtained, or the court was induced to refuse the grant, by misrepresentation or the concealment of material facts, the court may order the landlord<sup>3</sup> to pay to the tenant such sum as appears sufficient as compensation for damage or loss sustained by the tenant as the result of the order or refusal<sup>4</sup>.

Where the tenant has quit the holding<sup>5</sup> either:

- 1502 (1) after making but withdrawing an application for an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>6</sup>; or
- 1503 (2) without making such an application; and it is made to appear to the court that he did so by reason of misrepresentation or the concealment of material facts, the court may order the landlord to pay to the tenant such sum as appears sufficient as compensation for damage or loss sustained by the tenant as the result of quitting the holding<sup>7</sup>.

These provisions do not have effect where the tenant quit the holding before 1 June 2004<sup>8</sup>.

In such cases, where the court refused the grant of a new tenancy and it is subsequently made to appear to the court that it was induced to refuse the grant by misrepresentation or the concealment of material facts, the court may order the landlord to pay to the tenant such sum as appears sufficient as compensation for damage or loss sustained by the tenant as the result of the refusal: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 55(1) (repealed subject to transitional provisions). For these purposes, 'the landlord' means the person opposing an application for the grant of a new tenancy and 'the tenant' means the person to whom the grant of a new tenancy was refused: s 55(2) (as so repealed). The misrepresentation or concealment must be to the court, so that if as the result of what the landlord misrepresented or concealed to the tenant the tenant settled the case and did not proceed, he will be unable to recover compensation: Deeley v Maison AEL Ltd (28 July 1989, unreported), CA, distinguishing Thorn v Smith [1947] KB 307, [1947] 1 All ER 39, CA (a Rent Act decision). ## G. MESNE AND SUPERIOR LANDLORDS

762. Provisions as to mesne and superior landlords.

Special provisions have effect where the immediate landlord of the tenant is not the owner of the fee simple in respect of the holding<sup>1</sup>.

Any notice given by the competent landlord<sup>2</sup> to terminate the relevant tenancy<sup>3</sup> binds the interest of any mesne landlord<sup>4</sup> notwithstanding that he has not consented<sup>5</sup> to the giving of the notice<sup>6</sup>; but, where the competent landlord has given a notice<sup>7</sup> to terminate the relevant tenancy and, within two months after the giving of the notice, a superior landlord<sup>8</sup> becomes the competent landlord and gives to the tenant notice in the prescribed form<sup>9</sup> that he withdraws the notice previously given, the notice to terminate ceases to have effect<sup>10</sup>.

Any agreement between the competent landlord and the tenant as to the granting, duration or terms<sup>11</sup> of a future tenancy, being an agreement made for the statutory purposes<sup>12</sup>, also binds the interest of any mesne landlord notwithstanding that he was not a party to it<sup>13</sup>. Such an agreement does not, however, have effect in a case where the competent landlord is himself a tenant, and the agreement would otherwise operate as respects any period after the coming to an end of the interest of the competent landlord, unless every superior landlord who will be the immediate landlord of the tenant during any part of that period is a party to the agreement<sup>14</sup>. Subject thereto, the competent landlord has power<sup>15</sup> to give effect to any agreement with the tenant for the grant of a new tenancy beginning with the coming to an end of the relevant tenancy, notwithstanding that the competent landlord will not be the immediate landlord at the commencement of the new tenancy, and any instrument made in the exercise of the power so conferred has effect as if the mesne landlord had been a party to it<sup>16</sup>.

If the competent landlord's interest in the property comprised in the relevant tenancy is a tenancy which will come, or can be brought, to an end within 16 months or any further time by which it might be continued by statute<sup>17</sup>, and he gives to the tenant under the relevant tenancy a notice to terminate the tenancy<sup>18</sup> or is given by him a notice requesting a new tenancy<sup>19</sup>, the competent landlord must forthwith send a copy of the notice to his immediate landlord, and any superior landlord whose interest in the property is a tenancy must forthwith send to his immediate landlord any copy which has been so sent to him<sup>20</sup>.

Where the period for which it is agreed or determined<sup>21</sup> by the court that a new tenancy should be granted<sup>22</sup> will extend beyond the date on which the interest of the immediate landlord will come to an end, the power of the court to order such a grant includes power to order the grant of a new tenancy until the expiration of that interest and also to order the grant of such a reversionary tenancy or such reversionary tenancies as may be required to secure that the combined effects of those grants will be equivalent to the grant of a tenancy for that period<sup>23</sup>. A tenant who has the benefit of an order for a new lease is in the like position to one who holds under an agreement for a lease<sup>24</sup> so that the tenant can make agreements which will bind his landlord if that landlord accepts a surrender<sup>25</sup>.

3 Ie the tenancy referred to in ibid Sch 6 (as amended).

4 For these purposes, 'mesne landlord' means a tenant whose interest is intermediate between the relevant tenancy and the interest of the competent landlord: ibid Sch 6 para 1.

5 If the competent landlord, not being the immediate landlord, gives any such notice or makes any such agreement as is mentioned in ibid Sch 6 para 3(1) (see the text and notes 2-4 supra, 6 infra) without the consent of every mesne landlord, any mesne landlord whose consent has not been given thereto is entitled to compensation from the competent landlord for any loss arising in consequence of the giving of the notice or the making of the agreement: Sch 6 para 4(1). If the competent landlord applies to any mesne landlord for his consent to such a notice or agreement, that consent must not be unreasonably withheld, but may be given subject to any conditions which may be reasonable, including conditions as to the modification of the proposed notice of agreement or as to the payment of compensation by the competent landlord: Sch 6 para 4(2). Any question arising under these provisions whether consent has been unreasonably withheld or whether any conditions imposed on the giving of consent are unreasonable must be determined by the court (Sch 6 para 4(3)); and the mesne landlord to whose consent a claim for the determination of any question arising under Sch 6 para 4(3) relates must be made a defendant to the claim (Practice Direction--Landlord and Tenant Claims and Miscellaneous Provisions about Land PD 56 para 4.1).

(A) TRUSTS

763. Business tenancies held on trust.

Where a tenancy<sup>1</sup> is held on trust, occupation by all or any of the beneficiaries under the trust and the carrying on of a business<sup>2</sup> by all or any of the beneficiaries is treated<sup>3</sup> as equivalent to occupation or the carrying on of a business by the tenant<sup>4</sup>, but the beneficiary who intends to occupy must have an interest under the trust such as either to entitle him to be put in occupation or, at all events, to justify the trustees on his application, if they think fit to do so, in letting him into occupation<sup>5</sup>. In all cases save where the tenants have been in partnership<sup>6</sup>, it is the person in whom the legal estate is vested, that is the trustee, who must make application to the court for a new tenancy<sup>7</sup>, albeit that he will hold any new tenancy upon the same trusts as he held the old tenancy. A change in the persons of the trustees is not to be treated as a change in the person of the tenant<sup>8</sup>.

In relation to a tenancy to which Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq ante, PARA 764 et seq post) applies by virtue of s 41(1), references, however expressed, in Pt II (as amended) and in Sch 9 (transitional provisions) to the business of, or to carrying on of business, use, occupation or enjoyment by, the tenant are to be construed as including references to the business of, or to carrying on of business, use, occupation or enjoyment by, the beneficiaries or beneficiary: s 41(1)(a). Thus s 41 applied to protect a tenancy of premises let for the purpose of a members' club, where the lease was held by two members of the club as trustees for the club: see Teba Fabrics Ltd v Conn (1958) 171 Estates Gazette 495.

764. Reversion to business tenancy held on trust.

Where the landlord's interest is held on trust, the intention of the beneficiaries or any of them to occupy the holding<sup>1</sup> for the purposes, or partly for the purposes, of a business, or as a residence, may be a ground on which an application for a new tenancy may be opposed<sup>2</sup>. For the purposes of the five-year rule<sup>3</sup>, the creation of a trust, except a trust arising under a will or on the intestacy of any person, in relation to the landlord's interest within the relevant five-year period is treated as the creation of the landlord's interest<sup>4</sup>. In order to rely upon the intended occupation of a beneficiary<sup>5</sup> the landlord must intend that the beneficiary shall occupy the premises in right of the trust<sup>6</sup> so that the trustees under a public charitable trust cannot rely upon the intended occupation of an object of their charity<sup>7</sup>. It follows that, if the landlord intends to grant a tenancy to the beneficiary, or to one or some of the beneficiaries, who will thereafter occupy in right of that tenancy, the landlord will be unable to rely upon the intended occupation of the beneficiary<sup>8</sup>. If, however, the landlord declares a trust of his interest in the premises but retains the legal estate and himself intends to trade in the premises, he may rely upon his intention and is not caught by the five-year rule<sup>9</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'the holding' see PARA 706 note 23 ante.

2 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 41(2). By virtue of s 41(2) the ground of opposition to a new tenancy open to a landlord under s 30(1)(g) (see PARA 745 ante) is extended to landlord trustees whose beneficiaries have the necessary intention of occupying the holding. For the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante.

Business tenancy held by partnership.

(B) PARTNERSHIPS

765. Business tenancy held by partnership.

The following provisions apply where:

- 1504 (1) a tenancy<sup>1</sup> is held jointly by two or more persons ('the joint tenants'); and
- 1505 (2) the property comprised in the tenancy is or includes premises occupied for the purposes of a business<sup>2</sup>; and
- 1506 (3) the business, or some other business, was at some time during the existence of the tenancy carried on in partnership by all the persons who were then the joint tenants or by those and other persons, and the joint tenants' interest in the premises was then partnership property; and
- 1507 (4) the business is carried on, whether alone or in partnership with other persons, by one or some only of the joint tenants and no part of the property comprised in the tenancy is occupied, in right of the tenancy, for the purposes of a business carried on, whether alone or in partnership with other persons, by the other or others<sup>3</sup>.

Any notice given by the business tenants<sup>4</sup> which, had it been given by all the joint tenants, would have been a tenant's request for a new tenancy<sup>5</sup> or a notice terminating a fixed term<sup>6</sup> is to be treated as such if it states that it is given by virtue of these provisions<sup>7</sup> and sets out the facts by virtue of which the persons giving it are the business tenants<sup>8</sup>. A notice given by the landlord<sup>9</sup> to the business tenants which, had it been given to all the joint tenants, would have been a notice terminating the tenancy<sup>10</sup> is to be treated as such a notice<sup>11</sup>.

An application for a new tenancy<sup>12</sup> may, instead of being made by all the joint tenants, be made by the business tenants alone<sup>13</sup>. The business tenants are then liable, to the exclusion of the other joint tenants, for the payment of rent and the discharge of any other obligation under the current tenancy<sup>14</sup> for any rental period beginning after the date specified in the landlord's notice to terminate<sup>15</sup> or on or after the date specified in the business tenants' request<sup>16</sup> for a new tenancy<sup>17</sup>.

Where the court makes an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>18</sup> it may order the grant to be made to the business tenants or to them jointly with the persons carrying on the business in partnership with them, and may order the grant to be made subject to the satisfaction, within a specified time, of such conditions as to guarantors, sureties or otherwise as appear to the court equitable, having regard to the omission of the other joint tenants from the persons who will be the tenant under the new tenancy<sup>19</sup>.

The business tenants are entitled to recover any amount payable<sup>20</sup> by way of compensation<sup>21</sup>.

The above provisions<sup>22</sup> do not, however, avoid notices given to or requests or applications made by those persons who would ordinarily be regarded as the tenants notwithstanding that they are not the business tenants<sup>23</sup>; nor are they of any assistance unless all of the conditions referred to are satisfied<sup>24</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'business' see PARA 707 ante.

3 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 41A(1) (s 41A added by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 9). For most purposes these provisions reverse the effect of the decision in Jacobs v Chaudhuri [1968] 2 QB 470, [1968] 2 All ER 124, CA (where it was held that, if a lease remained vested in a retired partner, the continuing partner (who would now be termed the business tenant: see note 4 infra) was unable to apply for an order for a new tenancy in his own name and without the concurrence of the retired partner since, for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) 'the tenant' was the aggregate of all the persons in whom was vested the legal estate created by the lease).

4 For these purposes, those of the joint tenants who for the time being carry on the business are referred to as the business tenants and the others as the other joint tenants: ibid s 41A(2) (as added: see note 3 supra).

5 le a request made in accordance with ibid s 26 (as amended): see PARA 718 ante.

6 le a notice under ibid s 27(1) (as amended) or s 27(2) (as amended): see PARA 719 ante.

7 le ibid s 41A(3) (as added: see note 3 supra).

8 Ibid s 41A(3) (as added: see note 3 supra). References in s 24A (as substituted), s 26 (as amended) and s 27 (as amended) to the tenant are to be construed accordingly: s 41A(3) (as so added).

9 For the meaning of 'the landlord' see PARA 715 ante.

10 le a notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended): see PARA 716 ante.

11 Ibid s 41A(4) (as added: see note 3 supra). References in s 25 (as amended) to the tenant are to be construed accordingly: s 41A(4) (as so added).

12 le under ibid s 24(1) (as amended): see PARA 720 ante.

13 Ibid s 41A(5) (as added: see note 3 supra). Where an application is made by the business tenants alone, Pt II (as amended) has effect as if references to the tenant included references to the business tenants alone: s 41A(5)(a) (as so added).

14 For the meaning of 'the current tenancy' see PARA 713 note 12 ante.

15 le under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended): see PARA 716 ante.

16 le under ibid s 26 (as amended): see PARA 718 ante.

17 Ibid s 41A(5)(b) (as added: see note 3 supra).

18 le under ibid s 29 (as amended): see PARAS 720, 734 ante.

19 Ibid s 41A(6) (as added (see note 3 supra); amended by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, art 28(1), Sch 5, PARAS 1, 5). This provision does not prejudice the court's general power under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 35 (as amended) (see PARA 752 ante) to require a tenant to provide a guarantor in respect of the tenant's obligations under a new lease: Cairnplace Ltd v CBL (Property Investment) Co Ltd [1984] 1 All ER 315, [1984] 1 WLR 696, CA.

20 le under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37 (as amended) (see PARAS 758-760 ante) or s 59 (as amended) (see PARA 774 post).

21 Ibid s 41A(7) (as added: see note 3 supra).

22 Ie ibid s 41A (as added: see note 3 supra). The main effect of these provisions is to protect the business tenant from what otherwise would be the consequences if a retired partner, in whom (with others) the lease and current tenancy are vested, will not co-operate, eg if he has emigrated and cannot be traced. For an example of the consequences of such disputes and non-co-operation between retired and continuing partners in a business see Jacobs v Chaudhuri [1968] 2 QB 470, [1968] 2 All ER 124, CA.

23 If partners choose not to rely upon the special provisions, then Jacobs v Chaudhuri [1968] 2 QB 470, [1968] 2 All ER 124, CA, will still apply, so that all of the original tenants must act conjointly in taking each step under the statutory procedure for renewing the tenancy.

24 It frequently occurs that all of the partners in whom the old lease was vested have retired, and that they hold the current tenancy as trustees for their successors in the partnership, either by reason of a declaration of trust or (more often) informally as a result of selling out their interest in the partnership to the continuing partners. In such circumstances, the special provisions as to trusts apply (see PARAS 763-764 ante) but the special provisions as to partnerships are of no assistance at all as the current partners in the business are not the business tenants for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 41A (as added).

Where a tenancy<sup>1</sup> is held by a member of a group<sup>2</sup> of companies, occupation and the carrying on of a business<sup>3</sup> by another member of the group is treated<sup>4</sup> as equivalent to occupation or the carrying on of a business by the member of the group holding the tenancy<sup>5</sup>. An assignment of the tenancy from one member of the group to another is not to be treated as a change in the person of the tenant<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

2 For these purposes, two bodies corporate are taken to be members of a group if and only if one is a subsidiary of the other or both are subsidiaries of a third body corporate or the same person has a controlling interest in both: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 42(1) (amended by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 16, 28(2), Sch 6). For the purposes of the 'five-year rule'<sup>4</sup>, the reference in that rule to the purchase or creation of any interest is to be construed as a reference to a purchase from or creation by a person other than a member of the group<sup>5</sup>.

(D) THE CROWN, PUBLIC BODIES AND STATUTORY UNDERTAKERS

768. Tenancies held by the Crown and government departments.

The statutory protection of business tenancies<sup>1</sup> applies where there is an interest belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Crown or the Duchy of Lancaster or belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall<sup>2</sup>, or belonging to a government department or held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department, in like manner as if that interest were an interest not so belonging or held<sup>3</sup>. Thus in general those provisions bind the Crown; and, if the Crown is tenant, it is accordingly entitled to the statutory protection.

Where a tenancy<sup>4</sup> is held by or on behalf of a government department and the property comprised in it is or includes premises occupied for any purposes of a government department, the tenancy is one to which the statutory protection applies<sup>5</sup>. For the purposes of any relevant statutory provision<sup>6</sup> which is applicable only if either or both of the following conditions is or are satisfied, that is to say:

- 1508 (1) that any premises have during any period been occupied for the purposes of the tenant's business<sup>7</sup>;
 1509 (2) that on any change of occupier of any premises the new occupier succeeded to the business of the former occupier, those conditions are deemed to be satisfied respectively, in relation to such a tenancy, if during that period or, as the case may be, immediately before and immediately after the change, the premises were occupied for the purposes of a government department<sup>8</sup>. These provisions<sup>9</sup> apply in relation to any premises provided by a government department without any rent being payable to the department for them as if the premises were occupied for the purposes of a government department<sup>10</sup>.

Similarly, where the interest belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall, such person as the Duke of Cornwall, or other the possessor for the time being of the Duchy, appoints, must represent the Duke of Cornwall, or that other possessor, and is deemed to be the owner of the interest and may do any act or thing under Pt II (as amended) which the owner of the interest is authorised or required to do: Sch 8 para 2. ## 769. Modification on grounds of public interest.

Where the interest of the landlord<sup>1</sup> or any superior landlord in the property comprised in any tenancy<sup>2</sup> belongs to or is held for the purposes of a government department<sup>3</sup> or is held by a local authority<sup>4</sup> or one of certain other public bodies<sup>5</sup>, statutory undertakers<sup>6</sup> or a development corporation<sup>7</sup>, the Secretary of State or Minister<sup>8</sup> in charge of any government department or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister concurrently with any Minister of the Crown by whom this function is exercisable<sup>9</sup> ('the Minister or board') may certify that it is requisite<sup>10</sup> for the purposes of such landlord or superior landlord that the use or occupation of the property, or part of it, be changed by a specified date<sup>11</sup>. Such a certificate may not be given unless the owner of the interest so belonging or held has given to the tenant a notice stating that the question of the giving of the certificate is under consideration by the Minister or board specified in the notice<sup>12</sup>, and that, if within 21 days of the giving of the notice the tenant makes representations in writing to that Minister or board with respect to that question, they will be considered before the question is determined<sup>13</sup>. If the tenant makes any such representations within the time permitted, the Minister or board must consider them before determining whether to give the certificate<sup>14</sup>.

Where such a certificate has been given in relation to any tenancy, then:

- 1510 (1) if a landlord's notice to terminate<sup>15</sup> specified as the date of termination a date not earlier than the date specified in the certificate and contains a copy of the certificate, no application for a new tenancy may be made<sup>16</sup> by the tenant<sup>17</sup>;
- 1511 (2) if such a notice specifies an earlier date as the date of termination and contains a copy of the certificate<sup>18</sup>, then, if the court makes an order<sup>19</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy, the new tenancy must be for a term expiring not later than the date specified in the certificate and is not a tenancy to which the statutory protection<sup>20</sup> applies<sup>21</sup>.

Where a tenant makes a request for a new tenancy<sup>22</sup> and the interest of the landlord or any superior landlord in the property comprised in the current tenancy<sup>23</sup> belongs or is held as mentioned above, the following provisions have effect<sup>24</sup>. If a certificate has been given<sup>25</sup> in relation to the current tenancy, and within two months after the making of the request the landlord gives notice to the tenant that the certificate has been given and the notice contains a copy of the certificate, then:

- 1512 (a) if the date specified in the certificate is not later than that specified in the tenant's request for a new tenancy, the tenant may not make an application<sup>26</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy;
- 1513 (b) if, in any other case, the court makes an order<sup>27</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy, the new tenancy must be for a term expiring not later than the date specified in the certificate and is not a tenancy to which the statutory protection applies<sup>28</sup>.

If no such certificate has been given but notice stating that the giving of such a certificate is under consideration<sup>29</sup> has been given before the making of the request or within two months thereafter, the request does not have effect, but without prejudice to the making of a new request when the Minister or board has determined whether to give a certificate<sup>30</sup>.

Where the interest of the landlord or any superior landlord in the property comprised in any tenancy belongs to the National Trust<sup>31</sup>, the Secretary of State may certify that it is requisite for the purpose of securing that the property will as from a specified date be used or occupied in a manner better suited to its nature that the use or occupation of the property should be changed<sup>32</sup>. The above provisions apply<sup>33</sup> accordingly<sup>34</sup>.

Where an application is made to the court for the grant of a new tenancy, the Minister or board in certain circumstances<sup>35</sup> may certify that it is necessary in the public interest that, if the landlord applies in that behalf, the court shall determine as a term of the new tenancy that it be terminable by six months' notice to quit given by the landlord<sup>36</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'landlord' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 715 ante): s 57(8).

2 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

3 For this purpose and for the purpose of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 58 (as amended) (see PARAS 770-771 post), 'government department' does not include the Crown Estate Commissioners: s 57(8); Crown Estate Act 1961 s 1. As to the Crown Estate Commissioners see CROWN PROPERTY vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 280.

4 For these purposes, 'local authority' means any local authority within the meaning of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 (see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(1) (Reissue) PARA 3 note 3), any National Park authority, the Broads Authority, the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority or a joint authority established by the Local Government Act 1985 Pt IV (ss 23-42) (as amended) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 47 et seq); Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1) (definition amended by the Local Government Act 1985 s 84, Sch 14 para 36; the Education Reform Act 1988 s 237, Sch 13 Pt I; the Environment Act 1995 s 78, Sch 10 para 3; the Greater London Authority Act 1999 s 328, Sch 29 Pt I para 1). As to National Park authorities see OPEN SPACES AND COUNTRYSIDE vol 78 (2010) PARA 526; as to the Broads Authority see WATER AND WATERWAYS vol 101 (2009) PARA 734; and as to the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 217.

The provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 57(1)-(5) (as amended) apply also to an interest held by a Health Authority or Special Health Authority as they apply to an interest held by a local authority, but with the substitution, for the references to the purposes of the authority, of a reference to the purposes of the National Health Service Act 1977: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 57(6) (amended by the National Health Service Act 1977 s 129, Sch 15 para 13; the Health Authorities Act 1995 s 2(1), Sch 1 para 89). As to the position of health service bodies on and after 1 April 1991 see the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 s 60 (as amended); and HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARAS 94, 136.

5 References to a local authority in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 57 (as amended) also apply to any body to which the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 s 28 (as amended) applies: s 38(2). As to the bodies to which s 28 (as amended) applies see PARA 1487 post.

6 For these purposes, 'statutory undertakers' has the same meaning as in the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 (see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(3) (Reissue) PARA 1009): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1) (amended by the Coal Industry Act 1994 s 67, Sch 9 para 5, Sch 11 Pt II); Planning (Consequential Provisions) Act 1990 s 2(4). The following are also deemed to be statutory undertakers for these purposes: (1) a gas transporter (see the Gas Act 1995 s 16(1), Sch 4 para 2(1)(vii)); (2) the Environment Agency, every water undertaker and every sewerage undertaker (see the Water Act 1989 s 190(1), Sch 25 para 1(1), (2)(vi) (amended by the Environment Act 1995 (Consequential Amendments) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/593, reg 3, Sch 2, PARA 4)); (3) the holder of a licence under the Electricity Act 1989 s 6 (as substituted and amended) (see s 112(1), Sch 16 para 1(1)(ix)); and (4) a licence holder under the Transport Act 2000 Pt I Ch I (ss 1-40) (as amended) (air traffic services) (see s 37, Sch 5 para 1(1), (2)(e)).

7 For these purposes, 'development corporation' has the same meaning as in the New Towns Act 1981 (see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(3) (Reissue) PARA 1322 et seq): Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a).

8 The statutory wording is 'the Minister or board' (the latter being a reference to the Board of Trade, whose functions are now exercised by the relevant Secretary of State). ### 770. Termination on grounds of national security.

Where the landlord's<sup>1</sup> interest in the property comprised in any tenancy<sup>2</sup> belongs to or is held for the purposes of a government department<sup>3</sup>, and the Secretary of State or Minister<sup>4</sup> in charge of any government department or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister concurrently with any Minister of the Crown by whom this function is exercisable<sup>5</sup> ('the Minister or board') certifies that it is necessary for reasons of national security that the use or occupation of the property should be discontinued or changed, then:

1514 (1) if the landlord gives a notice of termination<sup>6</sup> containing a copy of the certificate, no application for a new tenancy may be made<sup>7</sup> by the tenant<sup>8</sup>;

1515 (2) if, whether before or after the giving of the certificate, the tenant makes a request for a new tenancy<sup>9</sup> and within two months after the making of the request the landlord gives notice to the tenant that the certificate has been given and the notice contains a copy of the certificate:

181. (a) the tenant may not make an application<sup>10</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy; and

182. (b) if the notice specifies as the date on which the tenancy is to terminate a date earlier than that specified in the tenant's request as the date on which the new tenancy is to begin, but neither earlier than six months from the giving of the notice nor earlier than the earliest date at which the tenancy would otherwise<sup>11</sup> come to an end or could be brought to an end, the tenancy terminates on the date specified in the notice instead of that specified in the request<sup>12</sup>.

Where the landlord's interest in the property comprised in any tenancy belongs to or is held for the purposes of a government department:

- 1516 (i) nothing in the statutory protection of business tenancies<sup>13</sup> invalidates an agreement<sup>14</sup> to the effect that, on the giving of such a certificate, the tenancy may be terminated by notice to quit<sup>15</sup> given by the landlord of such length as may be specified in the agreement, if the notice contains a copy of the certificate, and that after the giving of such a notice containing such a copy the tenancy shall not be one to which the statutory protection applies<sup>16</sup>; and
- 1517 (ii) where the court makes an order<sup>17</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy and the Minister or board in charge of any government department certifies that the public interest requires the tenancy to be subject to such a term, the court must on the application of the landlord determine as a term of the new tenancy that such an agreement as is mentioned in head (i) above and specifying such length of notice as is mentioned in the certificate must be embodied in the new tenancy<sup>18</sup>.

1518 (1) nothing in the statutory provisions relating to business tenancies<sup>4</sup> invalidates an agreement<sup>5</sup> to the effect:

184. (b) that, after the giving of such a notice containing such a copy, the tenancy shall not be one to which the statutory protection<sup>11</sup> applies<sup>12</sup>;

148

1519 (2) where the court makes an order<sup>13</sup> for the grant of a new tenancy and the Minister or board in charge of any government department certifies that the public interest requires the tenancy to be subject to such a term, the court must on the application of the landlord determine as a term of the new tenancy that such an agreement as is mentioned in head (1) above and specifying such length of notice as is mentioned in the certificate must be embodied in the new tenancy<sup>14</sup>.

Where the court makes an order for the grant of a new tenancy of such premises<sup>6</sup>, and the Assembly certifies that it is necessary or expedient for achieving the above purpose that the tenancy should be subject to a term, specified in the certificate, prohibiting or restricting the tenant from assigning the tenancy or subletting, charging or parting with possession of the premises or any

Where by virtue of any certificate given for the purposes of the public interest<sup>1</sup> or national security<sup>2</sup>, or (subject to the restrictions set out in heads (1) and (2) below) for the purposes of industrial development in Wales<sup>3</sup>, a tenant is precluded from obtaining an order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>4</sup> or of a new tenancy for a term expiring later than a specified date, he is entitled on quitting the premises to recover from the owner of the interest by virtue of which the certificate was given an amount by way of compensation<sup>5</sup>. The compensation is to be assessed in like manner and amount as if the court had refused an order for a new tenancy where the landlord had established an ordinary ground of opposition<sup>6</sup>. No compensation is, however, payable under these provisions where the tenant is entitled to compensation under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967<sup>7</sup>, or where:

1520 (1) the premises vested in the former Welsh Development Agency in certain circumstances<sup>8</sup> and were transferred to the National Assembly for Wales on the abolition of that Agency<sup>9</sup>; or 1521 (2) the tenant was not the tenant of the premises when the interest by virtue of which the certificate was given was acquired by the former Welsh Development Agency or, if the interest was acquired on or after 1 April 2006, by the National Assembly for Wales in exercise of functions transferred<sup>10</sup> to the Assembly<sup>11</sup>.

Former exclusion; phasing in of protection.

(E) LICENSED PREMISES

775. Former exclusion; phasing in of protection.

Tenancies of premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor for consumption on the premises were originally excluded<sup>1</sup>, subject to certain exceptions<sup>2</sup>, from the protection afforded to business tenancies<sup>3</sup>. This exclusion did not apply to tenancies of off-licences.

The statutory exclusion ceased to have effect:

- 1522 (1) on 1 January 1991, in relation to any such tenancy<sup>4</sup> entered into on or after 11 July 1989, otherwise than in pursuance of a contract made before that date<sup>5</sup>;
 1523 (2) on 11 July 1992, in relation to any such tenancy in existence on that date which did not fall under head (1) above<sup>6</sup>.

1 le by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(d) (repealed).

2 The former exclusion did not apply in respect of tenancies of licensed premises which were structurally adapted to be used, and were bona fide used, for: (1) a business which comprised one or both of the following: (a) the reception of guests and travellers desiring to sleep on the premises; or (b) the carrying on of a restaurant, being a business a substantial proportion of which consisted of transactions other than the sale of intoxicating liquor; (2) only for one or more of the following purposes: (a) judicial or public administrative purposes; (b) as a theatre or place of public or private entertainment; (c) public gardens; (d) picture galleries; (e) exhibitions, or for any similar purpose to which holding the licence was merely ancillary; (3) railway station refreshment rooms: see ibid s 43(1)(d) (substituted by the Finance Act 1959 s 2(6), Sch 2 para 5; repealed by the Landlord and Tenant (Licensed Premises) Act 1990 s 2).

3 Where premises were used for the storage of liquor for the purposes of the business of an adjacent public house, it was held that this use was for storage and the tenancy of those premises was thus protected (Ye Old Cheshire Cheese Ltd v Daily Telegraph plc [1988] 3 All ER 217, [1988] 1 WLR 1173); and, where the tenant of a public house provided in the premises the facilities of a restaurant and the activities on the premises comprised overall the carrying on of a restaurant business, the tenancy of those premises was held to be protected (Taylor v Courage Ltd [1993] 2 EGLR 127, [1993] 44 EG 116, CA).

4 For these purposes, 'tenancy' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46 (as amended): see PARA 706 note 2 ante): Landlord and Tenant (Licensed Premises) Act 1990 s 1(4).

5 Ibid ss 1(1), 2(3).

6 Ibid s 1(2). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24(3)(b) (which, in certain cases, preserves the effect of a notice to quit given in respect of a tenancy which becomes one to which Pt II (as amended) applies: see PARA 713 ante) does not have effect in the case of a tenancy which became one to which Pt II (as amended) applies by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant (Licensed Premises) Act 1990 s 1(2): s 1(2). In relation to a tenancy falling within s 1(2), before 11 July 1992 the following notices might be given and any steps might be taken in consequence thereof as if the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 43(1)(d) (repealed) had already ceased to have effect: (1) a notice under s 25 (now as amended) (termination of tenancy by landlord: see PARA 716 ante) specifying as the date of termination 11 July 1992 or any later date; (2) a notice under s 26 (now as amended) (tenant's request for a new tenancy: see PARA 718 ante) requesting a new tenancy beginning not earlier than that date; and (3) a notice under s 27(1) (as amended) (termination by tenant of tenancy for fixed term: see PARA 719 ante) stating that the tenant did not desire his tenancy to be continued: Landlord and Tenant (Licensed Premises) Act 1990 s 1(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/15. BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/H. SPECIAL CASES/(E) Licensed Premises/776. Rent of licensed premises.

776. Rent of licensed premises.

In the case of a holding<sup>1</sup> comprising licensed premises<sup>2</sup>, the rent payable under a tenancy granted by order of the court<sup>3</sup> falls to be assessed in the manner and subject to the disregards applicable to ordinary business tenancies<sup>4</sup>. There must, however, also be disregarded any addition to the value of the holding attributable to the licence, if it appears to the court that, having regard to the terms<sup>5</sup> of the current tenancy<sup>6</sup> and to any other relevant circumstances, the benefit of the licence belongs to the tenant<sup>7</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'the holding' see PARA 706 note 23 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'licensed premises' see PARA 775 ante.

3 le under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq ante.

4 See PARAS 753-755 ante.

5 For the meaning of 'terms' see PARA 706 note 27 ante.

6 For the meaning of 'current tenancy' see PARA 713 note 12 ante.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1)(d). If Pt II (as amended) applies by virtue of s 23(1A) (as added) (see PARA 706 ante), the reference in s 34(1)(d) to the tenant is to be construed as including (1) a company in which the tenant has a controlling interest; or (2) where the tenant is a company, a person with a controlling interest in the company: s 34(2A) (added by the Regulatory Reform (Business Tenancies) (England and Wales) Order 2003, SI 2003/3096, arts 2, 15). For the meanings of 'company' and 'controlling interest' see PARA 706 note 8 ante.

Where a tenancy is held on trust, the reference to the tenant is to be construed as including the beneficiaries or beneficiary: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 41(1)(b) (amended by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 1(2)). As to trusts generally see PARAS 763-764 ante. Where a tenancy is held by a member of a group of companies, the reference to the tenant is to be construed as including another member of the group occupying the premises and carrying on business there: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 42(2)(b) (amended by the Law of Property Act 1969 s 1(2)). See further PARA 766 ante.

Business tenancies subject to compulsory rights order.

(F) OPENCAST MINING

777. Business tenancies subject to compulsory rights order.

Where any of the land comprised in a compulsory rights order<sup>1</sup> in connection with the opencast mining of coal is land which, immediately before the operative date<sup>2</sup> of the order, was subject to a business tenancy<sup>3</sup>, special statutory provisions<sup>4</sup> apply<sup>5</sup> so that, as far as possible, the making and operation of the compulsory rights order does not prejudice the position of the tenant for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 both as to his security of tenure and rights to a new lease<sup>6</sup> and as to his rights in respect of compensation for disturbance<sup>7</sup>. The power to make a compulsory rights order ceased to be exercisable after 31 December 1999<sup>8</sup>.

As from the operative date of the order and so long thereafter as the tenancy<sup>9</sup> continues and the order continues to have effect<sup>10</sup>, so much of the land comprised in the order as:

1524 (1) is comprised in the tenancy; and

1525 (2) immediately before the operative date was occupied by the tenant for the purposes of the relevant business<sup>11</sup> or for those and other purposes, or was occupied by a person employed by the tenant for the purposes of the relevant business; and 1526 (3) is not for the time being so occupied by the tenant or by such a person, is treated for the purposes of the statutory protection of business tenancies<sup>12</sup> as if it had continued to be so occupied<sup>13</sup>.

In relation to such a tenancy, the specified statutory grounds of opposition to an application for a new tenancy which turn upon the landlord's intention<sup>14</sup> apply for certain purposes<sup>15</sup> as if any reference to the termination of the current tenancy were a reference to the end of the period of occupation<sup>16</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'compulsory rights order' means an order under the Opencast Coal Act 1958 for the compulsory acquisition of temporary rights of occupation and use of land for the purpose of facilitating the working of coal by opencast operations: see s 4(1) (as substituted and amended), s 51(1); and MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 422 et seq. Such orders may no longer be made: see the text and note 8 infra. As to the operation and scope of the Opencast Coal Act 1958 generally see MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 404 et seq.

2 For these purposes, 'operative date' means the date on which the compulsory rights order became operative: see ibid s 4(2)(a) (s 4(2) substituted by the Coal Industry Act 1975 s 4, Sch 3 para 1).

3 Ie a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) applies: see PARAS 706-708 ante.

4 Ie the Opencast Coal Act 1958 s 37, Sch 7 Pt V (paras 19-24) (as amended): see the text and notes 5-16 infra; and PARAS 778-779 post. The court has a general power to vary the terms of tenancies, other than tenancies of agricultural holdings, where the premises are subject to a compulsory rights order: see PARA 147 ante.

5 Ibid Sch 7 para 19(1), (2).

6 As to security of tenure and rights to a new lease generally see PARA 713 et seq ante.

7 As to compensation where an order for a new tenancy is precluded on certain grounds see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 37 (as amended); and PARAS 758-760 ante. Section 37 (as amended) is applied, with modifications, to tenancies subject to a compulsory rights order: see the Opencast Coal Act 1958 Sch 7 para 24 (as amended); and PARA 779 post. The right to compensation is also preserved indirectly by the provisions of Sch 7 para 20 and the deemed occupation created thereby.

8 See the Coal Industry Act 1994 s 52(1); and MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARAS 404-405.

9 For these purposes, any reference to a tenancy to which the Opencast Coal Act 1958 Sch 7 Pt V (paras 19-24) (as amended) applies is a reference to a tenancy which (1) immediately before the operative date of the compulsory rights order was a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) applied; and (2) comprises the whole or part of the land comprised in that order: Opencast Coal Act 1958 Sch 7 para 19(1), (2).

10 The duration of a compulsory rights order may not exceed 20 years: see ibid s 4(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

11 For these purposes, 'business' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) (see PARA 707 ante) (Opencast Coal Act 1958 Sch 7 para 19(2)); and 'the relevant business' means the business by reason of which, immediately before the operative date, the tenancy was a tenancy to which those provisions applied (Sch 7 para 20(2)).

12 Ie the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq ante.

13 Opencast Coal Act 1958 Sch 7 para 20(1). This preserves the tenant's right to renewal, as the land will be deemed still to be within the holding: see PARA 706 ante.

Order for new tenancy when compulsory rights order applies.

778. Order for new tenancy when compulsory rights order applies.

Where an application for a new tenancy<sup>1</sup> falls to be determined by the court at a time when the current tenancy<sup>2</sup> comprises land which is subject to a compulsory rights order<sup>3</sup>, being a time on or after the operative date<sup>4</sup> of the order in question and before the end of the period of occupation<sup>5</sup>, and on that application an order for the grant of a new tenancy is made<sup>6</sup>, the following provisions have effect<sup>7</sup>.

If it falls to the court<sup>8</sup> to determine the rent payable under the new tenancy, the court must determine that rent as if the compulsory rights order had not been made and as if so much of the property comprised in the current tenancy as is also comprised in the compulsory rights order were still in the state in which it was immediately before the operative date<sup>9</sup>.

If it falls to the court to determine any of the terms and conditions of the new tenancy, other than any term or condition as to the rent payable thereunder, the court must determine those terms or conditions as if the compulsory rights order had not been made; but, in so far as any such terms or conditions of the new tenancy impose an obligation or restriction in respect of land comprised in the compulsory rights order, the court may suspend the operation of that obligation or restriction during the period of occupation<sup>10</sup>.

If the new tenancy continues until after the end of the period of occupation, the landlord or the tenant may by notice in writing served on his tenant or landlord demand a reference to the court of the question whether any of the terms and conditions of the tenancy, including any term or condition as to rent, should be varied, having regard to the state of the land and other circumstances existing at the time when the reference is determined by the court<sup>11</sup>. The court may not, however, entertain such a reference unless the proceedings are begun within 12 months after the end of the period of occupation<sup>12</sup>. On such a reference, the court must determine what variations, if any, should be made in the terms and conditions of the tenancy<sup>13</sup> and the date, not being earlier than the end of the period of occupation, from which such variations are to take effect or are to be treated as having taken effect<sup>14</sup>.

Where an application for an order for a new tenancy<sup>15</sup> is made by the tenant:

- 1527 (1) before the end of the period of occupation but falls to be determined by the court after the end of that period; or 1528 (2) within 12 months after the end of that period, and the landlord opposes the application on grounds consisting of or including any of the statutory grounds relating to the state of repair of the holding and to the tenant's use or management of the holding during the current tenancy<sup>16</sup>, the court, in so far as it considers it reasonable to do so in the circumstances, may disregard the matters to which the objection in question relates in determining whether to make an order for the grant of a new tenancy if it is satisfied that those matters are attributable to a change in the state of the land resulting from its occupation and use in the exercise of rights conferred by the compulsory rights order<sup>17</sup>.

Qualifications for protection.

(G) PROTECTION OF SERVICE PERSONNEL

780. Qualifications for protection.

Part III of the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951<sup>1</sup> empowers the court to order the grant of new tenancies in cases where:

1530 (2) the tenancy ('the expiring tenancy') would otherwise come to an end before the date of the ending of that period of service or before the expiration of two months from that date, and would so come to an end by effluxion of time or by the expiration of a notice to quit<sup>8</sup> given by the landlord<sup>9</sup>; and

1531 (3) at the time when an application for the grant of a new tenancy is made<sup>10</sup> the business or practice is still being carried on in the premises or part of the premises comprised in the expiring tenancy and the serviceman is still the proprietor<sup>11</sup>.

This protection does not apply if at the time when the application might otherwise be made the premises comprised in the expiring tenancy:

- 1532 (a) are an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 held under a tenancy in relation to which that Act applies<sup>12</sup>;
- 1533 (b) are a holding, other than a holding excepted from this provision<sup>13</sup>, held under a farm business tenancy<sup>14</sup>; or
- 1534 (c) consist of or comprise premises, other than premises excepted from this provision<sup>15</sup>, which, by virtue of a premises licence under the Licensing Act 2003, may be used for the supply of alcohol<sup>16</sup> for consumption on the premises<sup>17</sup>.

The protection applies where there is an interest belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Crown or of a government department, or held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department, in like manner as where no such interest subsists<sup>18</sup>; but, where an interest in any land belongs to a government department or is held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department, and the Minister or board<sup>19</sup> in charge of any government department is satisfied that for reasons of national security it is necessary that the use or occupation of the land should be discontinued or changed, the Minister or board may certify accordingly, in which case no order for the grant of a new tenancy comprising that land or any part of it may be made<sup>20</sup>.

1     le the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 Pt III (ss 26-40) (as amended): see the text and notes 2-20 infra; and PARA 781 et seq post. The provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Pt I (ss 1-17) (as amended) (see PARA 788 et seq post) do not apply in relation to tenancies granted under the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 Pt III (ss 26-40) (as amended): s 33(1), (2). Nothing in Pt III (as amended) affects the time at which a tenancy is to be treated as terminating for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Pt I (as amended); and a tenant who by virtue of the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 Pt III (as amended) remains in occupation of any premises or part of premises after the expiring tenancy would otherwise have come to an end is to be treated for those purposes as having quitted his holding on the termination of that tenancy: s 33(3). Sections 27-36 (as amended) apply to England and Wales only: s 26.

2     For these purposes, 'relevant service' means the discharge, after 15 July 1950, of naval, military or air force duties of a description specified in ibid s 64(1), Sch 1 (as amended) (see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 79), including training for the discharge of such duties: s 64(1). Any service rendered by virtue of the Reserve Forces Act 1980 ss 14(1), 34 (repealed) was relevant service for these purposes: see s 146(1) (repealed).

3     For these purposes, 'short period of training' means a period of relevant service of a description specified in the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 Sch 1 para 7 (see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 79) performed under an obligation or voluntary arrangements under which its continuous duration is limited to less than three months: s 64(1) (definition amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1977).

4     For these purposes, 'serviceman' means a man or woman who performs a period of relevant service: Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 64(1).

5     For these purposes, a serviceman is deemed to have been at any time the working proprietor of a business or professional practice carried on as mentioned in ibid s 27(1)(a) (see head (1) in the text) if, and only if, he was the proprietor of the business or practice during the whole of the period of one year immediately preceding that time, and during more than one-half of that period either (1) he worked whole-time in the actual management or conduct of that business or practice; or (2) he worked whole-time in the actual management or conduct of a business or professional practice of which that business or practice was a branch, and was mainly engaged in the management or conduct of that branch: s 27(2). 'Proprietor' means: (a) in the case of a business or practice carried on by a partnership firm, a partner in the firm on terms and conditions entitling him to not less than one-half of such profits of the firm as are from time to time distributable among the partners in it; (b) in the case of a business or practice carried on by a company, a person holding shares (including stock) in the company amounting in nominal value to not less than one-half of the issued share capital of the company: s 27(3), (5)(a), (c). In relation to a business or practice carried on by a partnership firm or by a company, references in these provisions to the proprietor of the business or practice include references to a person being one of two such partners in the firm, or, as the case may be, being one of two persons each holding such shares in the company, and references to the working proprietor of the business or practice are to be construed accordingly: s 27(3). Shares held by a person's spouse or civil partner or held by him jointly with his spouse or civil partner are treated as shares held by that person: s 27(5) (amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 257, Sch 26 para 23). 'Company' has the same meaning as in the Companies Act 1985 (see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 1): Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(5)(b); Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(6).

6 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means a tenancy created either immediately or derivatively out of the freehold, whether by a lease or underlease, by an agreement for a lease or underlease or by a tenancy agreement, but does not include any relationship between a mortgagor and a mortgagee as such, and 'tenant' is to be construed accordingly: Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 36(1). References to the premises comprised in a tenancy are references to the aggregate of the land comprised in the tenancy: s 36(2). 'Mortgage' includes any charge, and 'mortgagor' and 'mortgagee' are to be construed accordingly: s 36(1).

7 Ibid s 27(1)(a). In relation to a business or practice carried on by a partnership firm or by a company, references to a tenancy vested in the serviceman include references to a tenancy vested in one or more partners of the firm, or vested in the company, as the case may be; and for these purposes a tenancy is treated as having been vested at any time in a person if it was then vested in trustees, or held as part of the estate of a deceased person, and the first-mentioned person then had a right or permission to occupy the premises comprised in the tenancy, or the part of those premises in which the business or practice was being carried on, being a right or permission arising by reason of a beneficial interest, whether direct or derivative, under the trusts or, as the case may be, in the estate of the deceased person or under trusts of which the deceased person was trustee: s 27(4).

8 For these purposes, 'notice to quit' includes a notice to determine a term of years certain, but does not include a notice requiring possession where the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 s 121 (as amended) applies (see COMPULSORY ACQUISITION OF LAND vol 18 (2009) PARA 699): Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 36(1).

9 Ibid s 27(1)(b). For these purposes, 'the landlord', in relation to a tenancy, means the person for the time being entitled to the reversion and, where the reversion is subject to a mortgage and the mortgagee is in possession or he or a receiver appointed by him or by the court is in receipt of the rents and profits, includes that mortgagee and any such receiver as aforesaid; and 'the reversion', in relation to a tenancy, means the interest which, not being a mortgage term and apart from any such term, is for the time being in reversion immediately expectant upon the termination of the tenancy: s 36(1).

10 Ie under ibid Pt III (as amended): see PARA 781 et seq post.

11 Ibid s 27(1)(c). It follows that in all such cases the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) will also apply.

12 Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(1) proviso (a) (s 27(1) proviso (a)-(c) substituted by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 9(2)). As to such agricultural holdings see PARA 806 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 323.

13 The reference in head (b) in the text to a holding excepted from the provision is a reference to a holding held under a farm business tenancy in which there is comprised a dwelling house occupied by the person responsible for the control (whether as tenant or servant or agent of the tenant) of the management of the holding: Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(5A) (added by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 Schedule para 9(4)). For these purposes, the expressions 'farm business tenancy' and 'holding', in relation to such a tenancy, have the same meaning as in the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 302): Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(5)(bb) (added by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 40, Schedule para 9(3)).

14 Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(1) proviso (b) (as substituted: see note 12 supra).

15 The reference in head (c) in the text to premises excepted from the provision is a reference to premises in respect of which: (1) the excise licence for the time being in force is a licence the duty for which is the reduced duty payable under the Finance (1909-10) Act 1910 s 45; or (2) the Commissioners of Customs and Excise certify that no application for payment of such reduced duty has been made but that if it had such a licence could have been granted: Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(6) (amended by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 Schedule para 9(5)). However, as the relevant provisions of the Finance (1909-10) Act 1910 were repealed and replaced by the Customs and Excise Act 1952, and the replacing provisions were in turn repealed and excise licences for the sale of intoxicating liquor by retail abolished by the Finance Act 1967 (see s 5, Sch 16 Pt I), it would seem that the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(6) (as amended) has no present application so that all on-licence premises are excluded. The redundant words in s 27(1) proviso and s 27(6) survive, however, the repeal of other spent phraseology by the Statute Law Repeals Act 1989 s 1(1), Sch 1 Pt I. On-licence premises are no longer excluded from the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended): see PARA 775 ante.

16     le within the meaning of the Licensing Act 2003 s 14.

17     Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 27(1) proviso (c) (as substituted (see note 12 supra); amended by the Licensing Act 2003 s 198(1), Sch 6 paras 21, 24).

781. Application for grant of new tenancy.

An order for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>1</sup> may not be made except upon an application to the county court made by the tenant<sup>2</sup> under the expiring tenancy<sup>3</sup>; and any such application must<sup>4</sup> be made:

- 1535 (1) if the expiring tenancy would otherwise expire by effluxion of time, not later than one month before the date on which that tenancy would so expire;
- 1536 (2) if the expiring tenancy would otherwise come to an end by notice to quit<sup>5</sup> given by the landlord<sup>6</sup>, after the giving of the notice to quit and not later than one month before the notice is due to expire<sup>7</sup>.

Where the expiring tenancy would otherwise come to an end by effluxion of time, or by notice to quit given by the landlord so as to expire not less than four months after the giving of the notice, the landlord may at any time not earlier than the beginning of the serviceman's<sup>8</sup> period of service in question nor earlier than four months before the date on which that tenancy would so come to an end serve on the tenant notice in the prescribed form<sup>9</sup> requiring him within the period of one month from the date of the service of the notice to elect whether or not to make an application for the grant of a new tenancy<sup>10</sup>. Where such a notice is served, no such application may be made in relation to the expiring tenancy after the end of that period of one month<sup>10</sup>; but the court to which an application could be made within the time so limited<sup>11</sup> has power, on an application made in that behalf either before or after the expiration of that time, to extend the time limited for making the application if the court is satisfied that there are or were adequate reasons for not making that application within the time so limited and that in all the circumstances of the case it is reasonable to extend the time<sup>12</sup>.

Court's discretionary power to grant new tenancy.

783. Court's discretionary power to grant new tenancy.

On an application duly made<sup>1</sup> the court may, if in all the circumstances of the case it appears reasonable to do so, order that there shall be granted to the tenant<sup>2</sup> a tenancy<sup>3</sup> for such period, at such rent and on such terms and conditions as the court in all the circumstances thinks reasonable<sup>4</sup>. The parties are deemed thereafter to have entered into a lease of the premises or part of premises, as the case may be, creating such a tenancy<sup>5</sup>. In fixing the rent the court must disregard any consideration arising from the personal circumstances of any of the parties<sup>6</sup>.

Where the grant of a new tenancy has been so ordered, the statutory provisions for protection and for renewal of tenancies apply thereafter in relation to the new tenancy as if the required conditions<sup>7</sup> were fulfilled in relation to the new tenancy and the new tenancy were the expiring tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

784. Grounds for refusal.

The court<sup>1</sup> must not order the grant of a new tenancy<sup>2</sup> if it is satisfied:

- 1537 (1) that the tenant<sup>3</sup> has broken any of the terms or conditions of the expiring tenancy<sup>4</sup>, and that in view of the nature and circumstances of the breach a new tenancy ought not to be granted<sup>5</sup>; or
- 1538 (2) that the landlord<sup>6</sup> has offered to afford to the tenant, on terms and conditions which in the opinion of the court are reasonable, alternative accommodation which in the opinion of the court is suitable for the business or professional practice carried on under the expiring tenancy<sup>7</sup>; or
- 1539 (3) that the landlord reasonably requires possession in order that the premises<sup>8</sup> or a substantial part of those premises may be demolished or reconstructed<sup>9</sup>; or
- 1540 (4) where there subsists in the premises an interest belonging to a public authority<sup>10</sup>, that in the public interest a new tenancy ought not to be granted<sup>11</sup>; or
- 1541 (5) that, having regard to all the circumstances, greater hardship would be caused by ordering the grant of a new tenancy than by refusing to do so<sup>12</sup>.

1 The question whether a new tenancy should be granted is primarily a matter for the judge and the Court of Appeal will be slow to intervene unless he has misdirected himself: Morrison's Associated Companies v Manfield & Sons (1952) 159 Estates Gazette 342, CA; JW Smart (Modern Shoe Repairs) Ltd v Hinckley and Leicestershire Building Society [1952] 2 All ER 846, CA; Dew v Bentley (1953) 161 Estates Gazette 320, CA. In deciding whether it is reasonable to grant a new tenancy, the judge must take into account all the relevant circumstances as they exist at the date of the hearing and exercise his powers in a broad commonsense way as a man of the world: John Kay Ltd v Kay [1952] 2 QB 258, [1952] 1 All ER 813, CA. The failure of a tenant to exercise an option to renew his lease did not debar him from applying for a new tenancy: see Valentine Productions (Fareham) Ltd v Southampton Properties Securities Ltd (1951) 101 L Jo 724. All these cases were decisions under the Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951 s 12(3) (repealed).

10 The reference to an interest belonging to a public authority is a reference to an interest belonging to a government department or held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department, or held by a local authority (as defined in the Town and Country Planning Act 1990: see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(1) (Reissue) PARA 3 note 3), by statutory undertakers (as so defined: see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(3) (Reissue) PARA 1009) or by a development corporation (as defined in the New Towns Act 1981: see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(3) (Reissue) PARA 1322 et seq): Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 30(4); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a); Planning (Consequential Provisions) Act 1990 s 2(4). The following are also deemed to be statutory undertakers for these purposes: (1) a gas transporter (see the Gas Act 1995 s 16(1), Sch 4 para 2(1)(vi)); (2) the Environment Agency, every water undertaker and every sewerage undertaker (see the Water Act 1989 s 190(1), Sch 25 para 1(1), (2)(v) (amended by the Environment Act 1995 (Consequential Amendments) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/593, reg 3, Sch 2, PARA 4)); (3) the holder of a licence under the Electricity Act 1989 s 6 (as substituted and amended) (see s 112(1), Sch 16 para 1(1)(viii)); and (4) a licence holder under the Transport Act 2000 Pt I Ch I (ss 1-40) (as amended) (air traffic services) (see s 37, Sch 5 para 1(1), (2)(d)).

11 Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 30(4)(d).

12 Ibid s 30(4)(e). The mere fact that a landlord could, if the court did not order a new lease, let the premises to a third person at a higher rent does not by itself amount to greater hardship: John Kay Ltd v Kay [1952] 2 QB 258, [1952] 1 All ER 813, CA. The statutory provision is primarily directed to the kind of case where the landlord has in mind some project with respect to the premises or requires them for some purpose or scheme of disposal for which vacant possession is essential: see John Kay Ltd v Kay supra at 274 and at 820 per Jenkins LJ (decided under the Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951 s 12 (repealed)).

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(i) Scope of Protection; Continuation and Termination of Tenancies/H. SPECIAL CASES/(G) Protection of Service Personnel/785. Terms of a new tenancy.

785. Terms of a new tenancy.

Any new tenancy<sup>1</sup> granted to a serviceman<sup>2</sup> must in general be a tenancy of the whole of the premises comprised in the expiring tenancy<sup>3</sup>. If, however, at the time of the application for a new tenancy the business or practice is being carried on in a separate part of those premises, whether that part is used exclusively for the purposes of the business or practice or not, any new tenancy so granted must be a tenancy of the whole of the premises comprised in the expiring tenancy, if the landlord<sup>4</sup> so requires, but otherwise must be a tenancy of that separate part<sup>5</sup>. Where in such a case the landlord does not require the new tenancy to be a tenancy of the whole of the premises comprised in the existing tenancy and those premises include such a separate part and also another separate part consisting of living accommodation occupied wholly or mainly by one or more dependants<sup>6</sup> of the serviceman or by a person who is employed for the purposes of the business or practice so carried on, and an application is made in that behalf, the new tenancy must include the residential part also<sup>7</sup>, unless the court in its discretion otherwise determines<sup>8</sup>.

The period, rent and terms and conditions of the tenancy must be such as the court considers reasonable; but, in fixing the rent, the court must disregard the personal circumstances of the parties<sup>9</sup>. Any period for which a tenancy is ordered to be granted<sup>10</sup> must begin with the end of the expiring tenancy, whether it ends in accordance with the terms thereof or after being continued<sup>11</sup> by statute<sup>12</sup>. In ordering the grant of a new tenancy the court must so limit the period of the tenancy, or must order the grant subject to such terms and conditions, as in the opinion of the court may be most suitable for securing that the tenancy does not extend beyond, or may be terminated by the landlord not later than, the expiration of four months from the end of the period of service in consequence of which the application was made<sup>13</sup>.

5 Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 28(2).

6 For these purposes, 'dependant' has the meaning assigned to it by ibid s 23(1) (as amended) (see PARA 1074 note 2 post) and thus means the serviceman's spouse or civil partner and any other member of his family who was wholly or mainly maintained by him immediately before the beginning of the period of service in question: s 28(4). The test whether living accommodation is occupied wholly or mainly by a dependant is to determine for what purpose the accommodation is being used and not how much of the accommodation is occupied: see Berthelemey v Neale [1952] 1 All ER 437 at 438, CA (decided under the Leasehold Property (Temporary Provisions) Act 1951 s 10 (repealed)).

7 Ie the new tenancy must be a tenancy of the separate part in which the business or practice is carried on and also of the separate part consisting of the living accommodation.

8 Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 28(2) proviso. Any question arising under s 28(2) whether a part of the premises is to be treated as a separate part for the purposes of the grant of a new tenancy must be determined by the court on the hearing of the application: s 28(3).

11 Ie by ibid s 29(4): see PARA 782 ante.

12 Ibid s 30(2).

Nothing in s 30(3) is to be construed as restricting the discretion of the court in a case where the court thinks it reasonable that the tenancy should come to an end, or be capable of being terminated by the landlord, at any earlier time: s 30(3) proviso. A tenancy ordered to be granted under s 30 is deemed to be a tenancy created by a lease authorised by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 99 (as amended) (see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 346 et seq) where the reversion is subject to a mortgage: Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 s 30(6). ## 786. Provisions as to reversions.

Where in the case of a tenancy<sup>1</sup> the reversion<sup>2</sup> is itself a tenancy, and the period for which the court proposes<sup>3</sup> to order the grant of a new tenancy will extend beyond the date on which the reversion will come to an end, the power of the court<sup>4</sup> includes power to order such a grant until the end of the reversion and also to order the grant of such a reversionary tenancy or reversionary tenancies as may be required to secure that the combined effect of those grants will be equivalent to the grant of a tenancy for that period<sup>5</sup>.

Where a tenancy ('the inferior tenancy') is continued or granted<sup>6</sup> for a period such as to extend to or beyond the end of the term of a superior tenancy, the superior tenancy is deemed<sup>7</sup> so long as it subsists to be an interest in reversion expectant upon the termination of the inferior tenancy and, if there is no intermediate tenancy, to be the interest in reversion immediately expectant upon that termination<sup>8</sup>.

788. The legislation.

On the termination of a tenancy of business premises a tenant<sup>1</sup> may have a right, under the Landlord and Tenant Acts 1927 and 1954<sup>2</sup>, to compensation for improvements on the property demised made either by him or his predecessors in title<sup>3</sup>. This right is limited to holdings within the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927, that is to say most tenancies of business premises<sup>4</sup>. That Act also conferred a right of compensation for goodwill<sup>5</sup> and a right to a new lease of a tenancy of business premises<sup>6</sup>, but these rights have been superseded by the relevant provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>7</sup>. The 1927 Act applies to land belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Crown or the Duchy of Lancaster, to land belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall and to land belonging to any government department<sup>8</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 703 note 9 ante.

2 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 came into operation on 25 March 1928: s 26(2) (repealed). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 came into operation on 1 October 1954 (s 70(2)), and Pt III (ss 47-50) amends and supplements the 1927 Act in relation to improvements. Both Acts extend to England and Wales only: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 26(3); Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 70(3).

3 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 1(1). For these purposes, 'predecessor in title' means any person through whom the tenant or landlord has derived title, whether by assignment, by will, by intestacy or by operation of law: s 25(1). For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 486 note 3 ante.

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is deemed to be the landlord of land belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Duchy: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Sch 2 Pt I para 2(a). Such person as the Duke of Cornwall, or the possessor of the Duchy for the time being, appoints is deemed to be the landlord of land belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall: Sch 2 Pt I para 3(a). ## 789. Contracting out.

Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>1</sup> applies notwithstanding any contract to the contrary made after 8 February 1927<sup>2</sup>; but, if on the hearing of a claim or application it appears to the tribunal<sup>3</sup> that a contract made after that date and before 10 December 1953 was made, in so far as it deprives any person of a right under the Act, for adequate consideration, the tribunal must give effect to the contract in determining the matter<sup>4</sup>. The onus of proof of the adequacy of the consideration is on the landlord<sup>5</sup>.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/A. SCOPE OF THE LEGISLATION/790. Premises to which the right of compensation for improvements applies.

790. Premises to which the right of compensation for improvements applies.

Subject to certain exceptions<sup>1</sup>, the holdings to which Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>2</sup> applies are any premises held under a lease<sup>3</sup> and used wholly or partly for carrying on there any trade or business<sup>4</sup>. There is, however, no statutory definition of 'trade or business' for these purposes<sup>5</sup>. Premises regularly used for carrying on a profession are deemed, in relation to improvements, to be premises used for carrying on a trade or business<sup>6</sup>, but premises used for the carrying on there of any profession are not otherwise deemed for these purposes to be used for the purpose of carrying on a trade or business<sup>7</sup>.

Premises are not deemed for these purposes to be premises used for the carrying on there of a trade or business by reason that the tenant of them carries on the business of subletting those premises as residential flats, whether or not the provision of meals or any other service for the occupants of the flats is undertaken by him<sup>8</sup>.

1 See PARA 791 post.

2 le the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Pt I (ss 1-17) (as amended): see PARAS 788-789 ante, PARA 791 et seq post.

3 For these purposes, 'lease' means a lease, underlease or other tenancy, assignment operating as a lease or underlease, or an agreement for such lease, underlease, tenancy or assignment: ibid s 25(1). This definition is wide enough to cover a weekly tenancy: see Morris v Hillier (1949) 153 Estates Gazette 284.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 17(1). It is immaterial whether the lease was made before or after the commencement of the Act: s 17(1). The premises to which the Act applies are described in it as 'holdings': see s 17(1). 'The holding' is given a different meaning for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 706 note 23 ante.

5 The following definitions or instances from cases on other subjects may be helpful. A person carries on a trade or business when he 'habitually does and contracts to do a thing capable of producing profit' (Erichsen v Last (1881) 8 QBD 414, CA, per Cotton LJ), but it has been said that it is not necessary in order to constitute the carrying on of a trade that the persons engaged in it should make or desire to make a profit by it (Re Duty on Estate of Incorporated Council of Law Reporting for England and Wales (1888) 22 QBD 279, DC, per Lord Coleridge CJ). Almost anything which is an occupation, as distinguished from a pleasure, and which is an occupation or duty which requires attention is a business: Rolls v Miller (1884) 27 ChD 71 at 88, CA, per Lindley

LJ. 'Business' denotes the carrying on of a serious occupation, not necessarily confined to commercial or profit-making undertakings, and includes the administrative functions of Her Majesty's government: see Town Investments Ltd v Department of the Environment [1978] AC 359 at 402, [1977] 1 All ER 813 at 835, HL, per Lord Kilbrandon (where the decision that the carrying on of the administrative functions of government by servants of the Crown was the carrying on of 'business' or of 'a business' by the Crown has to be read in the light of the wording of the Counter-Inflation (Business Rents) Order 1972, SI 1972/1850, art 2(2) (revoked)). What a person does with his spare time in his home is most unlikely to qualify for the description of 'business' unless it has some direct commercial involvement in it, whether it be a hobby or a recreation or the performance of a social duty: Abernethie v AM and J Kleiman Ltd [1970] 1 QB 10, [1969] 2 All ER 790, CA, per Widgery LJ. See also Smith v Anderson (1880) 15 ChD 247, CA; and Brighton College v Marriott [1925] 1 KB 312, CA; affd [1926] AC 192, HL. In other contexts 'business' can attract quite different meanings: eg for the purposes of the Criminal Evidence Act 1965 (repealed) a national health service hospital was not a 'business': see R v Crayden [1978] 2 All ER 700, [1978] 1 WLR 604, CA (where Town Investments Ltd v Department of the Environment supra and Rolls v Miller supra were distinguished). The absence of a definition of 'business' in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 is to be contrasted with the expanded meaning given to that word for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) by s 23(2) (see PARA 707 ante), and it follows that it is possible for a tenancy to attract the security of tenure afforded to 'business tenants' by Pt II (as amended) and yet not to attract the benefits of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Pt I (as amended).

6 Ibid s 17(3) proviso. ## 791. Excluded premises.

Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>1</sup> does not apply to:

- 1542 (1) premises held under a mining lease<sup>2</sup>;
- 1543 (2) agricultural holdings within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 held under leases in relation to which that Act applies<sup>3</sup>;
- 1544 (3) holdings held under farm business tenancies within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995<sup>4</sup>;
- 1545 (4) any holding let to a tenant<sup>5</sup> as the holder of any office, appointment or employment from the landlord<sup>6</sup> and continuing so long as the tenant holds that post<sup>7</sup>, but, in the case of a tenancy created after 24 March 1928, only if the contract is in writing and expresses the purpose for which the tenancy is created<sup>8</sup>;
- 1546 (5) a tenancy granted under the statutory provisions protecting certain business tenancies held by servicemen<sup>9</sup>;
- 1547 (6) a Concession lease<sup>10</sup> granted by the Secretary of State under the Channel Tunnel Act 1987<sup>11</sup>;
- 1548 (7) a development agreement lease<sup>12</sup> granted by the Secretary of State in connection with the Channel Tunnel Rail Link or a lease granted by him which is one on the grant of which a development agreement, or an agreement connected with such an agreement<sup>13</sup>, is conditional, or which contains a statement to the effect that it is granted for purposes connected with the construction or operation of the rail link<sup>14</sup>.

Where a long mixed (that is, business and residential) tenancy to which the provisions of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 apply<sup>15</sup> is terminated on or after its contractual expiry date by an order made on the ground that the landlord intends to redevelop<sup>16</sup> or to reside in the premises<sup>17</sup>, the tenant is not entitled to compensation under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>18</sup> but is entitled to compensation under the 1967 Act<sup>19</sup>. Similarly, where a new lease or sublease is terminated under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993<sup>20</sup>, the tenant is entitled to compensation under the 1993 Act<sup>21</sup> and not under the 1927 Act<sup>22</sup>.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/A. SCOPE OF THE LEGISLATION/792. Improvements to which right to compensation applies.

792. Improvements to which right to compensation applies.

There is no statutory definition of 'improvement' in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>1</sup>, but it includes the erection of any building<sup>2</sup>. Demolition and rebuilding, not necessarily for the same purpose as the original, may be an improvement<sup>3</sup>.

In the case of premises used partly for the purposes of a trade or business and partly for other purposes, the statutory right to compensation<sup>4</sup> applies to improvements only if and so far as they are improvements in relation to the trade or business<sup>5</sup>.

A trade or other fixture which the tenant is by law entitled to remove does not constitute an improvement for the statutory purposes<sup>6</sup>.

1 Some guidance may be had from the cases concerning the withholding of consent to improvements under covenants against making improvements without consent where the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 19(2) applies: see PARA 470 ante.

For the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34 (as amended) (assessment of rent under new tenancy: see PARAS 753-755 ante), such fixtures and fittings are also to be disregarded since they either belong to the tenant or, if annexed, may be detached and removed by the tenant. BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/A. SCOPE OF THE LEGISLATION/793. Nature of the right to compensation.

793. Nature of the right to compensation.

A tenant<sup>1</sup> of a holding to which Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>2</sup> applies is entitled, if a claim for the purpose is made in the prescribed manner<sup>3</sup> and within the statutory time limit<sup>4</sup>, to be paid compensation by his landlord<sup>5</sup> at the termination of his tenancy in respect of any improvement<sup>6</sup> on his holding made on or after 25 March 1928<sup>7</sup> by the tenant or his predecessors in title<sup>8</sup> which adds at the termination of the tenancy to the letting value of the holding<sup>9</sup>. The landlord may give notice of objection to a proposed improvement, but, if he does so, the tenant may apply to the tribunal for a certificate that the improvement is proper<sup>10</sup>. If the tribunal so certifies, or if the landlord does not give notice of objection, then as against the landlord and any superior landlord the tenant may execute the improvement notwithstanding anything in the lease<sup>11</sup>. Compensation is not payable for any improvement made in pursuance of a statutory obligation unless it was begun on or after 1 October 1954<sup>12</sup>; nor for any improvement which the tenant or his predecessors in title were under an obligation to make in pursuance of a contract<sup>13</sup> entered into whether before or after 25 March 1928 for valuable consideration, including a building lease<sup>14</sup>.

7 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 2(1)(a).

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/A. SCOPE OF THE LEGISLATION/794. Mesne landlords.

794. Mesne landlords.

Where, in the case of any holding, there are several persons standing in the relation to each other of lessor and lessee, the following provisions apply<sup>1</sup>.

Any mesne landlord<sup>2</sup> who has paid or is liable to pay compensation<sup>3</sup> is entitled, at the end of his term, to compensation from his immediate landlord in the like manner and on the same conditions as if he himself had made the improvement<sup>4</sup> in question, except that it is sufficient if the claim for compensation is made at least two months before the expiration of his term<sup>5</sup>. The claim must be similar in form and contents to that made by a tenant<sup>6</sup>.

A mesne landlord is not, however, entitled to make such a claim unless he has, within the time and in the manner prescribed<sup>7</sup>, served on his immediate superior landlord copies of all documents relating to proposed improvements and claims which have been sent<sup>8</sup> to him<sup>9</sup>. A mesne landlord must immediately serve a copy of the claim on his immediate superior landlord; and if the person so served is not the freeholder, he must serve a copy of the document on his landlord and so on from landlord to landlord<sup>10</sup>.

Where copies of such documents are served upon any superior landlord, he, in addition to the mesne landlord, has the same statutory powers<sup>11</sup> as if he were the immediate landlord of the occupying tenant<sup>12</sup>. He may thus, in the manner and to the extent prescribed, appear before the tribunal<sup>13</sup> and will be bound by the proceedings<sup>14</sup>.

795. Notice of proposed improvement.

Where a tenant<sup>1</sup> of a holding<sup>2</sup> proposes to make an improvement on his holding, he must serve on his landlord<sup>3</sup> notice of his intention to make such improvement, together with a specification and plan showing the proposed improvement and the part of the existing premises affected by it<sup>4</sup>. There is no prescribed form for such a notice and a letter will suffice<sup>5</sup>. Where appropriate, he must wait until the landlord's time for objection has elapsed or his objection has been disposed of<sup>6</sup>.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/B. MAKING THE IMPROVEMENT/796. Landlord's objection.

796. Landlord's objection.

If the improvement consists of works which are carried out by the tenant<sup>1</sup> in pursuance of a statutory obligation, he may proceed with the work as soon as he has given the landlord notice of his intention to do so<sup>2</sup>. In all other cases, if the landlord<sup>3</sup> objects<sup>4</sup> to the proposed improvement, he must, within three months<sup>5</sup> after the service of the tenant's notice, serve on the tenant notice of his objection to it<sup>6</sup>. The tenant may then apply in the prescribed manner<sup>7</sup> to the tribunal<sup>8</sup>, which, after ascertaining that the notice of intention has been served upon any superior landlords interested and after giving them an opportunity of being heard, and if it is satisfied that the improvement:

1549 (1) is of such a nature as to be calculated to add to the letting value of the holding at the termination of the tenancy; and

1550 (2) is reasonable and suitable to its character<sup>9</sup>; and

1551 (3) will not diminish the value of any other property belonging to the same landlord or to any superior landlord from whom the immediate landlord of the tenant directly or indirectly holds, and after making such modifications, if any, in the specification or plan as the tribunal thinks fit, or imposing such other conditions as it may think reasonable, may certify in the prescribed manner<sup>10</sup> that the improvement is a proper one<sup>11</sup>.

If, however, the landlord proves that he has offered to execute the improvement himself in consideration of a reasonable increase of rent or of such increase of rent as the tribunal may determine, the tribunal may not give such a certificate unless it is subsequently shown to the satisfaction of the tribunal that the landlord has failed to carry out his undertaking<sup>12</sup>. The court has no power to give a retrospective certificate in relation to work already done by the tenant<sup>13</sup>.

Where no notice of objection by the landlord to a proposed improvement has been served within the time allowed, or where the tribunal has certified an improvement to be a proper improvement, it is lawful for the tenant, as against the immediate and any superior landlord, to execute the improvement according to the plan and specification served on the landlord, or according to such plan and specification as modified by the tribunal or by agreement between him and his landlord or the landlords affected, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any lease of the premises<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 703 note 9 ante.

2 This is so because the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3(1) does not have effect in relation to an improvement made in pursuance of a statutory obligation except so much of it as requires the tenant to serve on the landlord notice of his intention to make the improvement together with such a plan and specification as are mentioned therein, and copies of them at the request of any superior landlord, and enables the tenant to obtain at his expense a certificate from the landlord or the tribunal (see PARA 798 post) that the improvement has been duly executed: Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 48(1). As to what constitutes an improvement see PARA 792 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 486 note 3 ante.

4 As to the position where the landlord unreasonably refuses consent required under a covenant cf para 471 ante.

5 Where an informal notice from the tenant is incomplete, time will run only from the date the relevant particulars necessary to complete the document as a notice of intention are delivered: Deerfield Travel Services v Wardens and Society of the Mystery or Art of the Leathersellers of the City of London (1982) 46 P & CR 132, CA.

6 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3(1). As to the service of notices see PARA 703 ante.

7 For the meaning of 'prescribed' see PARA 794 note 7 ante.

8 For the meaning of 'the tribunal' see PARA 789 note 3 ante.

9 In considering whether an improvement is reasonable and suitable to the character of the holding, the tribunal must have regard to the evidence brought before it by the landlord or any superior landlord (but not by any other person) that the improvement is calculated to injure the amenity or convenience of the neighbourhood: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3(2).

10 The certificate is embodied in a court order: see Practice Direction--Landlord and Tenant Claims and Miscellaneous Provisions about Land PD 56 para 5.7.

11 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3(1). The tribunal may defer making any order as to the costs of proceedings before it until after the expiration of the time fixed for the completion of the improvement: see s 3(5).

12 Ibid s 3(1) proviso. The landlord or any person authorised by him may at all reasonable times enter on the holding or any part of it to execute any improvement he has undertaken to execute and to make any inspection of the premises which may reasonably be required for the purposes of Pt I (ss 1-17) (as amended): s 10. The tenant is, however, permitted to change his mind and withdraw his notice under s 3(1), in which case s 3(1) proviso does not entitle the landlord to proceed to execute the improvement; the ordinary meaning of that proviso is merely to preclude the court being able to give a certificate, thereby precluding authorisation for the tenant to carry out the work under s 3(4): see Norfolk Capital Group Ltd v Cadogan Estates Ltd [2004] EWHC 384 (Ch), [2004] 3 All ER 889, [2004] 1 WLR 1458.

14 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3(4). This does not, however, authorise a tenant to execute any improvement in contravention of any restriction created or imposed for naval, military or air force purposes or for civil aviation purposes under the powers of the Civil Aviation Act 1982, or for securing any rights of the public over the foreshore or the bed of the sea: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 3(4) proviso; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a).

A tenant<sup>1</sup> is not entitled to claim compensation<sup>2</sup> in respect of any improvement<sup>3</sup> unless:

- 1552 (1) he has, or his predecessors in title<sup>4</sup> have, served notice of the proposal to make the improvement<sup>5</sup> and, in case the landlord<sup>6</sup> has served notice of objection to it, the improvement has been certified by the tribunal<sup>7</sup> to be a proper improvement and the tenant has complied with the conditions, if any, imposed by the tribunal<sup>8</sup>;
- 1553 (2) the improvement is completed within such time after the service on the landlord of the notice of the proposed improvement as may be agreed between the tenant and the landlord or may be fixed by the tribunal<sup>9</sup>.

The tenant must make his claim in the prescribed form and within the prescribed time limit when his tenancy determines<sup>10</sup>.

Where the tenant<sup>1</sup> has executed an improvement<sup>2</sup> of which he has duly served notice<sup>3</sup> and with respect to which either no notice of objection has been served by the landlord<sup>4</sup> or a certificate that it is a proper improvement has been obtained from the tribunal<sup>5</sup>, the tenant may require the landlord to furnish to him a certificate that the improvement has been duly executed<sup>6</sup>. Where the landlord furnishes such a certificate, the tenant is liable to pay any reasonable expenses incurred for the purpose by the landlord; and, if any question arises as to the reasonableness of such expenses, it must be determined by the tribunal<sup>7</sup>.

If the landlord refuses or fails to furnish the certificate within one month after the service of the request to do so, the tenant may apply to the tribunal, which, if satisfied that the improvement has been duly executed, must give a certificate to that effect<sup>8</sup>.

C. COMPENSATION

799. Claim for compensation.

To obtain compensation the tenant or the mesne landlord must make a claim in writing, signed by the claimant or his solicitor or agent, which includes details of:

- 1554 (1) the name and address of the claimant and of the landlord against whom the claim is made;

- 1555 (2) the property to which the claim relates;
- 1556 (3) the nature of the business carried on at the property;
- 1557 (4) a concise statement of the nature of the claim;
- 1558 (5) particulars of the improvement, including the date when it was completed and costs; and
- 1559 (6) the amount claimed<sup>1</sup>.

Where a tenancy is terminated by notice to quit<sup>2</sup>, whether given by the landlord<sup>3</sup> or by the tenant<sup>4</sup>, or by a notice given by any person under Part I<sup>5</sup> or Part II<sup>6</sup> of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, the time for making a claim for compensation at the termination of the tenancy<sup>7</sup> is a time falling within the period of three months beginning on the date on which the notice is given<sup>8</sup>. Where a tenancy comes to an end by effluxion of time, the claim must be made not earlier than six nor later than three months before the coming to an end of the tenancy<sup>9</sup>. Where it is terminated by forfeiture or re-entry, the claim must be made within the period of three months beginning with the effective date of the order of the court for the recovery of the land comprised in the tenancy<sup>10</sup> or, if the tenancy is terminated by re-entry without such an order, the period of three months beginning with the date of the re-entry<sup>11</sup>.

The practice direction prescribes the manner of making a claim pursuant to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 1(1) (as amended) (see PARA 793 ante) or s 8(1) (as amended) (see PARA 794 ante) while the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 47 (see the text and notes 2-11 infra) prescribes the time limits. 8 Ibid ss 47(1), 50. Where, however, the tenancy is terminated by a tenant's request for a new tenancy under s 26 (as amended) (see PARA 718 ante), the time is a time falling within the period of three months beginning on the date on which the landlord gives notice or, if he has not given such a notice, the latest date on which he could have given notice under s 26(6) or, as the case may be, s 57(4)(a) (see PARA 769 ante) or s 58(1) (b) (see PARA 770 ante): s 47(1) proviso.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/C. COMPENSATION/800. Amount of compensation.

800. Amount of compensation.

The sum to be paid as compensation for any improvement<sup>1</sup> must not exceed either the net addition to the value of the holding as a whole which may be determined to be the direct result of the improvement<sup>2</sup> or the reasonable cost of carrying out the improvement at the termination of the tenancy<sup>3</sup>. Such cost is, however, subject to a deduction of an amount equal to the cost, if any, of putting the works constituting the improvement into a reasonable state of repair, except so far as such cost is covered by the liability of the tenant<sup>4</sup> under any covenant or agreement as to the repair of the premises<sup>5</sup>.

In determining the amount of the net addition to the value of the holding, regard must be had to the purposes for which it is intended that the premises are to be used after the termination of the tenancy<sup>6</sup>. If it is shown that it is intended to demolish or to make structural alterations in the premises or any part of them, or to use the premises for a different purpose, regard must be had to the effect of such demolition, alteration or change of user on the additional value attributable to the improvement and to the length of time likely to elapse between the termination of the tenancy and the demolition, alteration or change of user<sup>6</sup>. If the tribunal<sup>7</sup> determines that, on account of the intention to demolish or alter or to change the user of the premises, no compensation or a reduced amount of compensation is to be paid, the tribunal may authorise the tenant to make a further application for compensation if effect is not given to the intention within such time as may be fixed by the tribunal<sup>8</sup>.

In determining the compensation for an improvement, the tribunal must also take into consideration, in reduction of the tenant's claim, any benefits which the tenant or his predecessors in title<sup>9</sup> may have received from the landlord<sup>10</sup> or his predecessors in title in consideration expressly or impliedly of the improvement<sup>11</sup>.

In the absence of agreement between the parties, all questions as to the right to, or amount of, compensation are to be determined by the tribunal<sup>12</sup>.

4 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 703 note 9 ante.

10 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 486 note 3 ante.

11 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 2(3). In cases where the amount payable by a landlord as compensation was determined by agreement or award and the landlord had before 22 December 1927 granted or agreed to grant a reversionary lease commencing on or after the termination of the then existing tenancy, provision has been made for the rent payable under the reversionary lease to be increased, on the direction of the tribunal, by an amount which, failing agreement, has been determined by the tribunal having regard to the addition to the letting value attributable to the improvement: see s 15(1). In order to obtain such an increase in rent the landlord must have served on the reversionary tenant copies of all documents relating to the improvement which were duly sent to him: see s 15(1) proviso. Under s 15(2) the reversionary tenant's right of objection to the improvement and of appearing before the tribunal were safeguarded, and it was laid down that, where the amount of compensation was determined by the tribunal, any question as to the increase of rent under the reversionary lease should, where practicable, be settled in the course of the same proceedings.

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/ (1) PROTECTION OF BUSINESS TENANCIES/(ii) Improvements/C. COMPENSATION/801. Payment of compensation.

801. Payment of compensation.

The landlord<sup>1</sup> is entitled to deduct any sum due to him from the tenant<sup>2</sup> under or in respect of the tenancy from any sum payable to the tenant by way of statutory compensation for improvements<sup>3</sup>. Similarly, a tenant is entitled to deduct any sum payable to him by way of such compensation from any money due from him to his landlord under or in respect of the tenancy<sup>4</sup>.

When a landlord has paid his tenant the amount due to him for compensation, or when, after giving notice<sup>5</sup>, he has expended the necessary amount to execute an improvement which he has undertaken to execute, he may obtain from the Secretary of State ('the Minister')<sup>6</sup> an order in favour of himself and the persons deriving title under him charging the holding or any part of it with repayment of the amount so paid or expended, with such interest and by such instalments, and with such directions for giving effect to the charge, as the Minister thinks fit<sup>7</sup>. The sum charged<sup>8</sup> is a charge on the holding for the landlord's interest in it and for interest in the reversion immediately expectant on the termination of the lease; but in no case where the landlord's interest is an interest in a leasehold may the charge extend beyond that leasehold interest<sup>9</sup>.

Where the landlord obtaining the charge is not an absolute owner of the holding for his own benefit, no instalment or interest may be made payable after the time when the improvement in respect of which compensation is paid will, in the Minister's opinion, have become exhausted<sup>10</sup>.

Notwithstanding anything in any deed, will or instrument to the contrary effect, where the estate or interest of a landlord is determinable or liable to forfeiture by reason of his creating or suffering any charge on it, that estate or interest is not determined or forfeited by reason of his obtaining such a charge on the holding<sup>11</sup>.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 12, Sch 1 para (1) (amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 45, Sch 7 Pt I; and see note 6 supra). Where such a charge may be made for compensation due under an award, the tribunal making the award must, at the request and cost of the person entitled to obtain the charge, certify the amount to be charged and the term for which the charge may properly be made, having regard to the time at which each improvement in respect of which compensation is given is to be deemed to be exhausted: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Sch 1 para (6) (as so amended). Such a charge may be registered under the Land Charges Act 1972 s 2(2)(a), Sch 2 para 1(c) (see LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 624) as a Class A land charge: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Sch 1 para (7); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a).

Any company incorporated under Act of Parliament and having power to advance money for land improvement may take an assignment of any such charge upon such terms as may be agreed between it and the person entitled to the charge, and may assign any charge so acquired: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 Sch 1 para (5).

8 The amount of the charge may include any proper costs, charges or expenses incurred by the landlord in opposing any proposal by the tenant to execute an improvement or in contesting a claim for compensation, and all costs properly incurred by the landlord in obtaining the charge with any interest and by such instalments as the Minister thinks fit: ibid Sch 1 para (1); and see note 6 supra.

Where lands are assigned or secured as the endowment of a see, the statutory powers of a landlord to charge land<sup>1</sup> may not be exercised by the bishop in respect of those lands except with the previous approval in writing of the Assets Committee of the Church Commissioners<sup>2</sup>.

The Church Commissioners<sup>3</sup> may, if they think fit, on behalf of an ecclesiastical corporation<sup>4</sup>, out of any money in their hands pay to the tenant<sup>5</sup> the amount of compensation due to him; and thereupon the commissioners, instead of the corporation, may obtain from the Secretary of State<sup>6</sup> a charge on the holding in respect thereof in favour of themselves<sup>7</sup>.

The statutory powers of a landlord in respect of charging land may not be exercised by trustees for ecclesiastical or charitable purposes<sup>8</sup> except with the approval in writing of the Charity Commissioners or the Secretary of State<sup>9</sup>, as the case may require<sup>10</sup>.

As to the official custodian for charities see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 297 et seq.

805. Jurisdiction and procedure.

The jurisdiction conferred on the tribunal<sup>1</sup> by Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>2</sup> is exercised by either the High Court or a county court<sup>3</sup>. The general procedure for starting a landlord and tenant claim has already been discussed<sup>4</sup>.

The following procedure applies where a claim is brought under Part I of the 1927 Act<sup>5</sup>. The claim form must include details of:

- 1563 (1) the nature of the claim or the matter to be determined;
- 1564 (2) the property to which the claim relates;
- 1565 (3) the nature of the business carried on at the property;
- 1566 (4) particulars of the lease or agreement for the tenancy including:
- 149
  - 185. (a) the names and addresses of the parties to the lease or agreement;
  - 186. (b) its duration;
  - 187. (c) the rent payable;
  - 188. (d) details of any assignment or other devolution of the lease or agreement;
- 150
  - 1567 (5) the date and mode of termination of the tenancy;
  - 1568 (6) if the claimant has left the property, the date on which he did so;
  - 1569 (7) particulars of the improvement or proposed improvement to which the claim relates; and
  - 1570 (8) if the claim is for payment of compensation, the amount claimed<sup>6</sup>.

The court will fix a date for a hearing when it issues the claim form<sup>7</sup>.

The claimant's immediate landlord must be a defendant to the claim<sup>8</sup>. The defendant must immediately serve a copy of the claim form and any document served with it and of his acknowledgment of service on his immediate landlord. If the person so served is not the freeholder, he must serve a copy of those documents on his landlord and so on from landlord to landlord<sup>9</sup>.

Evidence need not be filed<sup>10</sup> with the claim form or acknowledgment of service<sup>11</sup>.

(2) PROTECTION OF AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES

806. Protection of tenancies of agricultural holdings; in general.

The statutory protection of business tenancies<sup>1</sup> does not apply to a tenancy<sup>2</sup> of an agricultural holding which is a tenancy in relation to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies<sup>3</sup> or to certain related tenancies<sup>4</sup>. Nor does Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>5</sup> apply to agricultural holdings within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 held under leases in relation to which that 1986 Act applies<sup>6</sup>. Instead, such tenancies are governed by the provisions of the 1986 Act with respect to the following matters:

- 1571 (1) the continuation of such tenancies from year to year<sup>7</sup>;
- 1572 (2) the right to a written tenancy agreement and other provisions affecting the tenancy during its continuance<sup>8</sup>;
- 1573 (3) notices to quit<sup>9</sup>;
- 1574 (4) succession on the death or retirement of the tenant<sup>10</sup>; and
- 1575 (5) compensation on the termination of the tenancy<sup>11</sup>.

The 1986 Act also contains special provisions with regard to market gardens and smallholdings<sup>12</sup> and miscellaneous and supplemental provisions<sup>13</sup>.

The provisions of the 1986 Act are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>14</sup>. That Act does not, however, apply in relation to any tenancy beginning on or after 1 September 1995, subject to certain statutory exceptions<sup>15</sup>. The majority of agricultural tenancies entered into on or after that date are farm business tenancies which are governed by the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995<sup>16</sup>.

2 For the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 706 note 2 ante.

3 'Agricultural holding' means the aggregate of the land, whether agricultural land or not, comprised in a contract of tenancy which is a contract for an agricultural tenancy, not being a contract under which the land is let to the tenant during his continuance in any office, appointment or employment held under the landlord: Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 1(1). For these purposes, a contract of tenancy relating to any land is a contract for an agricultural tenancy if, having regard to (1) the terms of the tenancy; (2) the actual or contemplated use of the land at the time of the conclusion of the contract and subsequently; and (3) any other relevant circumstances, the whole of the land comprised in the contract, subject to such exceptions only as do not substantially affect the character of the tenancy, is let for use as agricultural land: s 1(2). A change in user of the land concerned subsequent to the conclusion of a contract of tenancy which involves any breach of the terms of the tenancy is to be disregarded for the purpose of determining whether a contract which was not originally a contract for an agricultural tenancy has subsequently become one unless it is effected with the landlord's permission, consent or acquiescence: s 1(3). 'Agricultural land' means (a) land used for agriculture which is so used for the purposes of a trade or business; and (b) any other land which, by virtue of a designation under the Agriculture Act 1947 s 109(1), is agricultural land within the meaning of that Act; and 'contract of tenancy' means a letting of land, or agreement for letting land, for a term of years or from year to year: Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 1(4), (5). For the purposes of the latter definition, a letting of land, or an agreement for letting land, which by virtue of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(6) (as amended) (see PARA 240 ante) takes effect as such a letting of land or agreement for letting land as is mentioned therein is to be deemed to be a letting of land or, as the case may be, an agreement for letting land, for a term of years: Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 1(5).

BUSINESS AND AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/(2) PROTECTION OF AGRICULTURAL TENANCIES/807. Protection of farm business tenancies; in general.

807. Protection of farm business tenancies; in general.

The statutory protection of business tenancies<sup>1</sup> does not apply to a farm business tenancy<sup>2</sup>. Nor does Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927<sup>3</sup> apply to holdings held under farm business tenancies<sup>4</sup>. Instead, such tenancies are governed by the provisions of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 with respect to the following matters:

- 1576 (1) compliance with notice conditions in cases of surrender and regrant<sup>5</sup>;
- 1577 (2) termination of the tenancy<sup>6</sup>;
- 1578 (3) the tenant's right to remove fixtures and buildings<sup>7</sup>;
- 1579 (4) rent review<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1580 (5) compensation on termination of the tenancy<sup>9</sup>.

The 1995 Act also contains miscellaneous and supplemental provisions<sup>10</sup>.

The provisions of the 1995 Act are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>11</sup>.

1 le the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq ante.

2 See ibid s 43(1)(aa) (as added); and PARA 708 ante at head (2) in the text. A tenancy is a 'farm business tenancy' for the purposes of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 if: (1) it meets the business conditions together with either the agriculture condition or the notice conditions; and (2) it is not a tenancy which, by virtue of s 2 (tenancies beginning before 1 September 1995 or to which, by reason of s 4 (special cases), the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 (see PARA 806 ante) applies), cannot be a farm business tenancy: Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 s 1(1). The business conditions are: (a) that all or part of the land comprised in the tenancy is farmed for the purposes of a trade or business; and (b) that, since the beginning of the tenancy, all or part of the land so comprised has been so farmed: s 1(2). The agriculture condition is that, having regard to (i) the terms of the tenancy; (ii) the use of the land comprised in the tenancy; (iii) the nature of any commercial activities carried on on that land; and (iv) any other relevant circumstances, the character of the tenancy is primarily or wholly agricultural: s 1(3). The notice conditions are: (A) that, on or before the relevant day, the landlord and the tenant each gave the other a written notice identifying (by name or otherwise) the land to be comprised in the tenancy or proposed tenancy, and containing a statement to the effect that the person giving the notice intends that the tenancy or proposed tenancy is to be, and remain, a farm business tenancy; and (B) that, at the beginning of the tenancy, having regard to the terms of the tenancy and any other relevant circumstances, the character of the tenancy was primarily or wholly agricultural; and for these purposes 'the relevant day' means whichever is the earlier of the following: (aa) the day on which the parties enter into any instrument creating the tenancy, other than an agreement to enter into a tenancy on a future date; or (bb) the beginning of the tenancy: s 1(4), (5). The written notice must not be included in any instrument creating the tenancy: s 1(6). If in any proceedings any question arises as to whether a tenancy was a farm business tenancy at any time, and it is proved that all or part of the land comprised in the tenancy was farmed for the purposes of a trade or business at that time, it is to be presumed, unless the contrary is proved, that all or part of the land so comprised has been so farmed since the beginning of the tenancy: s 1(7). Any use of land in breach of the terms of the tenancy, any commercial activities carried on in breach of those terms, and any cessation of such activities in breach of those terms, are to be disregarded in determining whether at any time the tenancy meets the business conditions or the agriculture condition, unless the landlord or his predecessor in title has consented to the breach or the landlord has acquiesced in the breach: s 1(8).

(1) INTRODUCTION

(i) Outline of Legislation

808. Purpose and scope of the Rent Acts.

The general purpose of the Rent Acts<sup>1</sup> was to mitigate hardship to tenants resulting from a scarcity of housing<sup>2</sup>. Parliament sought to do this firstly by preventing landlords from increasing the rent of premises within the Acts above a permitted maximum<sup>3</sup>, and secondly by conferring on tenants of such premises a status of irremovability by forbidding landlords to evict them without a court order and limiting the grounds on which such an order may be made<sup>4</sup>. In addition, to prevent the provisions as to rent restriction being circumvented and tenants from turning their statutory privileges into a financial profit, it was necessary to prohibit the receipt or requiring of premiums on the grant, continuance, renewal or assignment of protected tenancies or the transfer of statutory tenancies<sup>5</sup>. These three elements, rent restriction, security of tenure and prohibition of premiums, have been present in one form or another throughout the history of the Rent Acts. As the Rent Acts are phased out and replaced by the regime of assured shorthold and assured tenancies under the Housing Act 1988<sup>6</sup>, many of the features of Rent Act jurisprudence are losing their significance<sup>7</sup>.

1 Only since 1957 have the major statutes on this subject been entitled 'Rent Act', ie the Rent Acts of 1957, 1965, 1968, 1974 and 1977. The first 'Rent Act' was the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act 1915 which froze rents of certain unfurnished dwelling houses at August 1914 levels. That Act was variously elaborated and extended until in 1920 all such existing legislation was repealed and replaced by the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act 1920 which provided the basis of the rent legislation until its repeal by, and consolidation in, the Rent Act 1968. The Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act 1920 s 12(1)(g) introduced the concept of the statutory tenant by succession.

2 It is clear that the early Rent Acts had rent restriction for their primary purpose, security of tenure being conferred to prevent any such restriction being rendered nugatory: see Twomey v Cronin [1937] IR 324 at 329 per Gavan Duffy J. It has since been said, however, that the fundamental object of the Acts is 'protecting a tenant from being turned out of his home': Curl v Angelo [1948] 2 All ER 189 at 192, CA, per Lord Greene MR. Between 1923 and 1938 there was a process of gradual decontrol (see eg the Rent and Mortgage Interest Restrictions (Amendment) Act 1933 (repealed)) which was halted on the outbreak of war in 1939 (see the Rent and Mortgage Interest Restrictions Act 1939 (repealed)). The Rent Act 1957 (repealed) was primarily a decontrolling measure. The Rent Act 1965 (repealed) created regulated tenancies: see further PARA 854 post. In 1968 almost all the Rent Acts then in force were repealed and consolidated in the Rent Act 1968 (itself now repealed and replaced by the Rent Act 1977). Although a consolidating measure, the Rent Act 1968 seems to have changed the law to some extent, in particular by affording statutory protection to the tenancy (s 1) and not to the dwelling house as had the Rent and Mortgage Interest Restrictions Acts 1920-1939. Decisions relating to subtenants under those earlier Acts (see eg Gidden v Mills [1925] 2 KB 713, DC) must, therefore, be applied with caution. Between 1968 and 1977 the most important developments were the conversion of controlled tenancies into regulated tenancies (see further PARA 848 et seq post) and the inclusion in protection of furnished tenancies (see the Rent Act 1974 s 1 (repealed)). In 1976 agricultural workers who were service licensees and thus excluded from the Rent Acts were given equivalent protection: see the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976; and PARA 1134 et seq post. With the exception of that Act, all existing provisions were repealed with effect from 29 August 1977 and consolidated into the Rent Act 1977, which incorporates a number of technical amendments suggested by the Law Commission: see the Report on the Consolidation of the Rent Acts (Law Com no 81). For general transitional provisions see PARA 814 post. Subsequent amendments to the Rent Act 1977 are noted in the following paragraphs.

3 For the current rent restriction provisions see PARA 891 et seq post.

4 For the current security of tenure provisions see PARA 942 et seq post.

5 For the current provisions relating to premiums see PARA 925 et seq post. As to the objects of premium prohibition see Woods v Wise [1955] 2 QB 29 at 51, [1955] 1 All ER 767 at 780, CA, per Birkett LJ; Farrell v Alexander [1977] AC 59 at 87, [1976] 2 All ER 721 at 738, HL, per Lord Simon of Glaisdale; and PARA 925 post.

6 See PARA 1011 et seq post. The Rent Act 1977 cannot in general apply to tenancies created after 15 January 1989: see the Housing Act 1988 s 34 (as amended); and PARA 1012 post.

7 Eg statutory tenancies are replaced by the new concept of statutory periodic tenancies. For the meaning of 'statutory periodic tenancy' see PARA 1067 note 8 post.

809. Legislation in force.

There are currently two principal and separate codes of protection<sup>1</sup> afforded to tenants of privately-owned dwelling houses. In general, the Rent Act 1977, which has been amended in many important respects by the Housing Act 1980 and the Housing Act 1988, applies to tenancies entered into before 15 January 1989 and the Housing Act 1988 applies to tenancies entered into on or after that date<sup>2</sup>. Provisions concerning unlawful eviction and harassment of residential occupiers and the duration and content of notices to quit dwelling houses are contained in the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 as subsequently amended<sup>3</sup>; these provisions are supplemented by the Housing Act 1996 which restricts a landlord's right to terminate a tenancy for failure to pay a service charge<sup>4</sup>. The Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 contains provisions relating to information to be given to tenants<sup>5</sup>, the provision of rent books<sup>6</sup>, implied repairing obligations in short leases<sup>7</sup> and service charges generally<sup>8</sup>. The Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 contains further provisions relating to information to be given to tenants<sup>9</sup> and provisions concerning the appointment of managers<sup>10</sup> and the variation of leases<sup>11</sup>. Of the legislation enacted before 1977 there remains in force the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 which extends protection to service personnel who are not regulars in certain cases where the Rent Act 1977 or the Housing Act 1988 would not normally apply<sup>12</sup> and the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 which embodies a separate code, closely related to the Rent Act 1977 and also being phased out (in favour of a regime of assured agricultural occupancies) under the Housing Act 1988<sup>13</sup>, giving security of tenure to agricultural workers in tied housing<sup>14</sup>.

1 The other than the legislation affecting long tenancies at low rents, namely the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt I (ss 1-22) (as amended) (see PARA 1196 et seq post), the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 186, Sch 10 (as amended) (see PARA 1237 et seq post), the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 (see PARA 1389 et seq post) and the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 (see PARA 1532 et seq post).

810. Terminology.

Unless the rateable value is too high<sup>1</sup> or the tenancy is outside the higher or lower rent limits<sup>2</sup> or falls within a number of further exceptions<sup>3</sup>, a tenancy of the whole or part of a privately-owned dwelling house which was entered into before 15 January 1989 is protected by the Rent Act 1977<sup>4</sup>. While the contract of tenancy still subsists, that is so long as it has not expired by effluxion of time or been determined by notice to quit, forfeiture, surrender or in some other way, a tenancy so protected is called a 'protected tenancy'<sup>5</sup>. After the termination of a protected tenancy, so long as the former tenant remains in occupation of the dwelling as his residence, the dwelling is said to be 'subject to a statutory tenancy'<sup>6</sup> and the former tenant is called the 'statutory tenant'<sup>7</sup> of it.

Until 28 November 1980, when all controlled tenancies were converted to regulated tenancies, both protected and statutory tenancies might be either 'controlled' or 'regulated' according to the date at which and the Act under which the benefit of the legislation first accrued to the premises or tenancy<sup>8</sup>. It must be stressed that the expressions 'controlled tenancy' and 'regulated tenancy' described the position both during and after the end of the contractual term created by the tenancy agreement or lease<sup>9</sup>. The distinction has now only a very limited relevance<sup>10</sup>.

Although, in general, a tenancy entered into on or after 15 January 1989<sup>11</sup> will be an assured tenancy under the Housing Act 1988<sup>12</sup> and cannot be a protected tenancy, any protected or statutory tenancy already in existence on that date continues to be a protected or statutory tenancy under the Rent Act 1977<sup>13</sup>.

811. Rent restriction.

Controlled and regulated tenants enjoyed substantially the same security of tenure, but the manner in which the rent recoverable from the two categories of tenant was limited was completely different. The rent recoverable from a controlled tenant was based on the 1956 gross value of the dwelling multiplied by the appropriate factor with additions being made in respect of rates, services and furniture<sup>1</sup>. The rent recoverable from a regulated tenant may not exceed the 'fair rent' for the premises if one has been determined and registered by a rent officer<sup>2</sup>.

TENANCIES UNDER THE RENT ACT 1977/(1) INTRODUCTION/(i) Outline of Legislation/812. Furnished tenancies under the Rent Act 1977.

812. Furnished tenancies under the Rent Act 1977.

Until 14 August 1974 the general provisions of the Rent Acts did not apply to a dwelling house bona fide let at a rent which included to a sufficient degree payments in respect of the use of furniture<sup>1</sup>. Tenancies of such premises are called 'furnished tenancies'<sup>2</sup>, but it must be appreciated that this term does not apply to all tenancies under which furniture is or was provided. Contracts for the letting or licensing of houses at rents which included payment for the use of furniture were brought within a separate system of rent control through rent tribunals in 1946, but the Rent Act 1974 made 'furnished tenancies' capable of being protected tenancies and this protection is continued under the Rent Act 1977<sup>3</sup>. The rent tribunal system<sup>4</sup> applies to a miscellaneous group of tenancies exempted from being protected, the most important of which are lettings entered into before 15 January 1989<sup>5</sup> by landlords resident in the same building as the tenant; these tenancies are called 'restricted contracts'<sup>6</sup>.

1 See eg the Rent Act 1968 s 2(1)(b) (repealed). For the history of the legislation relating to furnished lettings see PARA 985 post.

2 See the Rent Act 1977 s 152(1) (definitions of 'protected furnished tenancy', 'regulated furnished tenancy' and 'statutory furnished tenancy'). A furnished tenancy could not be 'controlled': see s 17(7)(c) (repealed); and PARA 849 note 12 post. See further PARA 870 et seq post.

813. Contracting out of the Rent Acts.

A tenant cannot contract out of his right under the Rent Acts, and therefore cannot bind himself to pay more than the proper rent<sup>1</sup>. Similarly, so long as a statutory tenant remains in occupation, he cannot by any contractual arrangement forfeit his rights to be protected; nor is it possible to incorporate into a tenancy a term which in effect provides a ground for possession if it is unconnected with the user of the premises<sup>2</sup>. Even if a tenant contracts to vacate the premises and later refuses to leave, the landlord cannot rely on the agreement but must show some ground on which an order for possession may be made under the Acts<sup>3</sup>. Even an admission by the tenant that the landlord is entitled to possession does not, where possession is being claimed on any of the discretionary grounds, absolve the court from its duty to consider whether it is reasonable to make an order<sup>4</sup>. Where, however, the landlord and the tenant agree that the tenant will vacate the premises at a future date and that the landlord will then pay the tenant for giving up possession, the tenant is entitled, if the landlord later repudiates the agreement, to enforce it, as the agreement is not void on the ground of public policy, or want of mutuality, or as an attempt to contract out of the Rent Acts<sup>5</sup>.

The parties cannot be prevented by any estoppel from relying on their rights under the Acts whether the estoppel results from agreement or conduct<sup>6</sup>, or, it seems, from a decision of the court<sup>7</sup>. Where, however, a landlord obtained a benefit in proceedings on the footing that a permitted increase of rent under the Acts was applicable, he was precluded from obtaining subsequently in the same proceedings relief on the basis that the tenant was not a statutory tenant<sup>8</sup>.

By agreement a statutory tenant can validly turn his statutory tenancy into a contractual tenancy<sup>9</sup> and a contractual tenancy may be surrendered in return for the grant of a licence<sup>10</sup>; but parties to an agreement cannot thereby bring unprotected premises within the protection of the Rent Acts<sup>11</sup>.

1 Schmit v Christy [1922] 2 KB 60, DC. There was, however, nothing to prevent the parties from so arranging their lease that it fell, from the outset, outside the scope of the Acts (Maclay v Dixon [1944] 1 All ER 22, CA); but the courts will look at the legal substance of the transaction and not at the form alone (Samrose Properties Ltd v Gibbard [1958] 1 All ER 502, [1958] 1 WLR 235, CA, where a lump sum payment was held to be commuted rent). The latter point is so in particular where the legislation refers to a bona fide letting: see Furnival Properties Ltd v Edwards [1950] WN 395, CA. Cf the principle that the description of a transaction does not conclude the question whether a premium is paid: see PARA 926 post. An arrangement purporting to create a non-exclusive licence will be scrutinised by the court to see if it reflects the true substance of the agreement: see the cases cited in PARA 7 et seq ante. As to what constitutes a 'sham' see Snook v London and West Riding Investments Ltd [1967] 2 QB 786 at 802, [1967] 1 All ER 518 at 528, CA, per Diplock LJ.

The contract to quit might be construed by the court as a notice to quit served by the tenant and thereby constitute a ground for an order for possession by the landlord: see the Rent Act 1977 s 98(1), Sch 15 Pt I, Case 5; and PARA 953 post.

TENANCIES UNDER THE RENT ACT 1977/(1) INTRODUCTION/(i) Outline of Legislation/814. General transitional provisions in the consolidating Acts.

814. General transitional provisions in the consolidating Acts.

Both the Rent Act 1968 (now repealed) and the Rent Act 1977 provide that, in so far as anything done, or having effect as if done, under an enactment repealed thereby could have been done under a corresponding provision of the consolidating Act, it is not to be invalidated by the repeal but is to have effect as if done under the consolidating Act<sup>1</sup>. This applies, in particular, to any regulation, order, scheme, agreement, dissent, election, application, reference, representation, appointment or apportionment made, notice served, certificate issued, statement supplied, undertaking or direction given or rent registered<sup>2</sup>.

Any document made, served or issued at any time containing a reference to a repealed enactment is to be construed<sup>3</sup> as referring to or including a reference to the corresponding provision of the Rent Act 1977<sup>4</sup>.

Where a period of time specified in a repealed enactment was current at the commencement of the consolidating Act, the consolidating Act has effect as if the corresponding provision of it had been in force when that period began to run<sup>5</sup>.

Nothing in the Rent Act 1977 affects the enactments repealed by it in their operation in relation to offences committed before its commencement<sup>6</sup>; and a conviction for an offence under a repealed enactment is treated for the purposes of the Rent Act 1977 as a conviction for an offence under the corresponding provisions of that Act<sup>7</sup>.

Any reference in any document or enactment to a dwelling house let on or subject to a protected or statutory tenancy or to which the Rent and Mortgage Interest Restrictions Acts 1920 to 1939 (or any of them) apply is to be construed<sup>8</sup> as a reference to a dwelling house let on or subject to a protected or statutory tenancy within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977<sup>9</sup>. Any reference in any document or enactment to a Part VI contract within the meaning of the Rent Act 1968 is to be construed<sup>10</sup> as a reference to a restricted contract<sup>11</sup>.

Persons who were statutory tenants by virtue of repealed enactments remained statutory tenants for the purposes of the consolidating Acts and retained their status (as original tenant or first or second successor) for the purposes of the provisions relating to statutory succession<sup>12</sup>.

There are special provisions for giving security to tenants whose unprotected tenancies ended before the commencement of legislation which would have protected them and who retained possession beyond those dates<sup>13</sup>.

TENANCIES UNDER THE RENT ACT 1977/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) Administration/815. Powers of the Secretary of State or the Assembly etc.

(ii) Administration

815. Powers of the Secretary of State or the Assembly etc.

The Secretary of State<sup>1</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>2</sup>, is empowered to make regulations or, as the case may be, orders:

- 1581 (1) prescribing the form of any notice or document to be given or used under the provisions concerning rent under regulated tenancies<sup>3</sup> and anything required or authorised to be prescribed under those provisions<sup>4</sup>;
- 1582 (2) prescribing the form of any notice, application, register or other document to be given, made or used under the provisions<sup>5</sup> concerning registration of rents under regulated tenancies<sup>6</sup>, prescribing anything required or authorised to be prescribed under those provisions<sup>7</sup>, and regulating the procedure to be followed by rent officers under the Rent Act 1977 and by rent assessment committees, whether under that Act or otherwise<sup>8</sup>;
- 1583 (3) specifying educational institutions for the purpose of the student letting exemption<sup>9</sup>;
- 1584 (4) prescribing the information to be contained in notices to quit<sup>10</sup>;
- 1585 (5) prescribing the contents of rent books<sup>11</sup>;
- 1586 (6) providing that no dwelling house exceeding a specified rateable value, or of any class or description, in an area in which he or the Assembly or minister is satisfied that there is no substantial excess of demand for such houses over supply, should be the subject of a regulated tenancy<sup>12</sup>; and
- 1587 (7) directing that specified provisions<sup>13</sup> shall apply to the Isles of Scilly with exceptions, adaptations or modifications<sup>14</sup>.

Regulations and orders made under the above powers must be made by statutory instrument which is, in most cases, subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament<sup>15</sup>.

The Secretary of State by statutory instrument might also make regulations generally for carrying into effect the provisions<sup>16</sup> relating to restricted contracts<sup>17</sup>. The transitional provisions of the Rent Act 1968 and the Rent Act 1977 retain in force regulations made under the enactments repealed by and consolidated in those Acts<sup>18</sup>.

The power to give financial assistance to persons providing general advice about landlord and tenant law, so far as relating to residential tenancies, has already been discussed<sup>19</sup>.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

8 Ibid s 74(1)(b) (amended by the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 187(1), (2), Sch 21 para 7, Sch 22). Regulations under the Rent Act 1977 s 74(1)(b) (as so amended) may contain provisions modifying the Rent Act 1977 s 67 (as amended) (see PARA 915 post) or s 72 (as substituted) (see PARA 923 post), or Sch 11 Pt I (paras 1-9 (as amended): see PARAS 917-918 post); but no regulations containing such provisions and made by the Secretary of State have effect unless approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 74(2) (amended by the Housing Act 1988 s 140(2), Sch 18).

In exercise of the power conferred by s 74 (as amended), and prior to the transfer of functions in relation to Wales, the Secretary of State made the following regulations:

151 (1) the Regulated Tenancies (Procedure) Regulations 1980, SI 1980/1696;

816. Powers of local authorities.

Certain local authorities<sup>1</sup> are empowered:

1588 (1) to publish information for the assistance of landlords<sup>2</sup> and tenants<sup>3</sup> and others as to their rights and duties under certain Acts<sup>4</sup> and as to the procedure for enforcing those rights or securing the performance of those duties<sup>5</sup>;

1589 (2) to publish information, for the assistance of owners and occupiers of dwelling houses and others, as to their rights and duties under the Rent

- (Agriculture) Act 1976<sup>6</sup> and as to the procedure for enforcing those rights or securing the performance of those duties<sup>7</sup>;
- 1590 (3) to make any such information available in any other way<sup>8</sup>; and
- 1591 (4) to furnish particulars as to the availability, extent and character of alternative accommodation<sup>9</sup>.

Proceedings for an offence under the Rent Act 1977 or the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 may be instituted by any local authority having the above powers<sup>10</sup>.

Local authorities<sup>11</sup> also have power to publish information regarding the provisions<sup>12</sup> relating to restricted contracts<sup>13</sup>.

The powers of local housing authorities under the Housing Act 2004 with regard to:

- 1592 (a) selective licensing of houses let by private sector landlords<sup>14</sup>; and
- 1593 (b) interim and final management orders in respect of houses so licensed<sup>15</sup>, are discussed elsewhere in this work<sup>16</sup>.

1 The local authorities so empowered are: (1) councils of districts, councils of counties in England in which there are no districts having district councils and councils of London boroughs; (2) councils of Welsh counties and county boroughs; (3) the Common Council of the City of London; and (4) the Council of the Isles of Scilly: Rent Act 1977 s 149(2) (amended by the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 s 22(2), Sch 8 para 3(5); and by the Local Government Changes (Rent Act) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2451, regs 2, 7). As to the counties and districts in England and their councils and the counties and county boroughs in Wales see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 24 et seq, 37 et seq; as to London boroughs and the Common Council of the City of London see LONDON GOVERNMENT 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 31 et seq; and as to the Isles of Scilly see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 36. As to the application of the Rent Act 1977 to the Isles of Scilly see PARA 815 note 13 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'landlord' includes any person from time to time deriving title under the original landlord and also includes, in relation to any dwelling house, any person other than the tenant who is, or but for ibid Pt VII (ss 98-107) (as amended), would be, entitled to possession of the dwelling house: s 152(1). For the meaning of 'tenant' see note 3 infra.

3 For these purposes, 'tenant' includes statutory tenant and also includes a subtenant and any person deriving title under the original tenant or subtenant: ibid s 152(1). For the meaning of 'statutory tenant' see PARA 831 post.

4 I.e. the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 4-7 (as amended) (see PARAS 253-255 ante) ss 18-30 (as amended) (see PARA 325 et seq ante); the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 (see PARAS 215, 653 ante); the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 810 et seq ante, PARA 817 et seq post); the Housing Act 1980 Pt II (ss 51-79) (as amended) (see PARA 1009 post); and the Housing Act 1988 Pt I Chs I-III (ss 1-26) (as amended) (see PARA 1011 et seq post).

As to the local authorities in question see note 1 supra; but note that the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 6 (as amended) does not reproduce the wording in note 1 head (1) supra, referring instead to 'councils of districts and London boroughs'. Offences under the Rent Act 1977 are punishable summarily: s 150(1).

11 For the purposes of ibid Pt V (ss 77-85) (as amended) (see PARA 989 et seq post), the local authority is (1) in a London borough or district, the council of the London borough or district in question or, where the district is in a county in England and does not have a district council, the council of the county in question; (2) in a Welsh county or county borough, the council of the county or county borough in question; and (3) in the City of London, the Common Council: s 83(1) (amended by the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994, s 22(2), Sch 8, PARA 3(3); and by the Local Government Changes (Rent Act) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2451, reg 5). 'Local authority' does not, however, include the Council of the Isles of Scilly: see the Rent Act 1977 ss 83(1), 153(1) (as amended); and PARA 815 note 13 ante.

817. Service of notices.

Any document authorised or required by the Rent Act 1977 to be served by the tenant<sup>1</sup> of a dwelling house on the landlord<sup>2</sup> is deemed to be duly served on him if it is served:

- 1594   (1)   on any agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or other similar document<sup>3</sup>; or
- 1595   (2)   on the person who receives the rent of the dwelling house<sup>4</sup>.

Where a dwelling house is subject to a regulated tenancy<sup>5</sup>, the above provisions apply also in relation to any document authorised or required by the Act to be served on the landlord by a person other than the tenant<sup>6</sup>.

If, for the purpose of any proceedings, whether civil or criminal, brought or intended to be brought under the Rent Act 1977, any person serves upon any such agent or other person as is referred to in head (1) or head (2) above a notice in writing requiring the agent or other person to disclose to him the landlord's full name and place of abode or place of business, that agent or other person must forthwith comply with the notice<sup>7</sup>. If any such agent or other person fails or refuses forthwith to comply with a notice so served on him, he is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, unless he shows to the satisfaction of the court that he did not know, and could not with reasonable diligence have ascertained, such of the facts required by the notice to be disclosed as were not disclosed by him<sup>8</sup>.

1    For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 816 note 3 ante. So far as the Rent Act 1977 s 151 (as amended) relates to Pt V (ss 77-85) (as amended) (see PARA 989 et seq post), Pt IX (ss 119-128) (as amended) (see PARA 925 et seq post), or ss 103-107 (as amended) (see PARA 1003 et seq post), references to a landlord and to a tenant are respectively to include references to a lessor and to a lessee as defined by s 85 (see PARAS 987 note 8, 986 note 7 respectively post): s 151(5).

A. PROTECTED TENANCIES

(A) IN GENERAL

818. Meaning of 'protected tenancy'.

A tenancy<sup>1</sup> entered into before 15 January 1989<sup>2</sup> under which a dwelling house, which may be a house or part of a house, is let as a separate dwelling<sup>3</sup> is, subject to the provisions of Part I of the Rent Act 1977<sup>4</sup>, a protected tenancy for the purposes of that Act<sup>5</sup>. A tenancy is not, however, a protected tenancy if:

1596 (1) the tenancy was entered into before 1 April 1990 and the rateable value of the house exceeds certain limits<sup>6</sup>; or

1597 (2) the tenancy was entered into on or after 1 April 1990 and the rent for the time being exceeds £25,000 a year<sup>7</sup>; or

1598 (3) the tenancy was entered into before 1 April 1990 and is one under which no rent is payable or, subject to a different rule in the case of tenancies which were controlled<sup>8</sup>, the rent is less than two-thirds of the rateable value of the house on the appropriate day<sup>9</sup>; or

1599 (4) the tenancy was entered into on or after 1 April 1990 and is one under which no rent is payable or the rent payable is £1,000 a year or less if the house is in Greater London or £250 a year or less if the house is elsewhere<sup>10</sup>; or

1600 (5) the tenancy is a qualifying shared ownership lease<sup>11</sup>; or

1601 (6) the house is let together with other land<sup>12</sup>; or

1602 (7) the house is bona fide let at a rent which includes payments in respect of board or attendance<sup>13</sup>; or

1603 (8) the tenancy is granted to a person pursuing or intending to pursue a course of study provided by a specified educational institution and is so granted by that or another specified institution<sup>14</sup>; or

1604 (9) the tenancy confers the right to occupy the house for a holiday<sup>15</sup>; or

- 1605 (10) the house is comprised in either an agricultural holding or the holding held under a farm business tenancy and is occupied by the persons responsible for the control of the farming or management of the holding<sup>16</sup>; or
- 1606 (11) the house consists of or comprises premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors for consumption on the premises<sup>17</sup>; or
- 1607 (12) the landlord's interest is vested in a resident landlord<sup>18</sup>, the Crown<sup>19</sup>, a local authority or development corporation<sup>20</sup>, a housing association which is a registered social landlord or a co-operative housing association<sup>21</sup>, a housing co-operative<sup>22</sup> or one of certain other bodies<sup>23</sup>; or
- 1608 (13) the tenancy is an old-style assured tenancy within the meaning of the Housing Act 1980<sup>24</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenancy' includes 'subtenancy': Rent Act 1977 s 152(1).

5 Ibid s 1. 'Protected tenancy' and 'protected tenant' are to be construed in accordance with s 1: s 152(1). A 'protected tenancy' is a regulated tenancy but only during its contractual, not its statutory, period. The expression was first introduced by the Rent Act 1968 (repealed) even though that Act was purely a consolidating Act. All Acts prior to the Rent Act 1965 (repealed) had their scope defined by reference to the house to which the Act applied rather than the tenancy: see eg the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act 1920 s 12(2) (repealed); cf the Rent Act 1965 s 1 and the Rent Act 1968 s 1 (both repealed). The Rent Act 1977 does not apply to a tenancy which has been extended under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 s 14 (as amended): see s 16(1A) (as added); and PARA 1483 post.

819. Dwelling house let as separate dwelling.

For a tenancy to be a protected tenancy<sup>1</sup>, it must normally have been entered into before 15 January 1989<sup>2</sup> and the premises let under the tenancy must satisfy the following basic requirements<sup>3</sup>:

- 1609 (1) they must be a dwelling house, which may be a house or part of a house<sup>4</sup>;
- 1610 (2) they must be let<sup>5</sup>;
- 1611 (3) they must be let as a dwelling<sup>6</sup>; and
- 1612 (4) the dwelling must be a separate dwelling<sup>7</sup>.

820. Meaning of 'let'.

The Rent Act 1977 protects tenants but not licensees or lodgers<sup>1</sup>. Subtenants are included by definition<sup>2</sup>. Tenancies at will at a rent<sup>3</sup> and tenancies arising by estoppel<sup>4</sup> are capable of being protected. The Act does not, however, protect employee licensees as opposed to employee tenants<sup>5</sup>, or a caretaker<sup>6</sup>, or a person allowed to remain temporarily on premises without any title<sup>7</sup>, or a mortgagor who attorns tenant to the mortgagee, at any rate after the contractual relationship created by the attornment clause has ceased<sup>8</sup>. It would seem that a tenancy at sufferance cannot in principle arise if the tenant is entitled to remain in possession as a statutory tenant<sup>9</sup>.

Where premises are let under a mutual misapprehension that they are not within the Rent Acts, or in reliance upon a fraudulent misrepresentation, the lease may be set aside and the court may make such order as is necessary to do justice between the parties<sup>10</sup>.

STATUTORY TENANCIES/(i) Definitions and Classes/A. PROTECTED TENANCIES/(B) Basic Requirements/821. Meaning of 'dwelling house'.

821. Meaning of 'dwelling house'.

'Dwelling house' means premises which are suitable for all the major activities of residential life, particularly sleeping, cooking and eating, and which are actually used for those purposes<sup>1</sup>. If the tenant carries on some of these activities elsewhere, the premises are not a dwelling house<sup>2</sup>. Premises used merely for the purpose of affording additional accommodation for guests of a hotel owned by the tenant do not constitute a dwelling house<sup>3</sup>.

It is expressly stated that a dwelling house may be part of a house<sup>4</sup>. A flat<sup>5</sup>, therefore, or a maisonette or a suite of rooms or a single room<sup>6</sup> in a house may constitute a dwelling house. Moreover, physically distinct entities such as rooms on different floors<sup>7</sup> or separate flats in a block, whether contiguous or not<sup>8</sup>, or a house and cottage<sup>9</sup> may also together constitute a dwelling house if they are let together on a single letting to one tenant for joint occupation as his home<sup>10</sup>. This is so even where there is no means of inter-communication between the two parts and even though the tenant has sublet one of them<sup>11</sup>. If the rateable value of the resulting dwelling house exceeds the limits for the statutory protection, the fact that it is made up of two units each of whose rateable value is within those limits will not bring the entire premises within protection<sup>12</sup>.

In deciding whether a structure is capable of being a house, regard must be had to the circumstances of the letting and the essential nature, degree of permanence and immobility of the structure. Each case turns on its own facts. Presumably a cave or other form of natural structure which is permanent in form might constitute a house if suitably adapted. Even though the original purpose of a structure was not that of a dwelling house, it may be that adaptation could bring it within the meaning of the expression. Thus a bathing-hut<sup>13</sup> or an immobilised caravan<sup>14</sup> or perhaps a watchman's shed or wheelless railway carriage may, by adaptation, become a dwelling house<sup>15</sup>.

Cooking facilities are not, however, necessary for premises to constitute a dwelling house: see Uratemp Ventures Ltd v Collins [2001] UKHL 43, [2002] 1 AC 301, [2002] 1 All ER 46 (a decision on the meaning of 'dwelling house' for the purposes of the Housing Act 1988 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 1018 post)).
